ANTI-WAR CRY MAYOR'S START IN SENATE RACE

That Failed and Now Thompson's Shout Is 'Persecution.'

First of a series of articles on Mayor Thompson's war record, set forth as of vital interest now to the voters who are to select a nominee for United States senator.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

"The mayor said this was an unholy war.

"Lundin declared the people did not want it and that congress had stultified itself to vote for the declaration of war.

"'And,' said Mr. Lundin, sagely, 'any man who was against war could be elected United States senator on that issue alone.'"—Excerpt from the diary of Jacob M. Loeb, former president of the school board, as read June 16, 1917, before a council investigating committee.

Mayor Thompson now poses as a poor, persecuted lamb. His views on the war have been distorted; he has been made the victim of a wicked world filled with mendacity. His senatorship campaigning has evolved into a renaissance of the tactics of the days of the old machine bosses. Our old acquaintance, the army game, has been restored to the status quo. All the ancient "props" of the soap box primary days have been dragged out of the museum and are again dangled before the public eye. It is a most interesting development.

Striving to Please.

Originally the Thompson campaign was mapped out on this theory:

"The war will prove unpopular."

The hypothesis proved wrong. So now they have switched to the good old standby of "persecution" and "misrepresentation." Unfortunately for Mr. Thompson, however, the city hall has slung too much printer's ink.

It will be the endeavor of this series of articles to indicate the mayor's anti-war attitude, as elucidated in his own official messages and proclamations and in the utterances of "The Republican," the mayor's megaphone and sounding board.

To get a real perspective on the Thompson campaign one needs must go back to the mayoralty fight of 1915. Fred Lundin was the Thompson manager; James A. Pugh ran the financial end; Eugene Pike and others ran, or fancied they ran, other departments, but the supreme boss of the camp in the old Union hotel in Randolph street was Lundin. He worked out the tactics and served as a board of strategy. His was always the final word.

Lundin Pulls the Strings.

When Thompson got his plurality of 147,477 he at once hailed Lundin as the wizard who had performed the feat. To celebrate the victory the inner circle went down the Illinois river on a boating trip. When they returned Lundin had intrenched himself even more firmly with the mayor.

He was established in "city hall No. 2," at the Hotel Sherman, with a card index to parcel out the patronage. His was the hand that rewarded the battlers; he was builder of the "city hall machine," the "O. K." man of the new régime.

Lundin's ascendency crowded lesser luminaries out of the firmament. "The poor Swede," as Lundin loves to call himself, becomes the real shadow of the mayor. Bill and Fred were inseparable. One was the mayor, but it was often hard to detect which one was the substance and which the shadow.

Where Was City Hall?

Thompson had his office at the city hall, which he sometimes visited, but the real mayor's office was at "city hall No. 2," at the Sherman, or at "city hall No. 3," at the La Salle. There Lundin held court as the superior intelligence. Here the leading cowpunchers foregathered to learn the law and the gospel from the conjurer, who, with no mustache to deceive nor sleeves to conceal, had plucked that four-seven, four-double-seven plurality out of the air.

It was Fred who pumped air into the boom for president on the trip to the coast in 1915, a boom that blew up like a bomb. It was Fred who sat in at Peoria when the city hall had three state committeemen and played the hand so adroitly that Thompson [illegible] as national committeeman from [illegible]. Nothing the hall has done in [illegible] during the present régime has

BARE GAY LIFE OF BRADWAY; HUNT HIS SLAYER

Father of Girl in Case Missing; Dancing Tales Told.

Police throughout the west last night continued the search for J. Norman Cook, wanted as the slayer of William E. Bradway, manufacturer and club member.

Cook seemed to have dropped from sight. Cook, according to Bradway's dying statements, stabbed him because of his attentions to Miss Norma Cook, 19 year old daughter of the fugitive.

Cook's wife, from whom he is separated, and his daughter were found in Columbus, Kas., where they recently have been living with Mrs. Cook's father, D. M. Bliss. With the opening of the hunt for Cook the police also turned the bright light upon the life of Bradway.

Dancing and Business Man.

He is shown to have been a serious minded business man by day who ventured often into the dance parlors by night. He is shown to have known of Cook's threats and to have voiced his fear of violence at his hands to friends.

It is known that a meeting planned, between Bradway and Miss Cook in June in Kansas City, was canceled because of these threats.

Young women who knew Bradway as a dancing man told frankly of his attentions last night. They insisted he was always sincere and gentlemanly and that his dancing was almost nightly, a part of his routine as much as his food and drink.

Run Down New Clews.

Chief of Detectives Mooney, Lieut. Hughes and Detective Sergeant John J. Russell last night turned their men loose on a number of new clews which, it was hoped, might lead to the arrest of Cook, himself a detective by profession and recently in the employ of the New York Central lines.

Men visited the home of W. R. Pottgeiser, a friend of Cook, to search certain effects he left there. Mrs. Pottgeiser runs a rooming house at 27 South Halsted street, and Cook had roomed there for a time.

Detectives were also stationed at a house on Fifty-third street where the Cooks formerly lived and where Cook has recently received mail. The Cook family furniture was recently placed in storage. The storage house was visited last night for clews.

The police also sent telegrams to Kansas City, Mo.; La Grange, Kas., his former home, and Columbus, Kas., where his wife and daughter now are, figuring that he might turn up at one of these places.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER

Down in Columbus, Kas., last night a heart broken wife and a sobbing daughter shut themselves indoors and refused to let the world in. The greatest trouble of years of trouble had come to them. They had received word that J. Norman Cook had killed William E. Bradway.

Cook had been husband and father, Bradway confidant and friend. Cook had been a serious, morose, stern man of heavy disposition. Bradway, man of society, light hearted, an easy spender, and a man of presence and manners, had been just his antithesis.

But before they locked themselves away from the world they told some-

HERE'S AUSTRIA'S ADVICE TO CHIEF HUN ON PEACE

Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable. [Copyright: 1918.]

PARIS, Aug. 31.—The Arbeiter Zeitung of Vienna is quoted here as giving the following peace advice to Germany on Aug. 27:

The reichstag should be convened immediately and a Socialist made minister of the empire. The Prussian landtag should be dissolved.

"The reichstag should declare in favor of revising the treaties of Brest-Litovsk and Bucharest and renounce all territorial annexation. Furthermore, the reichstag should declare for the restoration of Belgium and announce the readiness of Germany to enter a league of nations committed to disarmament on sea and land."

Must Make Concessions.

Zurich, Aug. 31.—"Germany's losses have been much more serious than those of England, who can rely on her colonial possessions," the Augsberger Zeitung declares.

"A renunciatory peace is better than prolongation of the war for a single year. Germany must make concessions if she wants the war to end before the whole of European culture is annihilated. Any hopes regarding the efficacy of submarine warfare are illusory."

Income Over $5,000,000 Must Pay 77 Per Cent Tax

Washington, D. C., Aug. 31.—Surtax rates on large incomes under the new $8,000,000,000 revenue bill became known today. They are: On incomes from $200,000 to $300,000, 52 per cent; $300,000 to $500,000, 54 per cent; $500,000 to $1,000,000, 58 per cent; $1,000,000 to $5,000,000, 60 per cent, and all incomes above $5,000,000, 65 per cent. These rates are in addition to the normal income tax rate of 12 per cent.

British Losses in August 48,379, Lowering Record

LONDON, Aug. 31.—British casualties reported during the month of August totaled 48,379. They were divided as follows:

	Officers.	Men.
Killed or died of wounds	1,041	7,564
Wounded or missing	3,294	36,480

The total casualties reported in July were 67,291 and in June 141,147.

Rodman Wanamaker Made New York Guard Colonel

New York, Aug. 31.—[Special.]—Rodman Wanamaker was made a colonel in the New York guard yesterday and appointed to the governor's staff. The honor was conferred in appreciation of Mr. Wanamaker's service as head of the police reserve and as a special deputy police commissioner, the governor's letter said.

Tuck All Motor Cars in Garages for Gasless Day

At 12:01 o'clock this morning practically every passenger automobile in Chicago was snugly tucked away in its garage. They are scheduled to remain there until midnight tonight.

The only exceptions were taxicabs and the cars of a few belated wayfarers who had failed to make the home port by the hour set by the fuel administration for the beginning of "gasless Sunday."

Taxicabs continued in operation until 2 o'clock this morning. At that hour they, too, were interned for the day. As a "self-inflicted penalty" for running two hours overtime, the taxicab companies announced that they will not resume business until 5 o'clock Monday morning, closing down for twenty-seven instead of twenty-four hours.

Relief for the Late Ones.

The decision of the taxicab companies to operate until 2 o'clock in the morning came in an eleventh hour announcement that brought gusty sighs of relief from confirmed loophounds and others who make merry under the lights until the small hours of Sunday. The dismal prospect of getting half way home in a taxicab and being ejected and forced to walk when the clock struck the mystic hour was dissipated by the companies' decision.

"We are permitted to engage in necessary business, according to a ruling from Washington," explained John Hertz, manager for the Shaw Taxicab company. "We do not intend to take advantage of that today, although I tonight received telegrams from companies in New York and Washington saying they intend to operate on a reduced basis, accepting no business by the hour."

Mr. Hertz spoke on behalf of the Shaw, Yellow and Black, and White taxicab companies. The managements of the Brown and Blue taxicab companies issued similar statements.

Motor Busses to Operate.

The Chicago Motor Bus company continues in operation. The management yesterday notified Fuel Administrator Durham that it wished to comply with the government's request, but feared to do so because of its franchise, which requires that it shall operate busses daily.

Mr. Durham made no ruling, but after the conference the company decided to operate. It was explained that had the matter been put by the government in the form of an order, the company could have stopped its busses with safety to its franchise, but as it was put in the form of a request, for the company to voluntarily cease operations might endanger its franchise rights.

Early today the fuel administration will send out investigators to learn whether or not the government's request is being adhered to.

Few Autos Will Be Seen.

Few automobiles of any description will be seen on the streets. Physicians are at liberty to use their cars on business and 150 of them yesterday applied to Nelson G. Phelps, head of the bureau of oil conservation for the state fuel administration, for "approval" cards.

These cards are issued simply to protect the holder against charges of being a slacker, for the fuel administration's gas saving plan is put in the form of a request and not an order, so no real exemption cards can be issued.

One hundred applications were made for "approval" cards by owners of cars engaged in war work. These cards were issued to manufacturing companies that have war orders and are working Sundays as well as week days to fill them, and also for cars that are engaged in the preparation of the war exposition at Grant park.

"Up to Your Conscience."

"The public is taknig it in a patriotic spirit," said Fuel Administrator Raymond E. Durham. "I have had about 1,000 calls from people who wished to know if they could use their cars in case of sickness, or to go to church. In each case they were told that it is up to their conscience—if some one is really sick it is all right to use their machines. As to church, if they just intend to go to church and have no other means of getting there that is all right, but it is not all right to go riding."

Hope for Family Surrey.

As to Dobbin and the one hoss shay, the old axiom of the sports writers seems to hold good—"they never come back." A poll of livery men last evening revealed that there had been but slight increases in the number of horse drawn equipages ordered for today. Most of the liverymen were marking time, however, and waiting for the dawn of Sunday with anxious anticipation, hoping that the public, deprived of its motors, would return to its first love, the family surrey.

Many owners of both automobiles and horse drawn equipages, however, were preparing to put the auto away for the day and were having the buggy shined up; so that it was predicted that there would be more horse drawn vehicles on Michigan avenue today than have been seen in years.

Child Pulls Over Kettle of Scalding Water; Dies

Robert Murdock, 2 years old, 412 South Halsted street, was fatally scalded yesterday in the kitchen of his parents' home when he pulled a small pot of boiling water from a gas plate.

YANKEES HELP FRENCH SMASH NEARER LAON

Enemy Beaten Back at Vital Points Along Line.

(By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.)

PARIS, Aug. 31.—The Franco-American forces drove forward to the north of Soissons today in the face of the hardest fighting which the Germans have put up in that region for days.

The Germans have been driven out of Juvigny and Crouy and the French forces now are on the western outskirts of Leury.

Flanking Chemin des Dames.

By this move the allies are flanking to the west the German positions along the Aisne and Vesle rivers and on the Chemin des Dames, and further advances there will force the enemy to give up that stronghold.

From the positions which now are held by the Americans the towers of Laon are visible. This great southern base of the Hindenburg line is one of the main objectives in the present drive, and possession of it would place the entire German line in great peril.

French Win Further North.

Further to the north the French have won in desperate fighting in the region of the Canal du Nord. Campagne, a mile to the east of Catigny, has been delivered from the invader by the French, and Chevilly again is in the hands of the allies.

The capture of the latter town was made only after a most desperate struggle. Twice it was won by the French and twice it was lost, but the ruins finally were held by Gen. Mangin's forces. Two hundred of the enemy were taken prisoner in the village.

Yanks Halt Big Attack.

BY FRED S. FERGUSON.
[UNITED PRESS STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, Aug. 31.—Leaping into the open and meeting the enemy more than half way, American troops repulsed a series of heavy counter attacks near Juvigny, north of Soissons, today.

The Boches were thrown into confusion and badly cut up. Their losses were extremely heavy.

The bombardment by German light guns has decreased considerably. This may indicate that the enemy is already withdrawing his artillery to a place of safety.

Take 200 as Captives.

About 200 prisoners were added to the Americans' haul in this area today.

Six Boche prisoners were killed and several wounded by their own artillery, a shell falling in the group at the entrance of a cave occupied by the Americans.

During the height of the battle each prisoner sent to the rear carried a wounded American on his back.

Sergt. Leschinsky of Michigan, heading a patrol of fourteen men, captured thirty-two Boches, in-

LATEST NEWS ON EUROPEAN WAR

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 31.—Serious mutiny has been incited in the German army and dissatisfaction has arisen among workmen of the Krupp munition factories, according to reports reaching here tonight.

When two regiments refused to go to the west front from the Russian front 130 of the number were shot. At Munich 600 life guards also refused to fight and locked themselves in barracks, where the authorities finally forced them to surrender.

Thirty thousand workers who revolted at the Krupp factories were placed under arms and sent to the front.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 31.—Thirty Belgians and Frenchmen, armed with revolvers, rifles, and stones, forced their way across the frontier of Belgium and Holland last night, killed a German sentry, and blew up a German guard house.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 31.—The Germans have been seized with a sort of peace mania, according to the frontier correspondent of the Telegraaf. The events in France have made such a profound impression that the Germans one meets along the frontier are indifferent to the prospect of the defeat of the central empires and only wish to get peace as quickly as possible.

MARINE AIRMAN WINS U. S. MEDAL, BRITISH CROSS

LONDON, Aug. 31.—First Lieut. Edmund G. Chamberlain of San Antonio, Tex., a graduate of Princeton and the University of Texas, and an aviator attached to the United States marine corps, has received simultaneous recommendations for the Victoria cross and the congressional medal of honor for an exploit in which he figured on July 28.

On that day, over the British front, Lieut. Chamberlain took part in an aerial battle with twelve German machines. He destroyed five of them, damaged two others, and, sweeping earthward with a damaged plane, scattered a detachment of German soldiers.

After he landed he bluffed three others into believing his compass was a bomb and captured one of them. He then carried a wounded French officer back to safety and finally refused to give his name to the British officer in command of aerial forces in that section of the front, because of his fear of being reprimanded.

[The remarkable exploits of Lieut. Chamberlain were described in a special cable dispatch to THE TRIBUNE from Frazier Hunt, which was printed in the issue of Aug. 21. Lieut. Chamberlain was visiting a British aviation unit. The "marine gadder" couldn't stand the strain of staying on the ground, and so borrowed a machine, in which he flew into the midst of adventures enough for a dozen airmen.]

Judge Owens in Hospital; Condition Said Not Serious

Former County Judge John E. Owens has been a patient at the Alexian Brothers' hospital, 1200 Belden avenue, for more than a week, it was learned last night. His illness is not serious, the hospital authorities said.

"CALL TO DUTY TO WHICH EVERY TRUE MAN WILL RESPOND"

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 31.—(Special.)—Here are some of the high spots in the president's "victory draft" proclamation:

We solemnly purpose a decisive victory and deliberately to devote a larger part of the military man power of the nation to the accomplishment of that purpose.

The younger men have furnished voluntary enlistments out of all proportions to their numbers.

The older men having made a place for themselves in their respective communities will know that the very records they have made render this new (draft) duty the commanding duty of their lives.

It is a call to duty to which every true man will respond with pride and with the consciousness that in so doing he plays his part in vindication of a great cause at whose summons every true heart offers its supreme service.

Details of the passage of the 18 to 45 draft law and of the president's proclamation naming Sept. 12 as registration day appear on page 7.

BRITISH WIN KEMMEL HILL, WIDE SALIENT

German Gives Area Which Cost Him Many Troops.

(By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.)

LONDON, Aug. 31.—The official reports sent by Gen. Haig from the British front tonight were the stories of a victory on the whole line.

The Lys salient, for which the enemy last spring paid thousands of lives, is again in the hands of the British.

This area includes the famous Mount Kemmel, the "key to Ypres."

Yields Without Blow.

The report from Gen. Haig says of this operation:

"Heavy demands on the enemy's reserves, due to his enormous casualties in killed and prisoners during the year, compelled the enemy to withdraw from the Lys salient and yield without a blow the positions of high tactical importance won at great cost.

"We regained possession of Kemmel hill, reaching a general line running from Voomezeele through Lindenhoek, Lecreche, Doulieu, and approaching Estairs. We are pressing the enemy closely. We have taken a number of prisoners."

Must Quit Peronne.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 31.—[By the Associated Press.]—With Mont St. Quentin in British possession, the Germans to the north and south for a considerable distance are placed in a precarious position. Peronne itself must be evacuated, and if this is not done quickly the enemy may lose many more men here.

Starting out from east of Clery about 5 o'clock in the morning, the Australians fought their way forward despite the heavy fire from the Boche machine guns and swarmed into Feuillaucourt. They captured 200 Germans.

Take Hill by Surprise.

About the same time another body of Australians "silently"—which means that they were unaided by artillery—attacked Mont St. Quentin. The Germans were taken completely by surprise, for they had no idea that the Australians would dare attempt such a feat. By 8 o'clock the Australians had fought their way to the top of the mount and soon after that signaled its capture.

Mont St. Quentin was alive with Germans, who came from everywhere and cried "Kamerad."

Those who did not were driven from their retreats or killed with grenades and bombs. Hundreds of prisoners were captured at this place.

Cannon Speed Up Retreat.

While the hill was being mopped up British guns, which had been moved up close to the river, cut loose and began pounding a torrent of steel back of Mont St. Quentin as a reminder to the Germans that they had better start moving quickly. The Australians must have worked with great swiftness to make so much progress in so short a time.

At various points between Kemmel and Bethune the Germans have been retiring and the British have gained back a considerable amount of ground.

Several counter attacks, delivered during the day east of Bapaume astride the road to Cambrai, literally withered away before the fire of the British machine guns. The road to Cambrai and the ground on either side for some distance was dotted with the bodies of Germans who dashed against the British in useless attempts to drive them from the positions they had captured.

Canadians Pierce Foe's Line.

About the same time the Germans were being beaten here the Canadians launched a fresh attack just south of the Arras-Cambrai road and drove into the enemy lines for some distance. Heavy fighting is reported to be still in progress between the Arras-Cambrai and the Bapaume-Cambrai roads.

British troops have come close up to the Drocourt-Queant line and are holding on while the Boche is trying desperately to dislodge them.

Counter attack after counter attack has been launched here and the battle has been raging constantly, first forward, then backward, neither side being given a chance by the other to get the slightest rest. The instant German counter attacks are beaten off the British reattack and gain a little more ground.

Enemy Losses Enormous.

If the British fall back slightly before powerful Boche strokes, as soon as they have quieted down a little the British attack again and hurl the Germans out, not only gaining ground but improving their positions.

The Germans have fought well in this locality, but have gained nothing and have suffered enormous casualties. It is noted that in the fighting here the enemy seems virtually to have abandoned the rifle as a weapon and is doing nearly all his fighting with light and heavy machine guns.

Further advances have been made during the day along the Bapaume-Peronne road.

Longatte and Ecoust, from which the British retired yesterday, were retaken and the number of prisoners increased.

Bullecourt is being mopped up. South of Bapaume the British have captured Rencourt-Les-Bapaume.

DRAW NEARER TO CAMBRAI

LONDON, Aug. 31.—Great possibilities are seen in the British advance in the Arras region, where they are pushing down the main road toward Cambrai, less than twelve miles east of their present lines.

The Wotan section of the Hindenburg line has been cut here on a front of twelve miles, almost to its junction with the Siegfried section of the line at Queant.

This operation is rapidly jeopardizing the whole Hindenburg line through exposing its northern flank.

May Rewin Vast Area.

Unless the Germans possess a secondary defense system of unusual strength in this immediate vicinity it is believed they will be compelled to relinquish a much larger area than they did in last year's retirement.

It is possible that the next German stopping place will be before Lille and Valenciennes, their line running from there to the Meuse.

Recent reports have described feverish work on the old Meuse fortifications, where thousands of war prisoners and Belgian captives are said to be employed.

TRIO OF SERVICE FLAGS FOR CITY BLOCKS RAISED

Three more "blocks" raised service flags for their fighting men last night.

There are thirty-nine stars in the flag that was raised near the home of Mrs. E. J. Rush, 4020 Arthington street, for the block in that street between Karlov and Crawford avenues. Among those who participated were Mrs. Laura Kerr and the Misses Katherine Riley, Irene Rush, and Katherine Flavin.

There are thirty-one stars in the service flag that was raised for the block in Spaulding avenue between Nineteenth and Twenty-first streets. A jackie band of fifteen pieces played, and lunch was served at the home of Mrs. Annie M. Collins, 1952 Spaulding avenue, who has two sons in the military service of the United States.

Nineteen men are serving as fighters and six young women have enlisted as nurses from the twenty-seven residences and apartment buildings in King place, a short street on the north side. Their service flag was dedicated last night with speaking, band music, and community singing. The program was in charge of W. T. Seller, 856 King place. One of the proudest participants was Mrs. P. H. Schemp, who has one son, sixteen grandsons, and thirty-one nephews in the service.

49 OF CREW ON U. S. SHIP SUNK BY U-BOAT SAFE

Washington, D. C., Aug. 31.—Twenty members of the armed naval guard of the American cargo steamer Joseph Cudahy, torpedoed and sunk off the English coast Aug. 17, arrived safely at an Atlantic port, the navy department tonight announced. Only two of the naval guards were reported saved in previous dispatches to the navy department.

Arrival at another Atlantic port of sixteen members of the merchant crew also was reported tonight to the navy department. Only thirteen of the sixty-two persons aboard the Cudahy remain unaccounted for. The survivors landed today were picked up by slow sailing west bound vessels.

Two submarines made the attack and two torpedoes struck the ship, the first striking the fuel tank and the second the engine room. The captain of the Cudahy reported that he was taken aboard one of the U-boats and questioned.

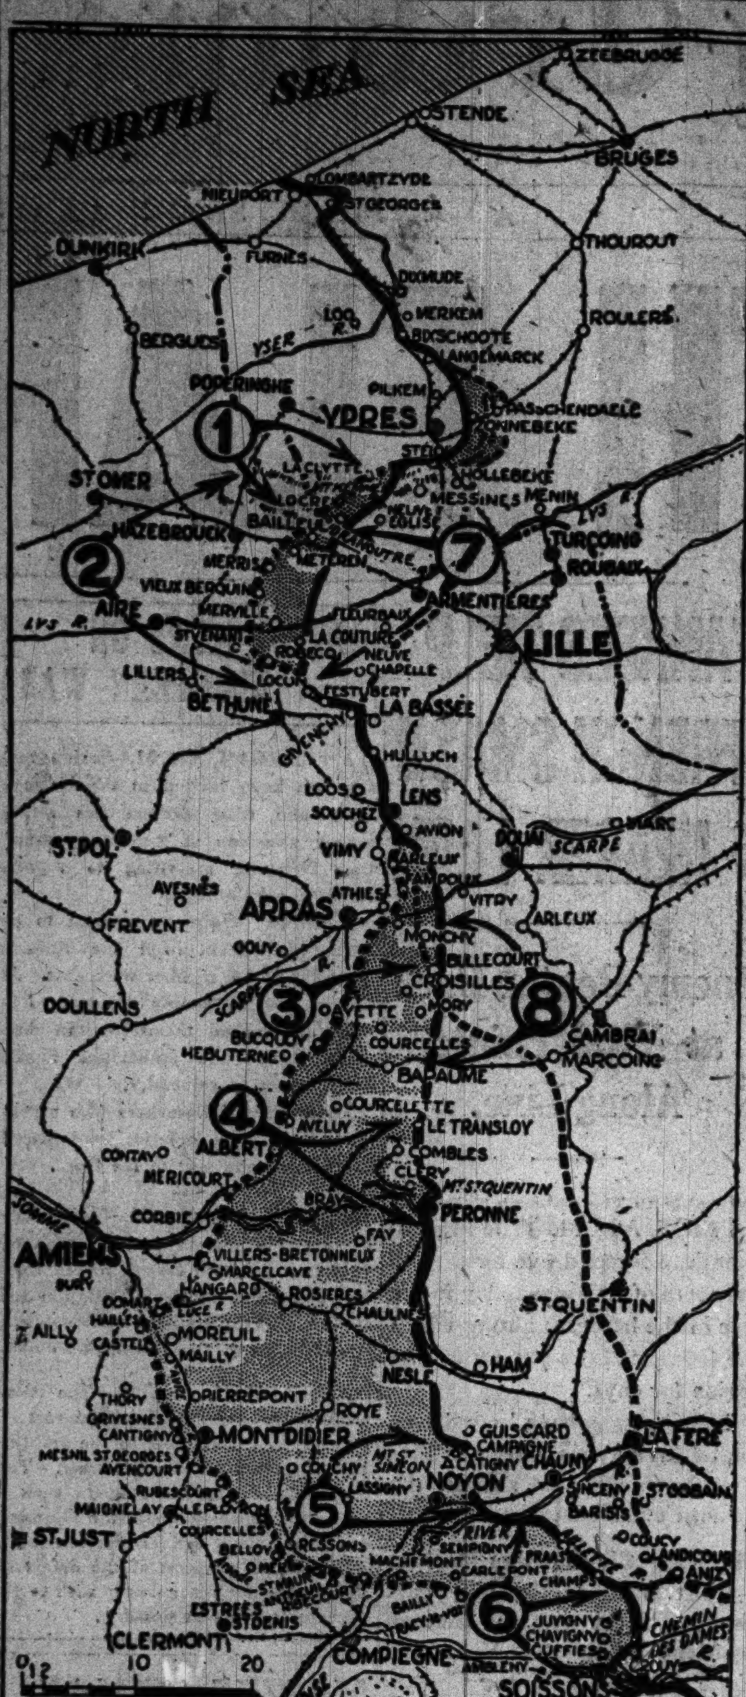
See Beginning of Kaiser's End, Lloyd George Says

LONDON, Aug. 31.—Premier Lloyd George has sent the following reply to a message from Premier Orlando congratulating the British on their success in France:

"Since the supreme war council met there has been a welcome transformation in the situation. Thanks to Marshal Foch, the allied generals, and the troops, the Germans are now in retreat.

"We feel sure this success is the beginning of the end of dominance of German militarism."

NEW GAINS BY THE ALLIES



1—British have taken Mount Kemmel in the Flanders salient and have advanced a mile and a half east of Bailleul.

2—The German retirement in Flanders is on a wide front between Kemmel and Bethune, and it is expected the kaiser's forces will be pushed back of their old line east of Armentieres.

3—The battle is still raging in the region of Bullecourt, east of Arras, with the Germans trying with all their might to stop the steady allied advance upon Douai and Cambrai. Heavy counter attacks by Germans astride the Bapaume-Cambrai road were repulsed. The British took Riencourt-les-Bapaume.

4—The Germans are fighting desperate rear guard actions near Le Transloy, on the road to Peronne. London reports Australians took Mont St. Quentin, north of Peronne, and village of Feuillaucourt. To the left the British took Marrieres wood.

5—Mount St. Simeon, overlooking Noyon, is firmly in the hands of the French, and the Germans must soon give up the whole ridge north of the Oise.

6—Paris reports heavy fighting north of Soissons. The French took Campagne on east side of canal, held Chevilly and gained north of Happlincourt and Morlincourt. The French and Americans have taken Juvigny and Crouy and reached western outskirts of Leury.

7—Berlin reports forefield engagements on both sides of the Lys river. Enemy detachments that had crossed the Lawe were thrown back.

FRENCH AND YANKS WIN

cluding two officers. The Americans got inside the German lines beyond Juvigny. They decided the best plan was to fight their way out.

They encountered the two officers. The latter were inclined to fight. They lost the inclination when Leschinsky jabbed them both with his bayonet—not hard, just enough to make them change their minds about fighting. The others were captured in two groups. All were marched back through the lines to headquarters.

Deed of One Private.

A private who lived near Superior, Wis., was slightly wounded. He said he didn't want to go to the rear alone, so he captured two Boches for company.

During the American advance a Boche sniper was located in an abandoned metal tank. Three or four doughboys rushed the tank and dragged him out.

Most of the fighting was down an open slope and through a ravine, in the face of hot machine gun fire.

HOW FRENCH WENT AHEAD

PARIS, Aug. 31.—French troops were attacking today along the whole fifty mile front from Brie, on the Somme, to the Aisne, east of Soissons.

On the extreme right flank of this front American troops are brigaded with the French. These are driving eastward from the Ailette, and northward and eastward between the Ailette and the Aisne.

This operation has resulted in the practical investure of Coicy-le-Chateau—less than three miles from the southern part of the Hindenburg line—and is rapidly developing into a flank movement against the Chemin des Dames and the German positions between that famous highway and the Aisne and Vesle rivers.

On the left flank of the French front the line converges with the British positions along the Somme near Brie, three miles south of Peronne.

Rapid Progress in Center.

Rapid progress is being made in the center, according to latest reports from the batle front. There the French are already in the vicinity of Guiscard, midway between Noyon and Ham.

Along the Oise valley French troops are reported to be nearing Chauny, ten miles east of Noyon, and only five miles from the Hindenburg line.

North of Soissons, French and American troops are striking both northward and eastward. They are advancing obliquely upon Vregny, four and a half miles northeast of Soissons and two miles north of the Aisne, and at the same time are progressing northward along the road from Terny-Sorny, four and a half miles north of Soissons, to Coucy-le-Chateau, nine miles north of Soissons.

Half of Plateau Rewon.

The fighting during the last forty-eight hours has equaled in ferocity anything as yet seen during the war. Nevertheless the enemy had to give way, and the Franco-American forces have won half the plateau between Soissons and Coucy-le-Chateau.

The Soissons-Coucy and the Soissons-Anizy-le-Chateau roads are threatened and the Germans are faced by the danger of the French getting behind the Chemin des Dames, in their rear.

Conservative military opinion here views the situation with great satisfaction. It is felt the Germans delayed their retreat too long and that they are fighting so hard and sacrificing men to gain time because the Hindenburg line is not yet ready. In any case, that famous position is not believed to be such a solid rampart as it was when first made a year ago, when the works were new and well kept up and were solidly garrisoned by troops with unimpaired morale. They still are a formidable obstacle, but everything depends on the condition they are in and also the state of the troops that will fall back into them.

Win Against Great Odds.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Friday, Aug. 30.—[By the Associated Press.]—German troops attempted to raid American advanced posts in the Vosges sector early this morning. Their artillery and mine throwing activity had caved in one American dugout, burying twelve men, two of whom were wounded slightly, before the enemy made his attack.

The ten unwounded men dug themselves free as soon as the artillery fire stopped. They drove off between thirty and forty Germans and killed at least one.

YANKS WINNING 'SECOND BATTLE OF WILDERNESS'

Capture a Machine Gun Fort by Filtering In Behind Foe.

BY EDWIN L. JAMES.

WITH AMERICAN ARMY, Aug. 30.—[Delayed.]—Americans fighting with Gen. Mangin's army north of Soissons are pushing ahead against stubborn German resistance to better positions. They won attacks yesterday morning and last night, making good gains eastward in the vicinity of Juvigny and Bois de Beaumont.

The Germans are putting up a most stubborn resistance against the tenth French army, and are making frequent counter attacks. The Americans have seen no fighting more strenuous than this. It is a second battle of the Wilderness.

The Americans in this sector went into battle Wednesday morning, when they took part in local operations and brought back some two hundred prisoners. Yesterday morning at 7 o'clock part of Gen. Mangin's attacking army of United States fighters, after a good artillery preparation, moved forward, aided by many tanks.

Surround Gun Nests.

Americans moving with the French on the right and left struck out from the railroad running just west of Juvigny and Chavigny, which had been won the day before. The fighting was very bitter and swayed back and forth as crack American troops met crack German soldiers.

Our men swept against machine gun positions in the wood near Juvigny. In the midst of these woods is a little plateau, which the Germans had fortified strongly with machine guns.

To attack it frontally meant the loss of many men. But after a while fifty German machine gunners were surprised to find Americans leaping on them from behind.

Our men had filtered through the woods and attacked the Germans from the west. They brought back nearly all these Germans as prisoners.

French Congratulate Yanks.

Germans hurled many counter attacks against us in an effort to turn our effort into defeat. While the line swayed, we held our gains all through the afternoon.

American organizations fighting in this sector were congratulated by French officers on its liaison, which means its machinery of performance.

LONDON GRANTS RAISE TO POLICE AND STRIKE ENDS

LONDON, Aug. 31.—The strike of the London policemen composed of more than 22,000 men in the metropolitan district and the "city" has been settled. Agreement between the government and the strikers was reached this afternoon at a conference at which the demands of the policemen were met by the government. Under the terms of the agreement the police will receive a minimum wage of 43 shillings [$10.32] weekly and a maximum wage of 53 shillings [$12.72], plus a war bonus of 12 shillings [$2.88], and also an allowance of 10 shillings for children of school age and 2 shillings and 6 pence for other children. After twenty-six years of service the policemen will be entitled to retire on a pension of 35 shillings [$8.40].

Recognition of the National Union of Police and Prison Officials as a federation, but not as a trade union, has been granted by the government as well as the reinstatement of a constable who was discharged because of his activities in the organization of the policemen's union.

GOES TO GOTHAM TO WED SOLDIER

Miss May Bowes of 4726 N. Sawyer avenue reached New York yesterday afternoon, and just forty-five minutes later she was Mrs. Harry C. Dietrich. The speed of the ceremony was due to the fact that Dietrich, who is also a Chicagoan, is a private who has been assigned to a company of overseas casuals. He had just heard that he was to sail at once when his fiancée arrived.

The couple made a quick trip to the new Y. W. C. A. hostess house, which was not to have been opened until last night, but the pleas of the soldier and his fiancée found ready ears and the building was thrown open for a wedding several hours ahead of schedule. The bride had brought her wedding gown, but it was in her trunk at the station and there was no time to wait for it.

The Rev. Leland Cary performed the ceremony. Then Uncle Sam gave the pair a wedding present by informing the groom that he would not have to sail for seventy-four hours.

ITALIANS HOLD ALBANIA HEIGHTS

WITH THE ITALIAN ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Aug. 30.—[Delayed.]—The Italian retirement from the Semeni river in Albania was largely due to lack of time to organize the captured territory, it was learned today.

Before the Italians had reconstructed their communications and defenses around Fieri and Berat the Austrians brought up reinforcements.

The autumn rains are now coming on and the country soon will be a vast morass. Gen. Ferrero decided to withdraw his main line of defense to the Malakastra mountain ridge, dominating Avlont and the Austrian positions in that area. The Austrians held the important bridge in that sector until this summer.

BATTLE STATEMENTS

LONDON REPORT.

LONDON, Aug. 31.—The official report issued by the war office tonight said:

By a daring and brilliantly executed nigth operation, carried out with great dash and enterprise, the Australians seized the hill and village of Mont St. Quentin, north of Peronne, thereby gaining possession of an important tactical feature commanding Peronne and the angle of the Somme river.

The same operation captured the village of Feuillaucourt. Over 1,500 prisoners were taken. Our casualties were exceptionally light.

This morning English troops attacked on the left of the Australians with complete success and captured Marrieres wood and the high ground east and north of this, with a considerable number of prisoners.

During the day hostile counter attacks launched against the Australians and English were successfully repulsed.

Attacks this morning by strong hostile forces astride the Bapaume-Cambrai road were driven off with heavy losses.

In this neighborhood the English completed the capture of Riencourt-les-Bapaume, taking a number of prisoners and a few guns. At certain points between Vaulx-Vraucourt and Bullecourt prisoners were taken and our positions improved slightly. Strong counter attacks in this sector again led to hard fighting. The situation has not changed materially.

Farther north Canadian troops carried out successfully a local operation immediately across and south of the Arras-Cambrai road, inflicting many casualties and capturing machine guns.

Between the Eensee and Scarpe rivers the English troops pushed their line forward 1,500 yards toward the Trinquige river.

The increasing demand upon the enemy reserves, due firstly to the enormous casualties in his massed attacks in the first part of the year, and, secondly, to heavy casualties in killed, wounded, and prisoners by a series of successful attacks by the allies since July 18, has compelled the enemy to withdraw from the Lys salient and yield without a blow positions of high tactical importance won at great cost.

Our troops have regained possession of Kemmel hill. We have reached the general line of Voormezeele and Lindenhoek, La Creche, and Doulieu, and are approaching Estaires.

EARLY REPORT

The earlier report issued by the war office said:

During the night Australian troops drove the enemy from positions east of Clery-sur-Somme, capturing many prisoners and a number of machine guns. The advance in this locality is continuing.

Yesterday afternoon English troops carried out a successful operation north of the Arras-Cambrai road, capturing a strong point known as the St. Servins farm and the village of Eterpigny on the east bank of the Sensee river.

On the Lys front our troops hold La Couture and the line of the Lawe river from Vielle Chapelle to Lestrem, both of which villages are in our hands.

We are approaching Doulieu and have gained Bailleul station and the hill east of it known as Lille mountain.

Our troops have entered Dranoutre and have gained ground north of Mont Kemmel.

PARIS REPORT.

PARIS, Aug. 31.—The official report issued by the ministry of war tonight said:

In the course of the day the battle continued with extreme violence in the region of the Canal du Nord and north of Soissons. Our troops advanced foot by foot, occupying successively centers of resistance which the enemy defended with stubbornness.

We occupied Campagne, on the east bank of the canal. The enemy effort was particularly violent against the village of Chevilly, which remained finally in our possession after having been retaken twice by the Germans. We captured 200 prisoners and have enlarged our gains north of Happlincourt and Morlincourt.

We have conquered Juvigny and Crouy in a bitter struggle and reached the western outskirts of Leury.

EARLIER REPORT

The earlier report issued by the ministry of war said:

During the night there was heavy artillery fighting in the region of the Canal du Nord, north of Noyon, and between the Ailette and Aisne rivers.

German raids in the Champagne were unsuccessful.

BERLIN REPORT.

BERLIN, Aug. 31.—(Via London.)—The official communication issued by general headquarters this evening says:

The British have noticed the shortening of the bend in our front in the direction of Hazebrouck between Ypres and La Bassee and they have followed our reconnoitering detachments which we had left behind, by way of Kemmel, Bailleul, Neuf Berquin, and across the Lawe.

In the evening southeast of Arras British partial attacks failed. Engagements have taken place north of the Somme.

On both sides of Noyon and between the Oise and the Aisne French attacks developed during the afternoon after the strongest artillery duel.

Attacks carried out several times from Noyon collapsed under our fire and through our counter thrusts. There have been violent artillery fighting and infantry battles on the Ailette.

North of Soissons we took back the front section around Pasly and along the short line between Juvigny and Bucy-Le-Long. In yesterday's attack of the enemy Juvigny remained in his hands.

In the last two days fifty-two hostile machines have been brought down.

EARLY REPORT

The earlier statement issued by the war office follows:

Army groups of Crown Prince Rupprecht and Gen. Von Boehn—There have been forefield engagements on both sides of the River Lys. Enemy reconnoitering detachments which had advanced over the River Lawe were thrown back.

On the battefield southeast of Arras the British yesterday renewed their attempts to effect a break through. Bringing a strong force of tanks into action, English and Canadian divisions advanced to attack early in the morning on a front of twelve and one-half miles between the Arras-Cambrai road and southeast of Bapaume.

South of the road the enemy was beaten back. North of Hendecourt the enemy was thrown back. South of Hendecourt and between Vaulx and Fremicourt the enemy's assaults collapsed.

The Germans recaptured Hendecourt, which had been temporarily lost. After warding off the enemy they advanced to the attack themselves and threw him back on both sides of Bullecourt and beyond the western border of the village.

South of Ecoust-St. Mein, West Prussian regiments, in bitter fighting, beat back several attacks of the enemy. The intervention, on his own initiative, of First Lieut. Mann with companies of infantry regiment No. 175, rendered possible the recapture of Ecoust, which had been temporarily lost.

On both sides of Bapaume, Prussian, Saxon, and Bavarian regiments caused the enemy's assault to break down.

In the afternoon the enemy threw fresh divisions into the battle on both sides of the Arras-Cambrai road. The bringing into action of further masses of tanks and infantry was intended to secure a decision. Late in the evening the battle was decided in our favor.

Dense lines of the enemy, storming from the Sensee region beyond Eterpigny and Hancourt and south of the road from Vis-en-Artois to Cherisy, broke down under our fire and bitter hand to hand fighting. His tanks were shot to pieces. The enemy's infantry suffered extraordinarily heavy losses.

North of the Somme Brittish attacks between Morval and Clery were repulsed. Where the enemy reached our lines our counter attack threw him back to the positions of departure.

North of the Oise the French with strong forces attacked the canal sector between Libermont and northeast of Noyon. Their attacks, for the most part, were brought to a standstill on the west bank under our fire. After severe fighting the enemy was again thrown out of Chevilly, on the east bank.

YAQUIE REVOLT DRIVEN TO HILLS

Nogales, Ariz., Aug. 31.—Yaqui Indians have revolted at Ortiz and Culiacan, in the Mexican state of Sinaloa. An American traveling man arrived here today by automobile from Torres and reported that 300 Indians at Ortiz on Monday fought an engagement with the federal garrison at Torres and had taken to the hills. This was officially confirmed today.

Three hundred Yaquis of another command near Culiacan were also reported to have revolted on the same day and attempted to loot the city, but were driven off.

While the Yaqui revolt has no direct connection with the shooting here Tuesday, it became known here tonight that Gen. P. Elias Calles, military governor of Sonora, held his political enemies responsible for the trouble.

Chicagoan in Germany, One of 100 War Prisoners

Washington, D. C., Aug. 31.—[Special.]—Private Frank Miner, son of Mrs. Jennie Miner, 8255 Main street, Chicago, was one of more than a hundred American soldiers reported today as prisoners of war at Langensalza, Germany.

HONOR CROSS FOR SLAIN CHICAGOAN

Washington, D. C., Aug. 31.—[Special.]—The heroic death of a Chicagoan and the awarding of the distinguished service cross posthumously for the act of bravery he performed was revealed today when the war department gave out the home addresses of soldiers of the American expeditionary force decorated by Gen. Pershing last Wednesday.

The Chicago soldier was Private Tony Lubec, Company I, Twenty-eighth infantry, the son of Mrs. Tony Lubec, 1218 Cleaver street. The act of bravery which caused his death and won the distinguished service cross, which will be sent to his mother, was recorded as follows:

"Private Tony Lubec, infantry—While engaged on a mission to kill an enemy sniper who was concealed in a wheat field and was inflicting severe losses upon American forces near Cantigny, France, May 28, 1918, and after succeeding in his mission, he was himself killed."

CORONER ASKS CROSSING GUARD.

At an inquest into the death of J. Longbauer, 2212 West Fiftieth street, who was killed Thursday night by a Pere Marquette railroad passenger train at Fiftieth street and the Pere Marquette tracks, it was disclosed that the railroad had no flagman at the crossing. The coroner's jury recommended that a flagman be placed immediately.

BOY-ED WRITES U. S. HAD SECRET BRITISH TREATY

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 31.—[By the Associated Press.]—It was a secret treaty between Great Britain and the United States that caused America's entry into the war, according to Capt. Karl Boy-Ed, former German naval attaché at Washington, whose book on the subject has been published in Berlin, according to a prisoner taken north of Soissons.

The prisoner told his captors that Capt. Boy-Ed's book told the story of his "investigations" in the United States, and that it explained clearly that had it not been for a secret alliance America certainly never would have entered the war.

YANKEES RUSH TO BATTLE IN GALLIENI TAXIS

Play Rhummy, Shave, and Then Plunge Into Big Attack.

BY FREDERICK A. SMITH.

[SPECIAL CABLE TO CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, Aug. 28, 4 p. m.—[Delayed.]—A small unit of Americans against stepped into one of Gen. Ludendorff's "sectors of disquietude" this morning and gave the Germans a surprise which they will not soon forget. At taps last night, the Germans' Seventh division confronted Frenchmen, but this morning a barrage started, and behind it advanced Americans.

Two hundred prisoners were taken in short order north of Soissons, near Juvigny. These said they believed British troops had come to assist this new French drive until they were face to face with the Americans. It was a crack American unit which was sent in alongside of a French division, also famed for its valor. The Yankees promptly justified the wisdom of their selection by making their objective and having to be restrained from advancing too far.

Ride in Gallieni's Cabs.

The bringing up of this unit, affectionately termed by Gen. Mangin "——" was in itself a remarkable spectacle. Miles of French camions loaded with United States troops and driven by Chinese chauffeurs rumbled along the roads eastward to the line. Some of the trucks were the same old Paris buses in which Gen. Gallieni delivered his taxicab army to Manoury, thus saving Paris from Von Kluck's army in 1914.

The organization of hospitals and the bringing up of quantities of ammunition left no doubt in the minds of the troops that a scrap was cooking, and the greatest hilarity was exhibited along roads. French and Americans exchanged salutes while the Chinese chauffeurs, who are great admirers of the American fighters, grinned and chuckled as they guided the big trucks through the shelled roads to the front.

Once within marching distance of the line, the Americans alighted and merged self with the hills in such a way that despite the enemy's view from the hilltops, which made possible observation for miles, the presence of the new force was not discernible, and as proved by today's developments, was not suspected.

Play Rhummy Before Battle.

Some of the Yankees occupied caves with which this terribly desolated country abounds. The company barber almost immediately started work in a cave lighted by candles while in an adjoining pit the occupants opened a fast game of rhummy.

Others, exhausted by the ride, scooped out hollows in the sandy shelves at the roadside and slept.

Things were quiet except for the artillery exchanges until our men advanced to the relief of a French unit. Word came back that the relief was accomplished at 4:10 o'clock this morning.

Three hours later a barrage led the way into a new chapter of war history with the —— moving forward like veterans. At 8:25 o'clock word was sent back by balloons and observers' posts that the objective had been attained and many prisoners captured.

Prisoners Mere Boys.

The procession of prisoners back to the caves brought significant information concerning the enemy. A majority of the prisoners were boys of 18 and 20, and many of them were machine gunners. Many had been serving since September, some going to war after only nine weeks of training. Their clothes were ragged. Even their caps were patched.

They complained of their food.

The prisoners seemed surprised at the consideration shown them by American officers, as they evidently had believed the German lie that Americans took no prisoners. A number of prisoners wearing Red Cross brassards aroused the suspicion of our officers, but the prisoners insisted they were not combatants and never had been.

Other prisoners reported that their only orders were to hold their line, and when asked why they hadn't held it they shrugged their shoulders and looked about with grinning faces at the Americans.

No Enemy Replacement Troops.

One German officer who recently returned from a visit to Berlin was captured. He said the strength of his regiment was greatly reduced because there had been no replacements since the Champagne losses. One company had only nineteen men.

The enemy attempted to hold the line with machine guns, but was flanked and cut off. Scores of machine gun nests were captured.

The prisoners belonged to the Seventh division, which had just relieved the Jaegers.

Prisoners wanted to know why the Americans were trying to crush Germany. They seemed unable to understand our reply, "to make an end of militarism."

Hell Suddenly Unroofed.

Behind this sector is that most ghastly example in this part of France of how hideously war transforms villages and farms. Nouveau, once lying in a semi-circle on a hillside, has entirely disappeared, except for heaps of stones. Absolutely not one roof or wall is in sight. On the big plateau to the east and north are miles of wire, thousands of pits, gaping shell holes, German equipment, dead horses, graves, smashed airplanes, abandoned machine guns, countless pieces of war paraphernalia.

These several square miles make one think that a great chamber of hell has been suddenly unroofed and exposed to the sunshine.

Thousands Arrested Who Read D'Annunzio Report

ZURICH, Aug. 31.—Several thousand persons have been arrested in Vienna, Trieste, and Zera, charged with reading or having in their possession copies of the D'Annunzio manifestoes, which were dropped in an air raid on the capital a few days ago.

CHICAGO SPANS 3,000 MILE WAR GAP TOMORROW

FREE TO MEN IN UNIFORM

SAMUEL INSULL, general chairman of the citizens' committee, yesterday issued this statement:

"All officers and enlisted men of the United States army, the United States navy or the United States marines, or of any of the allied nations, will be welcomed at all gates of the war exposition. Their uniforms will be a pass to the grounds. Men in uniform are asked to feel no hesitancy in visiting the grounds at any time."

The white gates of the United States government war exposition in Grant park will open at noon tomorrow.

Visitors will find themselves on a wide boulevard, flanked on one side by No Man's Land and a far flung system of trenches, and on the other by a series of booth exhibits where all the manifold side activities of war are shown.

Bordering both sides of the promenade, which extends from Van Buren street far down toward the imposing pillars of the Field museum, will be hundreds of trophies of the battlefields, helmets that once crowned the heads of the kaiser's "invincible" troopers, hundreds of rifles picked up at Verdun, moldy uniforms, torn and twisted battleplanes, shells, swords, machine guns and relics.

Shows War's Horrors.

The exposition, according to the official view of it, is a vast educational measure, designed to impress more forcibly upon the people of the middle west that this is their war. It will show them how the Germans fight, what weapons they use, and how they ravage the country.

It will show what happens to American boys when they leave home for the camp and the trenches. The exposition is intended to arouse latent patriotism.

The great feature is the battle front that has been built along the lake shore. Soldiers from the trenches of France have superintended the construction of the zigzag system of trenches, the crater holes, the barbed wire entanglements, and all the other features that will carry the people of this city on the wings of imagination out to the war zone.

No Man's Land Ready.

No Man's Land lies between two series of trenches in a sunken amphitheater. The old public athletic field has made an ideal place for the battles which will be fought between opposing forces of Camp Grant soldiers. The marsh grasses and the black earth have been torn up in most realistic fashion, as though great shells had exploded there.

The trenches will be manned at 4:15 o'clock tomorrow afternoon for the first battle. The tank Britannia, manned by Capt. Richard Haigh, Lieut. F. G. Rolph, and members of the same crew that took the tank through the muddy fields of Flanders during the early part of the war, will go into action, it is promised.

Real Roman Holiday.

The people may sit in comfortable seats around all sides of the amphitheater and listen to a jackie band play until it is time for the arena events to start. They will be treated to a war de luxe, a vast open air show that promises to stir the blood. This kind of a Roman holiday may be enjoyed every day until Sept. 15, when the exposition closes.

Out beyond the sunken theater of war the lake will furnish another arena for action. Here the naval engagements will take place. A camouflaged torpedo boat destroyer, with wooden sides but real guns, is all ready for action.

Hundreds of sailors guarded the canvas fences yesterday, while thousands of sightseers strolled along the paths watching the vast activity of the place.

Trophies of Conflict.

From trains running alongside aeroplanes that once flew over German lines were being unloaded and truckloads of shells and guns being dumped inside the gates. Carpenters and plumbers and electricians were busy. New buildings were arising as if by magic. Plasterers were working on figures and walls and towers.

The Statue of Liberty surveyed it all from her high pedestal at the south end of the grounds. Her shoulders were draped in the American flag, which will be lifted tomorrow amid appropriate exercises at 2 o'clock.

Troops Make Camp.

On the grounds outside in inclosure the troops were making camp. Airplane engines were swung into place and battle trophies unpacked from trunks and sorted out. It was a chaotic scene. The roads were muddy in many places. Several trucks were stalled as they hauled the heavy ordnance. But everything will be shipshape and clean by tomorrow, the exposition builders promise.

Along the right side of the promenade a row of booths has been built. Here the visitors may study the work of the Red Cross, the Salvation Army, the Y. M. C. A., the war camp community organization, and a dozen kindred activities. The Y. W. C. A. has a hostess house, prettily arranged in wicker furniture, all ready. The Knights of Columbus have built a dugout in replica of their huts behind the trenches. It is made of pieces of broken lumber, earth, and sand bags. Just beyond, the shells are supposed to be exploding.

Paintings on View.

A series of paintings have been given to the Red Cross by Chicago artists, paintings valued highly. They were placed yesterday by the artists and make a strong appeal for this cause. In the British exhibit, which is the biggest and most interesting of all, new automatic motion pictures will be shown.

These pictures will be in action all the time and will show the latest scenes from the front. The British have collected a great store of German war material which will be in place.

Air Warriors to Fly Here.

The airplane men, who will execute battle maneuvers in connection with the operations of the land forces, will come in from Minneapolis on the air route. The squadron of American and British flyers is scheduled to leave Omaha this morning, arriving at Minneapolis this afternoon. Brig. Gen. Charles F. Lee of the British flying forces may precede the others to Chicago. James S. Stephens, vice president of the Aero Club of Illinois, left Chicago last night to greet the flyers in Minneapolis.

Gen. Guglielmotti, military attaché of the Italian embassy at Washington, will arrive at the Dearborn street station at 7 o'clock this morning to attend the exposition. He will be met by Count Bolognesi, Italian consul here, Lieut. D'Constantino, and a committee of citizens.

REPORT PICTURES BOMBERS' NIGHT RAID ON COLOGNE

Airmen After a Long Trip Make Bullseye of Railroad Station.

Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable. [Copyright: 1918.]

LONDON, Aug. 30.—Cologne was bombed by British airmen on Aug. 21. Details have now reached London which enable Capt. Paul Bewsher, R. A. F., to give the following description of the raid:

"Night had come clear, and the stars glittered overhead in a cloudless sky. Unobscured by mist low in the east hung a brilliant golden moon. Once they got under way, the engines roared with a splendid note of power; the great machine shook itself and began to move across the grass and thundered triumphantly into the air.

Find First Towns in Darkness.

"The airmen crossed the shell torn area of lines over which star shells were bursting. For a time they saw no lights at all. Metz and Thionville lay in the darkness, though here and there a dull red glare revealed the position of the blast furnaces of the Briey basin, forty miles behind the lines. They began to see villages, the lamplit streets of which radiating from the center made them look like glowing starfishes. They passed near Treves, which lay in the darkness, although some random shells burst high above the town. A pale searchlight rendered useless by the moonlight moved inquiringly to and fro.

In Sight of Cologne.

"They passed over Coblenz, Neuwied, and Andoinach, which glittered like gems, their streets ablaze with light; over Bonn, and then, far ahead of them, the airmen saw a great cluster of lights on the river at Cologne. Soon they could see two bridges across the river and the light of the huge factories south of the town. German troops were being transferred to the western front and at Cologne the railway station was in a state of great activity.

"Though it was nearly 1 o'clock in the morning the lamps along the station platforms were blazing brightly. The pilot throttled his engines and the observer climbed through the little door into the front cockpit. Taking a line for the railway junction, he pressed his bomb level slowly forward and then again and again over the pale city for a moment hung the great yellow bombs ere they began their swift downward rush.

Hit the Mark.

"Two great red flashes suddenly appeared near the station, leaving clouds of smoke. Two others appeared nearer still, and then the six remaining bombs burst on a huge railway junction and the thunder of explosions came to the airmen's ears.

"As they sped back above the silver river searchlights moved ceaselessly over the town and scattered shells flickered in the starlit skies. In the wrecked station lay a troop train overturned, torn, and splintered."

New Cholera in Belgium; Huns Try to Localize It

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 31.—The Telegraaf says it learns that a new sickness, probably cholera, has appeared in Belgium. Thirty young persons died this week in a village near Diest, seventeen miles northeast of Louvain.

OUT OF A FIERY SEA

Life Crew Tells of Rescue of Men from Torpedoed Oil Steamer.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 31.—[Special.]—An account of the rescue of forty-two officers and men of the torpedoed British steamer Mirlo from a sea of burning oil and gas is given in a report today from Keeper John A. Midgett of a coast guard station near Cape Hatteras, N. C.

The Mirlo was torpedoed Aug. 16 about seven miles east of the station, the vessel immediately taking fire. The coast guard crew launched a power surf boat and headed for the burning wreck.

"Learning from the captain and sixteen survivors of the crew, met a few miles offshore, that two other lifeboats, one capsized, were in the vicinity of the wreck, we headed to the burning wreckage," the report says. "Upon arrival the sea was found to be covered with fire. There appeared to be great volumes of flame about 100 yards apart, and the ocean for many hundred yards was covered with flame.

"In between the two large bodies of flame, at times when the smoke would lift, a boat could be seen bottom up with six men clinging to it and a heavy swell washing over it. With extreme difficulty the coast guard boat ran through the smoke and floating wreckage and rescued the six men. They told us that at many times they had been compelled to dive under the water to save themselves from being burned to death. All had burns, but none was in a serious condition. They also stated they had seen some of their crew sink and disappear in the burning sea."

The third boat was soon picked up.

11 RHINE TOWNS MEET TO PROTEST ALLIED AIR RAIDS

GENEVA, Aug. 31.—An important meeting of representatives from eleven Rhine towns began yesterday at Saarbrucken. The conference was called to discuss means of protesting to the government against allied air raids. It was decided to appeal to German headquarters to come to some arrangement for both sides to abstain from air attacks upon open towns. The question of air defenses, if the appeal fails, also was discussed, as were measures for the repair of property damaged and the payment of indemnity to the families of persons killed and injured. Meanwhile insurance rates have increased 38 per cent in Rhine towns, it is announced.

ROME FOR LODGE PEACE PROPOSAL

Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable. [Copyright: 1918.]

ROME, Aug. 31.—Senator Lodge's summing up of the allies' peace terms is sympathetically, even enthusiastically, discussed here. The Idea Nazionale in a leading article says that peace proposals are passing now from the first to the second period.

In the first the Germans offered peace, thinking they could convert their partial temporary victories, the fruit of forty years' preparation, into a fixed, complete victory; but the other nations, renewed and regenerated by the war danger, refused to put themselves beneath Germany's feet.

Germany must now pass from the period when she proposed peace to the period when she must ask it, driven by a life or death necessity to accept the United States' conditions.

U. S. ARMY READY TO GO IT ALONE IN BATTLE ZONE

Brigading with French and British About Concluded.

BY CARL D. GROAT.

[UNITED PRESS STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 31.—The "all American army" is in the process of assembling. The system of brigading United States troops with British and French is nearly at an end; and such troops as are training in that way abroad are being taken out as speedily as possible.

Hereafter American troops sent abroad can be brigaded with seasoned American forces.

The emergency which caused America to sacrifice the natural pride of having a distinctive organization has passed. Hence, it is not now necessary to continue for any great length of time the makeshift system of brigading with the allies.

Nearly All Removed.

According to senators, Gen. March, chief of staff, informed them today that the withdrawals were being accomplished rapidly and that nearly all our forces training with British and French have now been removed.

He did not specify the full reasons for this, nor discuss plans for the future for the distinctively American army.

It is apparent, however, that forces are being gathered which before long can be organized into a second field army. The first field army of 1,000,000 men has already been listed. And now, with the troop shipments well past the 1,500,000 mark, it will be a matter of only a comparatively short time when the second big force can be organized.

To Be an Army of Maneuver.

One American field army is likely to form an "army of maneuver" for the tremendous operations to be undertaken next spring.

With such a mobile force, coupled with reserve organizations of French and British, it will be possible to concentrate such strength against the Germans at any given point that a push through will be a matter of comparative ease. The four million army predicted for next June will give the allies numerical superiority which Germany can never meet, and which will seal her doom.

TWO SHIPS LAUNCHED.

Wilmington, Del., Aug. 31.—Two more ships slipped from the ways of yards in this city today, the 8,130 ton tanker Charles M. Everest being launched at the Harlan & Hollingsworth plant and the Lynchburg, a cargo carrier of 4,000 tons, plunging into the Delaware from the Pusey & Jones yard.

HUN PAPERS TRY TO HIDE WAVES OF YANKEE STEEL

Explain Impossibility of Million Men in France.

B YEDWIN L. JAMES.

Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable. [Copyright: 1918.]

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 29.—German newspapers taken from prisoners of war show that the Hun journals are having an awful time explaining about the American army in France. While the Boche fighter is getting his own personal opinion about the Yankee fighting men, what he reads about them seems to depend on what paper he takes. A list of excerpts from German journals of recent date express opinions running all the way from scorn to admiration for America's military effort.

For typical German logic, an editorial in the Coelnische Zeitung of Aug. 20 is a gem. It explains its mistake of predicting that American troops could not be brought in force to France by saying it did not suppose Wilson would steal German and allied ships for the job. However, it assures the German soldiers that the soldiers to come from the United States will be by no means so good as those who have already fought in France.

Read It Yourself.

This choice bit of information follows:

"America has claimed to be able in a single month to send 300,000 men to France. Where would she get the 1,500,000 tons necessary to transport these troops? She could, no doubt, use sixteen German steamers stolen by Wilson and sixty or so put at his disposal by England upon his own request. But these ships could not suffice, and we know a good many of them have been put out of use and that our submarines have sunk at least forty of them. As for the millions of American soldiers whose existence is announced, we shall not believe in them until an authentic document has made their origin clear.

Finds "Famine" in France.

"Without any doubt we could not foresee that America, with her principles, would go as far as to steal the ships of neutral nations, make Spain her vassal, and cut down transportation on the seas to such extent as to reduce half starved France to famine. Yet this is what has happened.

"Nevertheless, the fears of our alarmists are unjustified. Not in three months' training could American officers learn all the secrets of modern war. If America has been able to constitute the nucleus with from 200,000 to 250,000 men, with regulars and volunteers at the beginning, the situations will change as soon as these choice troops are used. It would be interesting to know the effect produced on the morale of allied troops by the enormous losses they have suffered within the last few weeks.

"Americans are no supermen, especially from the military point of view, and America has not the requisites to form a soldier like ours. She has made an effort of which many would not have believed her capable. Well informed people know she cannot before 1919 or 1920 engage the full strength of her military power."

Almost Equal British.

In the Berliner Tageblatt, Director Heiniken of the North German Lloyd line, tells in the annual report what he thinks of Americans in the war.

"From the point of view of tenacity and endurance, the Americans are almost equal to the British. From what is known so far of the American effort one cannot help respect the energy with which all problems have been grasped on the other side of the ocean.

"Economically, and particularly from the point of view of interests, the loss of a large part of the German merchant marine by American intervention—it would be foolish to deny it—has been a hard blow for Germany. The best and most precious of our steamers, some of which cannot be replaced, have been confiscated and are used now in transporting to France and England American troops and ammunition."

German Girls Captured After Manning Hun Gun

Verona, N. J., Aug. 31.—[Special.]—Two German girls operated a machine gun in a German front line in a recent fight and inflicted heavy casualties on a company of the One Hundred and Eleventh infantry of the United States army before they were captured, says a letter received by Mrs. George Irvine of Claremont avenue from her son, Sergt. Hugh L. Irvine of headquarters company of the One Hundred and Eleventh.

FRENCH URGE ROOSEVELT FOR BRITISH ENVOY

Parisians Look Upon Him as Best Man to Sit at Peace Table.

BY CHARLES H. GRASTY.

Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable. [Copyright: 1918.]

PARIS, Aug. 31.—Mention of Col. Roosevelt's name in a list of possible successors to Ambassador Page, United States envoy to Great Britain, published in Paris papers today, is enthusiastically received here alike, by Americans and French. With defeat of the Germans assured, if not actually in sight, there has been much discussion of the part America must play in the gigantic task of arranging peace.

Col. Roosevelt is regarded here as fundamentally sympathetic with Wilson's general ideas. The colonel has had wider experience and possesses greater experience in European relationships than any other available man.

It is pointed out that in his dealings with foreign governments he has always shown rare sagacity, judgment, and caution and has obtained results.

Made No Diplomatic Mistakes.

"Roosevelt may be the colt in a pasture, but he's the wheel horse when hooked up in harness," said an American whose devotion to President Wilson is well known. "I've been placed for years where I could watch Roosevelt's methods in international diplomacy, and he's never made a mistake.

"We're going to have a situation at the close of the war which will require knowledge of and skill in European diplomacy, coupled with a single hearted devotion to American principles and standards. That combination exists in Roosevelt to a greater degree than in any other.

Called Strongest Man.

"His connection with the peace program, as ambassador to England, would bring to the situation the best training, temperament, and all around ability that we have got."

KAISER ACCEPTS CHURCH HOMAGE

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 31.—In reply to a message of homage from the Union of Protestant Clergymen, the German emperor has caused the following telegram to be sent:

"His majesty readily accepts the vow to coöperate for the maintenance of an unshakable confidence in God and in our just cause and does not doubt that after the heavy fight for life and freedom a prosperous peace will arise for the German people, which, obeying the law of the hour, now is firmly united with its princes and heroes at the front."

22 CHICAGOANS WOUNDED, ONE DEAD, IN ACTION

Steward Reynolds, Former Auditorium Hotel Cashier, Killed.

OFFICIAL.
Wounded severely	13
Wounded, degree undetermined	2
UNOFFICIAL.
(Reported by relatives to The Tribune.)
Killed in action	1
Wounded severely	4
Wounded slightly	3
Total	23

Among the casualties yesterday there appeared the name of Private Richard S. Tappenden, Company K, One Hundred and Thirty-second infantry, wounded severely in action.

Before the United States entered the war Private Tappenden was an accountant in the employ of the Western Electric company. But when the president called for volunteers he laid aside his pen for a gun and went into training at Camp Logan, Houston, Tex. There he injured a finger so severely that he was twice offered an honorable discharge.

Submitted to Operation.

He declined, and in order to go to France chose the alternative, which was amputation of the finger. He has been in France since May and has been "over the top" several times. His sister, Mrs. W. J. Shrader, lives at 1427 Edgewater avenue.

Sergt. Henry R. Wallace, listed officially as wounded severely Aug. 4, wrote a letter under date of Aug. 8 from a base hospital in France stating that he was recovering rapidly and was "just crazy to get back into action and help the boys put the Huns on the run. And believe me they can run." Sergt. Wallace went to France last February. His young wife lives with her parents at 1937 North Sawyer avenue.

Over the Top Twice.

Corporal Joseph J. Hein, wounded severely, was a former life guard at the Rogers Park life saving station, and was a member of the football team during his student days at Loyola university. He has been over the top twice. He is a member of company D, One Hundred and Thirty-second infantry, and a son of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas J. Hein of 1511 Pratt boulevard.

Seven prisoners were captured by Private Henry Schefftus of the One Hundred and Thirty-first infantry before he was wounded July 4. He is now in a base hospital in England. He was formerly a guard with the Chicago Elevated lines. He is a son of Mrs. Minnie Schefftus of 2835 South Karlov avenue.

Private William Bozedon, wounded severely, retired from business as a furniture manufacturer to go to war. He is with the One Hundred and Thirty-first infantry and was wounded severely in action Aug. 8. Two brothers are also in the service—Frank, with the Twenty-first field artillery, and Peter, a corporal with the signal corps.

"Old Bill About Done Up."

Private Anthony A. Dunkel, company E, One Hundred and Thirty-first infantry, wounded severely Aug. 9, wrote in the last letter received from him that "old Bill is getting pretty well done up. The last prisoners we got consisted largely of young boys, almost children, and quite aged men." Private Dunkel's widowed mother, Mrs. Florence Dunkel, lives at 1348 North Robey street.

Relatives yesterday notified The Tribune that Private Steward Reynolds, company A, Fourth infantry, was killed in action Aug. 11, according to a war department telegram. He was for eight years cashier and assistant night manager at the Auditorium hotel. His parents live at 5216 South Wells street.

Two Sons Wounded.

Other casualties reported to The Tribune by relatives were:

Private Stanley M. Watson, headquarters company, One Hundred and Thirty-first infantry, wounded severely; home address, 71 East Forty-second street. Corporal Michael Mahoney, headquarters company, One Hundred and Thirty-first, wounded severely; son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Mahoney of 661 West Eighty-first place. Mr. and Mrs. Mahoney also received word that their other son, Private Jerry J. Mahoney, Eighty-fourth company, Sixth marines, had been wounded slightly July 18.

J. J. Buell, general manager of The Fair, received notification that his son, Sergt. Gordon T. Buell, also of the One Hundred and Thirty-first, had been wounded severely. He had been reported previously as wounded slightly.

Sister Receives Word.

Private Charles (Art) Gordon Richter, Company L, One Hundred and Sixty-seventh infantry, has been wounded slightly, according to notification received by his sister, Miss Lucille Harrison of 3808 Ellis avenue.

Private Henry E. Zorn, wounded severely, is a member of company F, One Hundred and Thirty-first infantry. His mother, Mrs. Marie Zorn, a widow, lives at 1726 Dayton street.

Two other members of the One Hundred and Thirty-first, reported unofficially as wounded, are Corporal William A. Bowden and Private Thomas J. King.

The complete list of Chicagoans will be found in the official casualties.

War Chiefs Emphatically Refuse Wage Jockeying

Washington, D. C., Aug. 31.—In denying today an application for further wage increases for hod carriers working on the new $28,000,000 terminal at South Boston, Mass., the war department took an emphatic stand against permitting its policy of paying "prevailing local scales" to be used in forcing up wage scales.

BOMB PREVENTIVES

Paper Window Pasters, Which in France Save Glass Panes During Air Raids, to Be Used in War Stamp Campaign.

Chicago and other Illinois cities will, during the week of Sept. 9 to 16, look like Paris excepting an air raid. Windows of thousands of stores will be pasted over with criss-crosses of paper like the shop windows of the cities of France, which are thus protected from being shattered by air pressure from bombs dropped by German aviators. This will be done as part of the general celebration in this state of National War Savings week by the National Retail Merchants association.

During the week Chicago and its suburbs will actually be bombarded from the war exposition, and instead of being Huns, will be American aviators from the war exposition, and nstead of death dealing bombs, harmless paper arrows advising every one to purchase war savings stamps, will be dropped. On some of these arrows will be printed orders on various retail merchants calling for a free war savings stamp, so that all finders of arrows are advised to look closely at them, as some of them will be worth $4.20.

With just four months more to go, the War Savings committee of Illinois yesterday found approximately $60,000,000 of its $125,000,000 quota of war savings stamps actually sold and paid for. It found that sales now are approximating $15,000,000 a month, and still increasing.

GROCERS BLAMED FOR HIGH PRICES BY FOOD BOARD

Cases of grocers charged with profiteering in fruits and vegetables are being considered by the food administration. Samuel Livingston, head of the division of perishable goods of the food administration, said yesterday that it is the grocers who are responsible for most of the high prices that are charged.

He charges that tomatoes which are bought for about 1½ cents a pound on South Water street are often retailed at 10 cents. Mr. Livingston is confident that potatoes will soon be selling at much lower figures.

Calestine Larrn, a baker at 11529 South Michigan avenue, who was arrested on Friday, charged with buying more flour than permitted under the provisions of the food administration, was turned over to the federal authorities by the police of the Kensington station yesterday.

NEWS OF DRAFT CHEERS ARMY

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 31. — [By the Associated Press.]—The enactment of the new American man power measure, the news of which spread through the lines today, brought expressions of general satisfaction from the American army in France. The men here realize not only the immense resources it brings to the aid of the government in the pursuit of the war, but that it also guarantees unsparing efforts to continue what they have begun.

The high command is particularly interested in the moral effect the measure will have upon the enemy. His man power is now concededly at its weakest point and his replacement sources are limited, and the military authorities count upon a reaction in the morale in Germany as a strong factor of the winter situation.

It may be stated that from the commander in chief and the general staff down to the rank and file, every one is immeasurably encouraged and heartened by the passage of the act.

ITALY SENDS INDUSTRIAL EXPERTS.

ROME, Aug. 31.—Announcement of the appointment of Camillo Cerruti, industrial expert, as Italian purchasing agent at Washington, was made today.

48 Marriage Licenses in Day to New Draft Men

One hundred and twelve marriage licenses were issued yesterday.

Of these forty-eight were granted to men between the ages of 31 and 45.

Five were issued to youths of 20.

One was granted to a youth 19 years old.

Louis Legner, marriage license clerk, when asked if he thought there was any connection between these licenses and the passage of the man power bill, replied:

"I fear so."

DRAFT EVADER GETS 15 YEARS.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 31.—Private Andy Januscewi of St. Joseph county, Ind., who refused to do military duty after being drafted, was sentenced to fifteen years in the military prison at Fort Jay, N. Y., it was announced today.

"It is now possible to report that there were more than 760,000 subscriptions to the second Red Cross war fund in Chicago. On a basis of practically complete returns we find that there were about 390,000 cash contributions and 375,000 pledges. Chicago's contribution to the first war fund was made by 17,000 people.

"The returns of the second campaign will probably run over $6,250,000, of which $3,183,832.40 has already been paid in.

"The war fund committee urges that the pledge payments be made when they are due. The first and second payments are already past due. These payments may be sent to the war fund office, 1219 Merchants Loan and Trust building."

BARE GAY LIFE OF BRADWAY; HUNT HIS SLAYER

Father of Girl in the Case Missing; Dancing Tales Told.

thing of what was burning their hearts.

"If Mr. Cook stabbed Mr. Bradway it was because of wild delusions working in an insane brain," said Mrs. Cook. "Mr. Bradway was just a good friend to Norma and me—nothing more. Mr. Cook has never been a father to his daughter.

"She is a good girl now and always has been. My husband has long been jealous because Mr. Bradway showed a kindly interest in Norma. O, my husband knew as well as I know that there was nothing wrong. He must have been crazed."

Tears for Dead Friend.

Norma, the "dangerously pretty girl," who caused it all so innocently, asked what it all was about. When she was told she gasped:

"My father stabbed Mr. Bradway?"

"Yes," she was told.

The color faded from the pink cheeks, tears came into the bright eyes, and the girl all but fainted. And it was here that the house of D. M. Bliss, a little place down in Columbus, Kas., where years ago Cook came courting, shut its doors to the world.

MR. COOK'S CAREER

Cook, according to information that seeped into police headquarters from various sources, has been a man of various sorts of activities. The first known of him he lived in La Grange, Kas., and in Columbus, Kas., where he was married to the daughter of D. M. Bliss.

He ran a hotel in Kansas for a time, tried his hand with a country newspaper, became interested in theatricals, managed the Majestic theater in St. Paul, and, finally, drifting from that, became a sort of private investigator and detective.

It is said that he drank somewhat and had an uneasy disposition, which led him to his rovings. According to the police description he is a big man in weight, running 230 pounds to his 5 feet and 10 inches. His age is given as 47 years.

NORMA COOK'S HISTORY

Miss Norma Cook, whose father, J. Norman Cook, killed William E. Bradway, according to Bradway's dying statement, because of his friendship for the girl and her mother, was for several months a pupil at the Gregg School of Shorthand, and it was the authorities of the school who first notified the father that his daughter was receiving "too much attention from an elderly man."

"The girl left this school on April 12," said the superintendent. "I understand the father wanted her to stay and study but that the mother did not. I never saw the mother, however, and never knew her. All the school's dealings were with the girl's father.

"I received reports that Miss Cook was meeting a man on the street—an elderly man. At first the reports were that he was taking her to dinner quite frequently. Later there were other reports. Then I reported the matter to the father. We make such reports when necessary both for the protection of the school and the girls who attend. If the old gentleman is in difficulties I am sorry to hear it."

Asked to Leave Lodgings.

The girl from last October until February of this year lived with her mother in rooms they rented from Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Hughes at 5430 Kimbark avenue. These people, who asked that their names be withheld, said they had a disagreement with the mother and daughter and asked them to leave their lodgings and seek quarters elsewhere.

"Mr. Cook used to come here often, to visit his wife and daughter, although he and his wife were living apart," Mrs. Hughes said. "He was extremely fond of his daughter and I often heard him declare that he would 'kill' a man who harmed his daughter.

"Mr. Cook told me his mother was burned to death years ago and that he was almost burned to death at the same time. I think with his efforts to induce his wife to come and live with him and with that old trouble on his mind he was mentally unbalanced. I know he grieved a great deal. I think he once told me he wanted his wife and daughter to come and live with him in a small town where they would be away from the lures of the city."

It was learned that Mr. Cook formerly lived at 4420 Champlain avenue with his wife and daughter, and that when he was separated from his wife he moved his effects to an apartment at 335 Garfield boulevard. It was at the Garfield boulevard address that he lived while Mrs. Cook and her daughter roomed in Kimbark avenue.

Calls Girl "Haughty."

It was learned that Miss Cook at one time attended the Hyde Park High school and that she was a member of the glee club of the school. She also took parts in operettas given by the students.

Vincent Connolly of 5540 Kimbark avenue, a student who attended the school with her, declared she was "haughty" and cared little for the boys of her classes.

Prof. Hiram B. Loomis, principal of the Hyde Park High school, and his daughter, Emily, remembered Miss Cook. Miss Loomis declared Miss Cook played basketball and was athletically inclined, as well as talented in a musical way. Miss Loomis identified the picture of Miss Cook shown her by a TRIBUNE reporter.

"Yes, that's Norma Cook," Miss Loomis said. "She looked just like that when she attended high school."

MR. BRADWAY OF THE LOOP

Bradway started out in life as one [illegible] blessed. He married Miss Mae Smith, daughter of J. N. Smith, who made millions and fame by discovering the rich veins of ore that built up Goldfield, Nev. Smith was known as founder of the town.

A few years passed and Bradway and his wife separated. A wedding that was a great event in society resulted in a quiet divorce that hardly rippled the surface of the social seas. Mrs. Bradway went her way and Bradway, who was a member of the Hamilton club, resumed his former life there, leasing a suite of rooms.

Devoted to Business.

Soon he began to devote himself intensely to business. He apparently prospered. He became interested in various manufacturing propositions. He made ax handles, manhole covers, and various things. He became president of the Municipal Supply company, went after the business of cities, and was known as the head of the Kennedy Valve company.

Both of these concerns have offices at 1370 Carroll avenue. He recently became interested in developing a chlorinating process for cities. He had a great faith that this would make him a millionaire.

THE DANCER'S STORY

Miss Mae Hitchcock, former "social secretary" of the Dutch room at the Hotel Stratford, was a close friend, dancing teacher, and partner of Mr. Bradway, who had a penchant for dancing. They were together so often at the Stratford that, as Miss Hitchcock admits, acquaintances thought they were engaged, and a rumor of their engagement was prevalent.

"I have lost the best friend I ever had," said Miss Hitchcock last night at Mr. Bradway's home, 2819 Indiana avenue, where she had gone to remain with the dead man's nieces, who are close friends of hers.

"I met him first at the old Midway gardens, now the Edelweiss. That was five years ago, when I was only 17. I was dancing there. A boy whom I had known in my neighborhood and I were employed to start the dancing, and a girl friend of mine introduced me to Mr. Bradway. We became quite good friends.

Dancing His Passion.

"I taught him dancing, for which he had a passion. It was at once his exercise and his pleasure, and every time he met a young woman who could dance well with him he was delighted and would boast about it.

"I came to know his family and he came to know mine. About three years ago I was offered the position at the Stratford. At first I wasn't sure whether I should take it, and my mother was doubtful about it also. I didn't get the offer of the Stratford position through Mr. Bradway, but through a young man with whom I danced. However, Mr. Bradway urged me to take it and told my mother he would look after me. Consequently I took it and held it for about two years.

"I was really the manager of the Dutch room, although I was called the hostess and the social secretary. Mr. Bradway was down there a great deal of the time. He kept his word with my mother. We danced together often, and I taught him at times. I also taught dancing to a number of other people, although I never had any dancing classes.

"I never heard him talk of Miss Cook; never met or heard of Cook, and knew nothing about the family until this tragedy occurred. Mr. Bradway was a sort of uncle or guardian to me. Not legally, you know, but really, that is the way he acted."

Miss Hitchcock lives with her mother, Mrs. W. S. Hitchcock, a widow, at 4326 Lake Park avenue. She supports her mother, she says. Since she left the Stratford she has been doing Red Cross work without pay. She drives her own motor car.

THE CASHIER'S ROMANCE

Less than an hour before he was stabbed to death, Mr. Bradway told Miss Celia Munger, cashier in the Little Hungary restaurant, 117 North Dearborn street, owned by Alex Schwartz, good-by. They parted at Madison street and Wabash avenue.

Miss Munger told the story to a reporter for THE TRIBUNE last night. She explained that often, perhaps four nights a week, since last February, Bradway had called for her when she quit her day's work.

"Sometimes we would go to the theater or a motion picture show or to some summer park, where we would have refreshments and maybe dance a bit. On the night of his death he ate his supper at Mr. Schwartz's restaurant, as he often did.

No Thought of Love.

"I got through work at 7:30 and he waited for me. We went to the movies and from there direct to Madison street and Wabash avenue, where we said good night. He took one street car and I took another.

"We were just friends, that was all. Mr. Bradway made it plain to me from the start that he was not a marrying man and had no thought of love or anything like that.

"In fact, he was one of the most strictly proper persons I ever knew. Sometimes he talked of his business plans and recently remarked that he was on the verge of success. I never heard him mention Miss Cook but once or twice."

THE PICTURE SIDE OF THE BRADWAY MYSTERY

In the oval is Miss Norma Cook, whose father is being sought as the slayer of Bradway. The photograph is taken from a class book of Hyde Park High school, where she was a pupil. She is in Columbus, Kas., prostrated by news of the slaying. Her mother insists Cook had no cause to object to Bradway's attentions to the girl.

To the right is Miss Celia Munger, cashier at Schwartz's restaurant in North Dearborn street. She says Bradway was with her less than an hour before he was fatally stabbed.

STORY OF THE KILLING

Friend of Slain Man Describes Incidents That Aroused His Suspicions Night of Tragedy.

Bradway, who went home often along toward midnight, had a habit of dropping into the corner drug store of John G. Mick, 2843 Indiana avenue, not far from his home, for a chat and a cooling drink.

The night Bradway was stabbed [Thursday night] a stranger appeared at the store ahead of him, Mr. Mick and his employés said yesterday. The man seemed a bit nervous, telephoned a couple of times, and seemed watchful. That caused them to take special notice of him. A suspicion that something was wrong grew in their minds, and their first thought was of a possible holdup.

They noticed that the man was perhaps 50 years old; Cook is 47. They noticed that the stranger wore a dark suit and a straw hat; Cook, according to the police, wore a dark suit and a Panama hat when last seen.

Bradway Comes and Goes.

Shortly before 11 p. m. the man stepped out. A few minutes later Bradway came in, passed a joke or two, drank his accustomed soda, and walked out.

"A few minutes later Bradway came staggering back into the drug store," said Mr. Mick. "As he sagged in his steps he cried: 'I'm cut. Get that fellow.' Two clerks pursued the man, but he escaped in the darkness.

"A woman who came into the drug store—I don't know who she was—assisted us in trying to stop the bleeding from his wounds while the ambulance was on its way from the hospital. Just before Mr. Bradway went out he remarked with a smile that he had sold 800 tickets to the government war exposition.'"

Dying Man Names Cook.

At the Michael Reese hospital, where Bradway was taken, he made an ante-mortem statement naming Cook as the man who stabbed him. He also said he had feared Cook for a long time and had avoided him.

Just before he sank into unconsciousness he told Detective Sergeant McCarthy:

"J. Norman Cook stabbed me. He is the father of Miss Norma Cook, 19 years old. I met Miss Cook in Kansas City and often was in her company here in Chicago, until her father interfered. I knew Miss Cook only in a social way. There never was anything between us. You may find Cook at 27 South Halsted street."

Taking Up the Trail.

The police went to the Halsted street address. They found it was a rooming house run by Mrs. W. R. Pottgeiser, the wife of a property man with a traveling theatrical company. Mrs. Pottgeiser said Cook was a friend of her husband and had been there occasionally. She said she had not seen him for several days.

She added the information that her husband, skilled in packing and moving goods as a result of his profession, and being a friend of the Cooks, had helped both Mr. and Mrs. Cook pack their belongings when they separated some time ago.

Pottgeiser, property man with the "Friendly Enemies" company, was found last night in Indianapolis at the Murat theater, where the company was closing a run of one week. He admitted he had known Cook for ten years or more. He added:

"I know nothing of Cook's troubles. He never discussed the matter with me and I never heard him mention Bradway's name. I have kept somewhat in touch with Cook because he often has had mail come to my address.

"As an investigator for the railroad he was often away for days at a time and I would hold his mail for him or forward it to him at his request."

DENIES REPORT GOVERNOR GOT A "MICKY FINN"

Rumors were circulated through the loop yesterday that Gov. M. G. Brumbaugh of Pennsylvania and seven or eight of his friends were "micky finned" while dining in the Union League club at a dinner given for him Wednesday night. According to the rumor, all of the party were able to leave the club after the first effects of the supposed drug had worn off.

At the club it was denied that such a thing had happened, George H. Robinson, manager of the club, explaining that since July the men waiters had been let out and women now have their places. The club adheres to the "no tip" rule.

Thompson Answer to Roosevelt Due Tuesday

Mayor Thompson last night indicated that his speech in reply to former President Roosevelt is almost ready for delivery.

Almost a week ago Col. Roosevelt said that Mayor Thompson's election would be "a calamity" and would bring satisfaction to Germany. The mayor says that he has sent the former president three telegrams asking whether he was correctly quoted.

"Up to this time he has not answered," he told an audience last night at 6414 South Halsted street.

"If he does not deny the interview before next Tuesday morning I shall take it for granted that he was faithfully quoted in the Chicago dailies and in my address next Tuesday evening at Arcadia hall I shall discuss the published interview and expose the real source and motive of the statements credited to him."

LENINE, PREMIER OF BOLSHEVIKI, IS SHOT TWICE

Attack Made in Moscow; Americans Flee from Russian Capital.

LONDON, Aug. 31.—Nikolai Lenine, the Bolshevik premier, was wounded in two places when he was fired at by an assailant in Moscow yesterday afternoon, according to wireless dispatches reaching here from Moscow tonight.

One of the bullets penetrated a little above the shoulder blade, entering the chest and touching the lung. It caused a congestion of blood in the pleura. This bullet stopped on the right side of the neck, over the shoulder blade.

People's Commissary Slain.

The patient, it was stated, is conscious. His pulse is 104.

[Recent dispatches declared Lenine and Trotzky, his foreign minister, had fled to Kronstadt, the strong naval fortress near Petrograd. This was at least the third time that attempts have been made to kill Lenine.]

Moses Uritzky, people's commissary for home affairs at Petrograd, has been assassinated. The assassins, according to Russian advices received through Berlin, were arrested.

AMERICANS QUIT MOSCOW.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 31.—Ninety-five Americans, including all consular officers except Consul General Poole, all the personnel of the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A., representatives of the American bank and a number of private citizens left Moscow for Petrograd on a special train the evening of Aug. 26. American interests previously had been turned over to the Swedish consulate.

With the Americans were the Italian military mission, a party of seventy-one persons.

In belated dispatches received today from Mr. Poole himself, the last dated Aug. 26, the consul general reiterated his intention of remaining in Moscow to give moral support to his British and French colleagues, held by the Bolshevik government.

ALLIES WIN 3 DAYS' BATTLE.

LONDON, Aug. 31.—The Daily Mail's Harbin (Manchuria) correspondent, telegraphing Thursday regarding the situation in Siberia, says the Bolshevik forces were defeated in a three days' battle along the Ussuri river, losing 400 men killed. The correspondent adds that the Bolshevik troops are fleeing toward Khaboravsk and that the Japanese have occupied Iman, midway between Nikol and Khaboravsk.

[Earlier Vladivostok reports said the allied troops had advanced fifteen miles. The wounded were cared for by the United States medical corps.]

North Russians [illegible]
Allied Army to D[illegible]

ARCHANGEL, Thursday, Aug. 29.—[By the Associated Press.]—More entente allied troops are needed to aid in forming a screen behind which a new Russia may be formed to join Russia's allies in the war on Germany, Nicholas Vasilovitch Tschaikovsky, president of the new "sovereign government of the northern region of Russia," told the Associated Press today.

It was the first interview accorded by the president to a representative of the foreign press. M. Tschaikovsky frankly discussed the position, history, and aims of the new government.

"We want to restore the eastern front against Germany together with the allies," M. Tschaikovsky said. "We thought the only way to do so, in addition to the agitation of our own people, would be to have a firm military basis and screen to work behind and to protect us from immediate attacks by the Germans and the Bolsheviki.

Must Move Quickly.

"We understood perfectly well under the circumstances and demoralization that it would be impossible to restore our own army in a short space of time without having the nucleus of a disciplined force upon which we could rely in case of necessity.

"Therefore, we required a screen in the shape of at least some allied forces. We have some, but we need to move quickly, and, therefore, we certainly need more allied troops."

M. Tschaikovsky explained that the government does not rely exclusively on the troops of the allies.

"We have our own forces," he said. "In the short space of a few days, with the aid of the allies, we recruited in Archangel alone over 1,000 men. We naturally expect American aid. We need soldiers, food and agricultural machinery from America, and if the Japanese finally decide to come from the east they are welcome, too. We should like Americans to come with them.

Government Born in Moscow.

"We decided to begin the government in the north, because we felt that the allies could best help us there. As at present formed, our government includes the provinces of Archangel, Murman, Vologda, Vyatka, and the northern part of Novgorod. Perhaps Yaroslav and Kostroma will join us.

"The idea of our government was born at Moscow. We include all groups except the extreme left and the Monarchists. Siberia already has a similar government and soon our troops will form regional governments in central, eastern, and southern Russia. We are ready to join in some sort of federation and then call a constituent assembly.

"All the members of our government were members of the former constituent assembly, which was elected by the people. We call ourselves a sovereign, instead of provisional, government because we believe in the need of firm authori[illegible] tions."

M. Tsc[illegible] aid he [illegible] th Russian pe[illegible] re capable o[illegible] re publican for[illegible] of government, despit the general illiteracy, and cited the suc cess of the village government. "Th leaders of our group, including myself were in constant danger of arrest an had many narrow escapes before allie came to our aid," he said.

M. Tschaikovsky, venerable and wit the white beard of the typical Russian was born in Vyatka province in 185 His father was a landowner and he i a distant relative of the composer o the same name. As a student in Petro grad he engaged in revolutionary prop aganda. He fled to America, where h lived from 1875 to 1879, and then t England, where he was a refugee fo twenty-eight years. He returned t Russia in 1907 and was arrested, bu was acquitted.

M. Tschaikovsky later visited America again on a lecture tour. Sinc he has been in Russia he has been di recting coöperative societies, which h believes will prove the real basis of a new commercial Russia.

Asks Financial Help.

A delegation of members of the new "sovereign government of the north region of Russia, "headed" by President Tschaikovsky, conferred to day with David R. Francis, the American ambassador, and the other am bassadors here as to the probability of the allies aiding the new govern ment financially.

The government has been handi capped considerably by the last act of the late Soviet government, which was the removal of all the availabl currency in the banks.

At a point about seventy-five miles south of Archangel there is considerable military resistance facing the Russian-allied forces. This hostile force is composed mostly of Lettish mercenaries of the Soviet government and is equipped with artillery.

An attempt upon the life of a British general has been made at Murman (in the Archangel district), according to a dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph from Copenhagen, quoting a Moscow telegram.

Francis Visits Wounded Yank.

ARCHANGEL, Saturday, Aug. 24.—[By the Associated Press.]—David R. Francis, American ambassador to Russia, visited the hospital today to see the first American bluejacket wounded during the fighting along the Russian front. The lad, who was shot through the arm, said that he was anxious to get back into the fight.

Form Compromise Government.

TOKIO, Aug. 28.—[Delayed.]—Organization of a new compromise government, with autonomy for Siberia, was announced officially here today. The compromise was effected by Gen. Horvath, who is organizing a coalition cabinet. It is expected here that Horvath will become premier and some Vladivostok man will be named foreign minister.

NTI-WAR CRY AYOR'S START N SENATE RACE

hat Failed, and Now Thompson's Shout Is "Persecution."

Lundin the Real Power.

Thompsonism in politics is nothing re than the reflection of Lundin. l is the mirror; Fred the image. ny cowpuncher, after the second ass, will admit that. It's elementary a proposition in local politics; axio- atic, you might almost say. In con- ering the Thompson campaign, Lun- n cannot be left out of the picture. ith his flowing tie, low-cut vest, and non tinted goggles, he is foreground d background, the directing mind d the controlling intelligence.

Lundin by nature is a showman. He rries the patent medicine tent meth s into politics. His chief idea is to ake an impression that leaves a real nt. His was the idea of getting the edge cards—some of them not copied t of the telephone book—and pulling em off the Christmas tree for Thomp- n at his mayoralty debut four years o.

He has developed to the full the old ick of marching the street manicures d the shepherds of the alley ash cans to a hall to put on a demonstration r the candidate. Anything to make impression. The portable audience, o, is in the bag of tricks, the audi- ce that can be taken from hall to ll to fill the chairs and to pump in a t of enthusiasm.

Uses Ancient Tricks.

The bally-hoo, of course, is an im- rtant instrumentality. Lundin had rned this in the old camp twenty ars ago. He was a prize pupil of one the old masters.

It was the Lincoln Leaguers who in- duced the Little Red Riding Hood ff into Chicago politics. The wolf s always seeking to gobble them, so ey said. Injured innocence was their ance. They grew pathetic before au- iences. To hear them talk they might ave been early Christians tossed to e lions. The Caruso sob had not een invented then, but the machine pellbinders could pull sobs clear from heir shoetops to their Adam's apples. he "under dogs kicked by every boot- eel"—that was how they pictured hemselves.

The "newspaper trust," "press persecution," "malicious misrepresenta- ion by the papers," these are all rock- ng horses first used on the old guard merry-go-round. The word "camou- lage" was unknown in those days, but he machine practiced the art long before it became known to the world at arge. "Deny everything" was the motto. Lundin even denies that he is n politics. "I'm only a poor poultry farmer," he always says. He has said t so often that he believes it himself— almost.

Old Trick Bag Out Again.

All this antique mummery of "persecution" now finds its full recrudescence in the Thompson campaigning. The methods are the same old ones Lundin learned while serving his apprenticeship in politics. Lincoln was one name they always sought to monopolize. Thompson has added George Washington.

Originally, as already stated, the Thompson campaigning was to be based on the theory that the war would prove "unpopular." The superior intelligence figured that conscription would lead to resentment. When the boys got to the cantonments, it was judged at "City Hall No. 3," there would be much dissatisfaction, and when the expeditionary forces went overseas there would be unrest and an anti-war reflex. So, at the start, the city hall politics was put on an anti-war basis.

All this is revealed in Thompson's bleatings against conscription, in his "bleeding heart" shriekings about a "food famine" unless an embargo were put on food exports, and by his astonishing proposal that America should fight Germany by keeping the army and navy at home.

In the early years of the war he had suggested an embargo on the shipment of munitions. Was he playing politics with the German vote? Well, every kaiserite in the country was yelling for a munitions embargo. It was part of the Teutonic propaganda.

Thompson's Mainstays.

The mayor's advisers, early in the game, were confident that he would develop great strength from the following elements:

The pro-Germans.
The pacifists.
Part of the Socialists.
The German element of the wets.
The anti-Wilson Democrats.
The anti-war Republicans.
The anti-draft forces!

Of course, they now yell that all this talk of Thompson as an anti-war man is a "misrepresentation," but it so happens that these very sentiments are echoed in the acts and writings of the city hall camp. The Thompson forces put up their leader in the city council, former Alderman M. A. Michaelson, as their candidate for congress against Congressman Niels Juul, who they said had promised to vote against war, but didn't.

In his flag day proclamation of March 30, 1917, three days before President Wilson asked congress to declare the existence of a state of war with Germany, Mayor Thompson, rolling his eyes, urged that the people guard against turning preparedness into "a hysterical demand that we depart from the walks of peace to engage in war."

"There will be an awful weight of responsibility on those who send the glorious young manhood of America to foreign battlefields like sheep to the shambles," the proclamation said.

Far Behind the Times.

At this time Germany had been operating its unrestricted submarine warfare for two months; the "overt act" had been perpetrated; diplomatic relations with Germany had been severed; Count von Bernstorff had been dismissed; armed forces had been placed on all American merchant ships sailing through the war zone; the Zimmermann note had been revealed containing Germany's proposals to Mexico that they make war together on the United States, Germany to furnish the funds and Mexico to get Texas, Arizona, and New Mexico. Everybody knew the United States would declare its acceptance of the state of war forced upon us by the kaiser, yet Thompson was mumbling about a "hysterical demand."

And on April 26, 1917, twenty days after we had declared war, Thompson in a long message to the people said of conscription:

"I am unalterably opposed to a draft for the purpose of forcing our young men into the trenches of Europe."

The Republican, the mayor's mouthpiece, on May 12, more than a month after America entered the war, said among other things:

"We doubt if the declaration of war or the president's message to congress urging the war expresses the general opinion and desires of the people of the United States, the creators of congress and president. We may, of course, be mistaken, but we are strongly imbued with the idea that our entrance into the great world war at this time was unnecessary, unwise, unwarranted, and contrary to the self-interest of this country and its people."

Was that a reflection of the Thompson-Lundin views? Well, in the speech in which he launched his candidacy at the Coliseum May 25, 1918, the mayor himself said:

"I condemn the Democratic party because I sincerely believe that it was through their inability, their inefficiency, their indecision, their timidity, their wabbling diplomacy, their administrative blunders, their total inability to cope with problems of such magnitude, that we are now at war."

All the Same in Spirit.

This was uttered after we had been at war for more than a year. Where Berger and the Wisconsin Bolsheviki at the time were saying we were forced in "by the treachery of the ruling class," Thompson was saying we got in through "Democratic blunders." The difference in these two avowals lies simply in the wording, not in the spirit.

This avowal by Thompson was roundly denounced in Chicago, and the ministers of the city, led by Bishop Fallows, a brigadier general in the civil war, adopted resolutions saying the mayor "fails to see the moral issues of this world war," and that his views were deplorable "because likely to give aid and comfort to the enemy."

FOR M'CORMICK

Deneen Chairman in Seventh Ward Issues Statement on the Senatorship.

The following statement has been issued by John N. Kimball, chairman of the Deneen campaign committee of the Seventh ward, indorsing Medill McCormick for United States senator:

"I believe the time has arrived for the Republicans of this state to unite on a candidate who, in the words of our leader, Theodore Roosevelt, 'is 100 per cent American and believes in fighting this war with all possible energy and speed until we win a complete and overwhelming victory.'

"The Republican party cannot afford to have placed upon it the badge of disloyalty. Our big job in our win-the-war program is to defeat Thompson for the United States senate. There are two good candidates about whom there is no question of loyalty. Congressman Foss, representing one of the most intelligent congressional districts in the United States for twenty years, has a useful and constructive record in congress.

"The other candidate, Medill McCormick, with whom I became acquainted through my association with Capt. Charles E. Merriam, my former colleague in the city council, who is now engaged as the representative of the United States government in strengthening the morale of the Italian people, has shown himself in the state legislature and in congress as a man of ability, initiative, sterling character, with the highest ideals for public service.

"He has taken a leading part in securing social legislation and in pushing war measures. I have canvassed the situation and find McCormick is in the lead.

"I am supporting Medill McCormick for the United States senatorship because I believe he is not only well qualified but that only through uniting on him can the Republicans of Illinois make certain that the calamity of a Thompson nomination will be averted."

CHINESE RESENT SLUR ON NATION FROM THOMPSON

Representatives of the Chinese of Chicago last night sent to THE TRIBUNE a protest against Mayor Thompson's recent platform utterances against their race.

"To get a little cheap applause and to gain possibly a few votes," read the letter, "he insults the Chinese citizens by sneering at them as 'living on rats and rice.' Such language is worthy only of 'Sand Lot' Kearney, who led the hoodlums of San Francisco in their physical assaults on the Chinese in the '80s. Mayor Thompson's abusive tirade should be condemned by every true American.

"The Chinese have an army in Siberia and thousands of Chinese are enrolled in the United States army and fighting under the flag."

The letter was signed by Fong Sui Hong, a student of the University of Chicago, and Chu Su Gunn, former editor in chief of the Mun Hey Weekly of New York.

Chicagoans Win Straps at Camp Dodge School

Washington, D. C., Aug. 31.—The following Chicagoans have completed their courses in the fourth officers' training school at Camp Dodge, Ia., and are commissioned as second lieutenants of infantry:

William W. Herbert, corporal, 163d depot brigade, 2438 Jackson boulevard.

Sergt. P. Wild, private, 163d depot brigade, 5533 University avenue.

MAYOR INJECTS POLITICS INTO HIS LABOR MEMORIAL

Into his Labor day proclamation, issued yesterday, Mayor Thompson injected some of the political material he has been using in his campaign speeches. At his noonday meetings he has appealed to the workingman with an attack upon advocates of the importation of Chinese labor, saying that the Chinese "live on rats and rice."

"From the days of imperial Rome down to the present," reads a part of the proclamation, "great wealth in the hands of a privileged few has proved a menace to every nation, a cancer gnawing at its heart, and the greatness of Rome faded, her power vanished, and decay set in when a wealthy class seized control of the government, when luxury and ease were exalted, when honest labor was looked upon with contempt and hordes of slaves were imported—as some of our present day profiteers would import droves of pauper Chinese to compete with the labor of freemen and citizens."

Chicago's mayors have issued Labor day proclamations annually for many years, but there is no previous instance on record in which this appeal was turned into political propaganda.

Mrs. Woodworth: Letter from Henry at Red Cross

The envelope bears upon its face several reforwarding marks, having been sent to Freeport, Rockford, and lastly to Evanston.

In order to relieve the anxiety which this mother probably feels, the Red Cross asks that readers of this notice who may know her whereabouts communicate at once with the bureau of publicity, room 511 Garland building.

The members of the Students' Army Training corps will be "soldiers on active duty." WILSON ORDERS 'VICTORY DRAFT' FOR 13,000,000

All Men in 18-45 Class Must Register Names on Sept. 12.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 31.—[Special.]—Pledging the nation to a "decisive victory of arms" by the mobilization of its full military man power, President Wilson signed the bill extending the draft age limits to include all men between the ages of 18 and 45 years this afternoon, and issued a proclamation fixing Sept. 12 as a day of registration.

The registration ordered by the president will be the third held this year and the fourth since the draft policy was adopted. It is estimated by army officers that 12,780,000 between the ages of 18 and 45, and probably more than 13,000,000, will be enrolled by this registration, which, added to the numbers previously enrolled, will raise the total number of Americans registered for military duty to approximately 24,000,000 men. Illinois' quota under the new draft is estimated at 859,834.

Regulations by Provost Marshal General Crowder for classification and summons of the new classes of registrants will be issued soon. It is planned to begin classification immediately after registration, so that the first men of the 18 to 45 class may be called to the colors soon after Oct. 1 and a steady movement of men to camp may be continued throughout the fall and winter.

All Must Register.

The hours of registration will be from 7 a. m. to 9 p. m., and all state and local officials are called on to make immediate arrangements for maintenance of registration places on that day.

All men within the new ages, whether citizens of the United States or not, must register, unless they are diplomatic or consular representatives of foreign nations.

In case of illness on the registration day, arrangements for tardy enrollment may be made with local boards, and men who expect to be absent from their homes may register by mail, sufficiently in advance that the registration record reaches the board by Sept. 12. If a man has no permanent residence he is to register at the place he is on Sept. 12 and those out of the country on that day are required to enroll within five days after their return.

Call 18 Year Olds Last.

Youths in their 18th year will be placed in a separate group, the war department has announced, to be subject to a special educational program, and will not be called until the supply of other available men in the new classes is exhausted. This does not mean that their calling will be long deferred, however, inasmuch as it has been announced that all men in the new registration accepted for general service will be under arms by June 30, 1919.

The man power bill makes no specific provision for separate classification of 18 year old boys and war department plans for their treatment have been made on executive initiative.

Apply Work or Fight Rule.

Although the "work or fight" clause which would have affected striking workmen was taken out of the bill before passage yesterday, Provost Marshal Gen. Crowder has planned to apply vigorously existing regulations relating to idle men or those engaged in nonessential employment to the newly registered men.

The man power bill was signed today by the presiding officers of the house and senate and sent to the White House for the president's signature, which made the measure law. The president at once signed and issued the proclamation carrying the new draft provisions into action.

The President's Proclamation.

After citing the law and stating the regulations for registration, the president's proclamation reads as follows:

"Fifteen months ago the men of the country from 21 to 30 years of age were registered. Three months ago and again this month those who had just reached the age of 21 were added. It now remains to include all men between the ages of 18 and 45.

"This is not a new policy. A century and a quarter ago it was deliberately ordained by those who were then responsible for the safety and defense of the nation that the duty of military service should rest upon all able bodied men between the ages of 18 and 45. We now accept and fulfill the obligation which they established, an obligation expressed in our national statutes from that time until now. We solemnly purpose a decisive victory of arms and deliberately to devote the larger part of the military man power of the nation to the accomplishment of that purpose.

Lauds Younger Soldiers.

"The younger men have from the first been ready to go. They have furnished voluntary enlistments out of all proportion to their numbers. Our military authorities regard them as having the highest combatant qualities. Their youthful enthusiasm, their virile eagerness, their gallant spirit of daring make them the admiration of all who see them in action. They covet not only the distinction of serving in this great war, but also the inspiring memories which hundreds of thousands of them will cherish through the years to come, of a great day and a great service for their country and for mankind.

"By the men of the older group now called upon the opportunity now opened to them will be accepted with the calm resolution of those who realize to the full the deep and solemn significance of what they do. Having made a place for themselves in their respective communities, having assumed at home the graver responsibilities of life in many spheres, looking back upon honorable records in civil and industrial life, they will realize as perhaps no others could how entirely their own fortunes and the fortunes of all whom they love are put at stake in this war for right, and will know that the very records they have made render this new duty the commanding duty of their lives.

"They know how surely this is the nation's war, how imperatively it demands the mobilization and massing of all our resources of every kind. They will regard this call as the supreme call of their day, and will answer it accordingly.

Only Part Will Be Called.

"Only a portion of those who register will be called upon to bear arms. Those who are not physically fit will be excused; those exempted by alien allegiance; those who should not be relieved of their present responsibilities; above all those who cannot be spared from the civil and industrial tasks at home upon which the success of our armies depends as much as upon the fighting at the front. But all must be registered in order that the selection for military service may be made intelligently and with full information.

"This will be our final demonstration of loyalty, democracy, and the will to win, our solemn notice to all the world that we stand absolutely together in a common resolution and purpose. It is the call to duty to which every true man in the country will respond with pride and with the consciousness that in doing so he plays his part in vindication of a great cause at whose summons every true heart offers its supreme service."

Chicago Officials Appeal to U. S. for Change of Draft Because of Primary Day Before

So hopeless appeared the chances of handling the 18 to 45 draft registry in Cook county and the state on Sept. 12, the day after the primaries, with any degree of efficiency, that election and other officials, who foresee that the primary machinery will be wholly exhausted by the work on the primaries the day and night of Sept. 11, decided to appeal to Provost Marshall General Crowder for a deferred date.

A conference between County Judge Thomas F. Scully and Maj. Tolman, representing the Illinois adjutant general, was held yesterday morning, and at the close of it announcement was made that telegrams had been formulated and sent to Gen. Crowder and to Representative A. J. Sabath at the capital, stating the conditions existing here.

Appeals to Patriotism.

The following reply was received by Judge Scully from Representative Sabath last night:

"Sept. 12 has been agreed upon and Provost Marshal General Crowder and the board are of the opinion no more suitable date can be selected, and request you to lay the matter before the judges and clerks, believing they will gladly put in two days in succession in this great cause and thus strengthen the forces across the sea."

Will Appeal Further.

Appeals will be made to Provost Marshal General Crowder, Secretary Baker of the war department, and President Wilson, Judge Scully said after receiving this telegram, to grant Illinois another date if it can be done without confusing the general plan of registration.

"I have already taken the matter up with Adjt. Gen. Dickson at Springfield," said the judge, "and will have a conference with him and with Maj. E. B. Tolman Monday on this subject. The whole state is affected like Chicago and the registration will be an immense task under the circumstances. We no longer have the great body of volunteer helpers who gave such great aid in the big registration last year. Many of them are in the army or in army camps and most of the rest are scattered."

Would Result in Failure.

To attempt the working of the primary forces, either on Sept. 12 or on the same day as the primaries, Judge Scully said, would mean that the registration would be a failure.

"It would be a physical impossibility for election judges, after having put in one day and night in the polling places, to give any assistance in the registration," Judge Scully said. "A suggestion was made that we hold the election and registration on the same day, but that would never do. It would mean that both the registration and the election would be a failure because the judges and clerks would not have the time to attempt to do double duty.

"I can see only one way out of the dilemma, and that is a change of date of draft registry for Illinois. I do not believe there would be time for the draft boards to get an independent organization together to handle all the work in the short time that intervenes."

Egan Also Skeptical.

"We had sent to every owner of a polling place and to every election judge," said Chief Clerk Egan, "a request that they report to the draft board within their territory and volunteer for the service. We had furnished each draft board with the names of all judges and addresses of all polling places and meetings had been arranged by all draft boards to instruct the election judges on the work of registering. We believe the registration will not be properly conducted unless the date is changed."

It had been planned to hold the various places of registration at the regular polling places, and they would be manned by election judges and clerks.

Men for Motor School.

Four men from each draft board in Chicago will be sent today to the old South Division High school at Twenty-sixth street and Wabash avenue, where automobile repair work and driving are taught. The men have been chosen because of previous experience in automobile work and will be given a course lasting about eight weeks. At the end of this time they will be sent to various contonments to instruct other drafted men in similar work.

LABOR READY FOR MARCH TO TUNE OF 'WIN THE WAR'

Last Details Perfected for Toilers' Greatest Demonstration.

Every preliminary preparation for the greatest labor demonstration in the history of the country is almost ready. By tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock, when the great parade starts north at Michigan avenue and Monroe street, swinging from Grant park under the memorial arch which spans the Monroe street entrance, there will not be a single detail lacking.

At that hour the bands which will take part in the procession, massed to the number of 1,300 pieces, will play "The Star Spangled Banner," cannon will boom, and the veil covering the great arch will be withdrawn. Simultaneously—to the moment—loyal labor will be in motion to demonstrate to Chicago and the world that the slogan adopted for this Labor day by the St. Paul convention of the American Federation of Labor last June—"Win the War for Freedom"—is not an idle phrase.

250,000 to March.

Two hundred and fifty thousand working men and women, marching afoot, and with accompanying floats representing the part they are playing in supplying the nation with its war needs, will press the pavements of Chicago, every step a firm and proud one, taken for the glory of their crafts and their nation.

The parade will proceed north to Madison street; west in Madison street to State street; north in State street to Randolph street; west in Randolph street to La Salle street; south in La Salle street to Monroe street; east in Monroe street to Clark street; north in Clark street to Madison street; east in Madison street to Dearborn street; south in Dearborn street to Adams street; east in Adams street to State state; south in State street to Jackson boulevard; west in Jackson boulevard past the reviewing stand at the south end of the postoffice, to Franklin street, where it will disband.

Five Hours to Pass Point.

Because of the machinelike regularity and precision with which the parade is expected to move, it is estimated that, despite its hugeness—it will be over six miles long—it will be able to pass any given point in between five and six hours. The last division, therefore, is expected to be at the point of disbandment by 3 o'clock in the afternoon, allowing ample time for labor to open the war exposition on the lake front.

The parade will consist of between fifteen and seventeen divisions. Up to last night fifteen had been provided for, with the understanding that any belated entries would be care for in two additional emergency divisions. Each division will be composed of from 3,500 to 62,000 marchers, who will march twelve abreast and thirty-five inches apart.

The grand marshal will be Simon O'Donnell, and the marshals of the various divisions are:

1—Peter Shaughnessy.
2—William White.
3—Edward Ryan.
4—Thos. Kearney.
5—Harvey Raven.
6—Jos. Moreschi.
7—George Jones.
8—L. P. Lindeloff.
9—William Quessl.
10—Thomas O'Brien.
11—E. McQuillan.
12—John Sheridan.
13—Dennis Lane.
15—P. F. Coffey.

Notables Arrive Today.

Several distinguished visitors to the city to take part in the demonstration will arrive today. The Belgian minister, E. de Cartier, is expected this morning. He will be the guest of Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor, at Lake Forest, during his stay. Gen. Guglielmotti, military attaché to the Italian embassy and representative of the Italian ambassador, will arrive this morning and will be met by Lieut. David Constantini, and later by a delegation from the Labor day committee.

Gen. Paul Vignal, chief of the French military mission to this country, with his staff, will arrive at the Union station at 8:53, and will be driven to the South Shore Country club for luncheon as the guest of Everett C. Brown, president of the club and chairman of the Labor day reception committee.

Coach and Four to Be Used.

The party will make the trip over the south side boulevards in an old fashioned four-in-hand coach, driven by John R. Thompson, attired in a stage driver's typical red coat. This, because of the fuel saving edict forbidding the use of motor cars on the streets on Sundays.

The coach will be preceded by couriers and outriders on horseback, and the party will stop at the Blackstone hotel, there to be joined by Gen. Guglielmotti and Count Bolognesi, Italian consul to Chicago. All of the distinguished guests, as well as representative men of the city, will occupy the reviewing stand, where prizes will be awarded to those floats in the parade which are deemed the best.

If is estimated that, in addition to the representatives of other nations and other noted guests, there will be more than 100,000 visitors in the city.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 31.—[Special.]—Henry Ford, Michigan's multimillionaire Democratic candidate for the United States senate, and just defeated for the Republican nomination to the same office, was nominated today for charter membership in "The Ancient and Distinguished Order of Dependent Fathers" by Senator Sherman of Illinois.

The nomination was in order, Senator Sherman explained to the senate, because of the exemption of Edsel Ford, son of the Michigan candidate, from military service. In a speech of biting sarcasm, the senator attacked the exemption of Young Ford and pronounced the elder Ford unfit for public office.

Incidentally, the senator took a whack at the representative of federal trade commission on the investigation of the packing industry. He compared the hostile attitude of the administration toward the packers with its friendship for Mr. Ford, whom he charged with "shameless profiteering."

Critic of "Indispensable."

Taking up the exemption of Edsel, Senator Sherman said:

"Mr. Ford's son is 23 years of age. Without any express exemption by superior authority such conditions have been created that he has not been mustered into the service. It is upon the plea, upon various procedures held before different circumlocution officers in various parts of the country reaching all the way from Detroit to Washington, that the son is indispensable to the father in the management of the factory and that the factory has a large war contract.

"It would be a shameless waste of man power and brains to elect the father to the senate and let the burden and the mantle of the entire business fall upon a 23 year old stripling in the person of young Ford. So I think the best thing would be to muster the son into the service, as his neighbors' sons have been sent, as my relatives, and your relatives, have been sent, of proper draft age, and to claim no privileges of that kind; to let the son go where he can bear the usual burden without regard to parentage, or social standing or wealth, and let the father, the original charter member of the Club of Dependent Fathers in the United States, remain in charge of his factory."

Takes an Only Son.

Senator Sherman said the draft had taken the only son of his deceased law partner.

"The blood of young Ford is no better than the blood of my partner's son," Senator Sherman said. "No better than the blood of my relatives or your relatives in the service."

Senator Sherman next took up Mr. Ford's announcement that he would turn all his war profits over to the treasury department and remarked that it would help undo some of the damage he had done as a pacifist and anti-preparedness advocate.

"Recently he has expressed the willingness to cover all of the profit into the treasury," said the senator. "He is not the first candidate I have known to forego all profit connected with any public transaction. The courts of several states have said that such promises are as morally reprehensible and as full of turpitude as a man who goes out and buys an individual vote on election day, and they have condemned without stint such offers made to release lawful profits or fees in consideration of the releasor being engaged in a strenuous campaign for election to public office. I would have thought more of the atonement of Mr. Ford if he, out of the generosity of his system and the goodness of his heart, had released all his profits before he became a candidate.

"If the packers made as much off the public as Ford does off the government they would average $450,000,000 of profit during the pre-war period of 1915, 1916, and 1917, instead of the $140,000,000 complained of by the trade commission in those three years. Ford is public benefactor for making three times as much as the packers; a public benefactor taking more than three times the profit charged to the packers by the commission, and then becomes fit to be a candidate for senator of not one party, which may be pardoned, or be put in a position where he can be elected."

Thomas Against Election.

Senator Thomas of Colorado interrupted Senator Sherman.

"I think Mr. Ford can be of much more benefit to the country where he is than he could be in the senate," said Senator Thomas, "and for that reason I should be sorry to see him elected; but I think in justice to Mr. Ford, in view of what the senator has just said, I would perhaps be excused for making public a private conversation which I had with Mr. Ford during the first week of last June, on which occasion he said it was his intention to cover back into the treasury of the United States all the profit that he would make in government work during the war. That was before he became a candidate."

Senator Sherman replied: "Before he became a candidate? I am glad to hear it. It somewhat purifies his motive. Let me see. Ten per cent of the amount I have named will be $30,000,000. In a small measure that will help undo the damage he did when he was a pacifist before we entered the war, and even after we entered the war, and before he experienced a change of heart. It will not, however, remove him from the group of dependent fathers."

The object of this department, to be run from time to time as required, is to help the families and relatives of men in the military and naval service.

It will answer questions about pay allotments, war risk insurance, government allowances, and disability compensation. It will tell the facts about leases, installment, and other contracts made by soldiers and sailors.

Address inquiries to Friend of the Soldier, "Chicago Tribune." Answers to as many as possible will be published in this department. To insure a personal reply an addressed and stamped envelope should be inclosed.

T. L.

A written request or a personal visit probably will be sufficient.

ESCAPED BANK BANDIT TRAPPED IN HIDING PLACE

Abe Shaffner, "Bad Man," Taken Without Struggle.

A soldier on furlough and a squad of policemen from the West Chicago avenue police station late yesterday trapped Abe Shaffner, escaped bank bandit and "bad man," as he was drinking a bottle of beer in a room at 1256 North Western avenue. He surrendered without a fight.

The soldier is Private Severn Nelson of the Twenty-first infantry, on furlough from San Diego, Cal. He was formerly a patrolman at West Chicago avenue. He and Patrolman Osmond Parr entered the house on the excuse of making a search for a deserter from the army, and with Capt. Thomas F. Meagher and Lieutenants Malone and Hartford, who followed soon after, captured the escaped convict. The house had been surrounded by police before they entered.

Escaped from Deputy.

Shaffner escaped from the Criminal court building Friday after knocking down Dennis Dee, deputy sheriff, who had him in charge. He fled through alleys to Larrabee street and North avenue, where he met a friend who took him to the room on Western avenue. He remained hidden there until the police trapped him. His presence in the neighborhood was discovered by Patrolman Parr, Capt. Meagher said.

Order Was "Shoot to Kill."

Shaffner was convicted of complicity in robbing the Stockmen's Trust and Savings bank of more than $10,000. When he escaped, orders were given the police to "shoot to kill" if they came upon him.

Acting Chief of Police Alcock is taking no chances with Abe. Learning of his capture, he issued an order to Chief of Dectives Mooney, who relayed it to West Chicago avenue, that a policeman with a revolver should be stationed at the door of Abe's cell and kept there continuously.

BUNNING INMATE ESCAPES.

Harry Ricter escaped from the Chicago State hospital at Dunning. He had been an inmate at intervals for two years.

SHOOTS BABY AND TWO MEN VENTING ANGER ON RIVALS

One Dead, Another Believed to Be Fatally Wounded.

One man was shot and killed, another was wounded probably fatally, and a baby was wounded slightly, when Joseph Cassini, in the transfer business at 1447 Sedgwick street, grew angry because another team was blocking an alley which he wished to enter, and vented his spite with a 38 caliber revolver. He escaped after the shooting, which occurred at 6:30 o'clock last evening.

Hage Hilgert, 34 years old, of 411 Blackhawk street, was shot in the mouth and lungs and died almost instantly.

Steve Hilgert, 37 years old, of the same address, was shot through the lungs, and at the Alexian Brothers' hospital it was said that he will die.

Bullet Grazes Baby's Lip.

Stephen Hilgert Jr., 18 months old, was slightly wounded when a bullet grazed his lip. He is the son of Steve Hilgert.

The baby was in the arms of his mother, Mrs. Margaret Hilgert, who came running down the steps at the sound of the shooting. Cassini turned the revolver on her, missed, but hit the baby.

The Hilgerts and Cassini live in the same block. The Hilgert brothers were moving furniture for Mrs. Joseph Lester, the back of whose house at 1451 Hudson street opens on the alley where the shooting occurred.

Angered by Rivals' Success.

The police believe Cassini was incensed because he had not been given the job of moving the furniture and became infuriated when he found his rivals' team blocking the alley.

George Nealin, chief operator in the office of the first deputy of police, was passing when the shooting occurred and made an attempt to trap Cassini in his house, but the Italian escaped.

Aldermen Get $83 for Smoke Fund at Meeting

Eighty-three dollars was collected for the "smoke fund" for the soldiers at an open air meeting on Congress street between Forty-first and Forty-second avenues last night. John F. Tyrrell and Aldermen T. J. Lynch and John S. Clark were the speakers.

Are you the man we are looking for?

We want a man who is familiar with finance, who is competent to serve as Treasurer of a large and rapidly growing corporation (not in Chicago) and to advise along commercial financial lines.

We want a man who is making good where he is, but who for some satisfactory reason would like to change and undertake new and interesting work which offers an unusually attractive future.

Buying a Motor Truck Is a Good Deal Like Employing a Man

¶ Buying a motor truck is a good deal like employing a man for your business.

¶ You don't want a puny little weakling who gets sick every week and lays off, because you can get him at a low salary.

¶ You want a good, strong, red-blooded man who can do something—one who will be on his job every working day of the year making money for you. And when a man makes money for you, you don't consider his salary altogether.

¶ Why not apply this same principle when you purchase a motor truck?

¶ Consider Selden Trucks. They are not low-priced trucks—but when you consider the long service they render and the low cost at which they can be operated, they are actually cheaper than low-priced trucks.

¶ Selden Trucks will keep on making money for you long after the others give out.

¶ In the complete line of 1, 2, 3½ and 5 Ton Models, there's a truck that will effect immediate economies in your business.

WAR DIRECTED COLLEGE COURSE TO BE INTENSIVE

Military Plan Cut to Two Years; Private's Pay for Students.

Rah-rah days are over for American college boys—at least for the duration of the war. College hereafter is to mean business—largely intensive preparation for the business of war.

This was brought out yesterday in a meeting at Fort Sheridan of presidents and faculty members of colleges and universities in the central department of the United States army. Col. Robert I. Rees of the general staff corps represented the war department.

Cut Course Two Years.

There is to be a lopping off of the last two years of the traditional college course and concentration on the work of the first two years. This, it was indicated by Maj. Edward W. McCaskey, camp commander at Fort Sheridan, is due to the easily predictable fact that there will be no upper classmen until the war is over. They will all be in the army.

From the deliberations of the college heads yesterday it seems probable that the quarter system, in vogue at the University of Chicago, will be universally adopted. This system admits of the colleges taking in a fresh group of men from the secondary schools every three months, at the time that a group is sent out to reserve officers' training camps or active service.

Scrap Dead Languages.

The scrapping of Greek and Latin "and other fol-de-rols," as Maj. McCaskey characterized them, is to be another result of the new system. On this point the war department has issued the following instructions:

"In view of the comparatively short time during which most of the student soldiers will remain in college and the exacting military duties awaiting them, academic instruction must necessarily be modified along lines of direct military value."

Privates' Pay for Students.

In the students' army training corps the student soldier will receive the pay of a private and will be subject to full military discipline. Such students will receive a temporary deferred classification from their draft boards. As soon as possible they will be transferred to active service.

Uniforms, rifles, and other equipment, as well as officers, are to be furnished by the government. Financial arrangements are to be made as soon as possible with the colleges for the housing, subsistence, and instruction of the student soldiers.

The exact status of the S. A. T. C. member is made clear in an extract from the war department bulletin.

Students to Be Inducted.

"All young men who were planning to go to school this fall should carry out their plans and do so," says the bulletin. "Each should go to the college of his choice, matriculate, and enter as a regular student. He will, of course, also register with his local board on the date set by the president. As soon as possible after registration day, probably on or about Oct. 1, opportunity will be given for all the regularly enrolled students to be inducted into the Students' Army Training corps at the schools where they are in attendance. Thus the corps will be organized by voluntary induction under the selective service act, instead of by enlistment as previously contemplated. The student by voluntary induction becomes a soldier in the United States army."

By this provision, it was pointed out yesterday, such students are not to be regarded as thereby evading military service, but as merely being given a little additional time, perhaps only three months—for intensive military training before entering active service.

Deferred Classification for Students.

Many of the college men who are to assist the war department in the training of the new students' corps expressed a desire to get into what they considered a more active form of service. This, however, Col. Rees made plain, would not be permitted. College instructors, he stated, were to be given a deferred classification and would not be permitted to forsake their duties even for service overseas.

Miss Lois Marie Cook of 7232 Euclid avenue will be the soloist at four card parties at the South Shore Country club on the afternoon of Sept. 10. A jackie band of sixteen pieces will give a concert. Plans are being made to accommodate 2,000 card players and music lovers.

MRS. H. M. DIXON GETS DIVORCE ON CRUELTY CHARGE

Henry Matthew Dixon, president of the Home and School Education society, 431 South Dearborn street, publishers of educational books, was sued for divorce by Mrs. Bessie Leora Dixon in the Superior court yesterday. She charges he would beat her and use vile language in the presence of their daughter, Dorothy, 6 years old. According to the bill Dixon had been married four times previous to his last marriage, and to have been divorced from the fourth wife. Dixon, according to the bill, is owner of several hundred acres of land in Oklahoma, Chicago, and Detroit, valued at $250,000, and has an annual income of between $10,000 and $15,000.

Mrs. Evangeline M. Flannery of Evanston was granted a decree of divorce from John L. Flannery Jr., vice president of the Boye Needle company, 4343 Ravenswood avenue. Cruelty was the charge.

Receiver Named for Bank Closed Up at Gary

Gary, Ind., Aug. 31.—[Special.]—Henry G. Hay Jr., president of the Gary State bank, today was appointed receiver of the Northern State bank, which was closed by the state auditor. Judge Greenwald fixed the receiver's bond at $200,000 and he will take possession of the closed bank next Tuesday. Bank Examiner Widson testified that he examined the books of the bank on Aug. 12; the deposits at that date aggregated $642,029; the assets are said to be about $800,000. The depositors, of whom there are about 1,000, have named a committee which will endeavor to reorganize the institution.

NAUGHTY AID OF UNCLE SAM GIVES BURNHAM SHOCK!

Sedate Village Says That It Can't Stand for His "Speed."

Burnham—which is considered pretty fast itself—admits it never saw such speed. So riotous were events that Mayor "Johnnie" Patton and other residents of the border line village have submitted the "speed record" in a series of affidavits filed with Attorney General Gregory at Washington. The man they name as the "speedster" is an agent of the federal bureau of investigation.

With the filing of the charges Phillip J. Barry, acting chief of the federal investigators in the absence of Hinton G. Clabaugh, came forward with a "clean bill" for the agent. He declares that Burnham is not only unscrupulous, wayward, and an eyesore, but a persistent violator of federal statutes, and is indulging in a "frameup." To which Burnham answers that the "affidavits speak for themselves."

Here's the Record.

The affidavits—half a dozen in number—record events as having happened on Aug. 17. Visits of the agent, whom Burnham says was badly "liquored," to the Speedway, Cottage Inn, and the Perfecto Bar, emporiums of amusement "on the line" figure in the story. A stolen electric fan, a case of wine, a cigar box full of money, and the disappearance of three cases of beer are also told of, as well as the smashing of windows and doors, not to speak of furniture and the breaking into a safe.

How the agent, fortified with seven drinks "of bourbon," took his friends into a resort, and, after assisting them in drinking three cases of beer—for which they offered no pay—offered two female entertainers "jobs with the Red Cross" and offered to "put them in touch with a lot of good fellows on the side," is related under oath by those women. They declare they spurned the offer. They further tell of male residents of Burnham being knocked out "for nothing," the brandishing of revolvers by the investigators, and of indecent proposals made to the women.

Say He "Cadged" Drinks.

Several nights after these riotous hours, it is claimed, the "speeding" agent again put in his appearance, and after divesting a Negro porter of a safety razor and an old raincoat, "cadged" a number of drinks and then went his way.

Mr. Barry said that the affidavits had been first presented to him, but after an investigation he had absolved the agent.

"It is a frameup, pure and simple," he declared. "Any one who tries to do good work always has such things occurring to him. I have had this particular agent tested a number of times, and if he were a 'wild man,' as is claimed, I believe I would have found it out. I have full confidence in him."

Asks for Action.

Burnham, however, has asked that the attorney general assign an outside investigator to check up the charges made in the affidavits. Its mayor and other citizens say every charge will be substantiated.

Elgin Police Arrest 11 Camp Grant "Awol." Men

Acting in accordance with a request made by the Belvidere police officials, nine Negro and two white soldiers who last night left Camp Grant without passes were apprehended at Elgin yesterday morning by the local authorities. Upon reaching the police station three of the Negroes broke away, but were recaptured after a chase of several blocks by police and citizens.

NEGRO PIONEERS DO FAST WORK IN COMBAT TRAINING

Camp Grant, Rockford, Ill., Aug. 31.—[Special.]—Chicago's second contribution to Uncle Sam's colored fighting machine in Camp Grant topped the national army rise today, when reports made by company officers of the Eight Hundred and Third pioneer infantry regiment showed that the regiment in the last six days has made the greatest progress in actual combat training of any unit on cantonment records in the same period of time.

Negro soldiers, drawn from city districts and rural communities in Illinois and Wisconsin, who have successfully passed the rigid physical tests laid down by Col. Milton McGrew's line organization, were introduced for the first time this week to the higher arts of warfare and at noon today brought in a series of shattered training records to hang up on barracks walls.

Without preliminary rifle training of any kind men of the Second battalion were given Enfield rifles on Monday and thrown into position on the rifle range, where they rushed at once into firing with ball cartridges. Shooting through two series and over all courses on the range, the battalion held up an average of marksmanship equaled by few regiments after two months of practice.

Winslow Ford, a Chicago selective in F company, marked 47 in a possible 50 on the 200 yard course. Private Leslie Creer shot 45 on all of the ranges, making a record for his regiment, and Jackson Hulbert, whose field experiences have been confined to work in kitchens of Chicago hotels, invaded the 300 yard range in apron and cap and hung up 39 bullseyes in 50 shots. Sergt. C. T. Cole was given official mention by shooting 46 on both the 100 and 300 yard ranges in the first series of army musketry he ever entered. The regiment is practically ready for overseas service.

Sergt. Glen Wilbur Wright of Wheaton received signal honors today when his commission as first lieutenant in the adjutant general's department arrived in camp. He is the second enlisted man in training here advanced from the ranks to that grade.

Then Shows Liberty Bonds and Asks to Serve the Nation.

Maximilian O. A. Wittge, alias Mark Oliver, a young German who has posed as an American for the last four years, surrendered himself at detective headquarters last night as an alien enemy.

Wittge has escaped embarrassing questions all these years because of the fact that he has only one good leg. He was injured in a railroad accident at Harrisburg, Pa., in 1913 and lost his left leg below the knee. Recently he bought an artificial leg. He wants to work for Uncle Sam instead of going to an internment camp.

Burden on Conscience.

"Too much of a burden on my conscience," is his only explanation for revealing his identity to the authorities.

The young German had a hard time finding any one to take him into custody. He went to the federal building during the afternoon seeking the proper official bosom upon which to unburden himself.

Some one told him to go to the department of justice, but there was no one there to receive him.

Finally Goes to Police.

He was directed to the exemption board in the First National bank building, but found that closed. Then he went to the police, finding two sergeants ready to receive him.

Wittge took out first citizenship papers in 1912, but never applied for his second papers. He said he worked as a fireman and machinist on the steamship Princess Cecile, passing between here and Germany several times in 1912. He liked this country because every one seemed free and happy. After his accident he was cared for by a family of the name of Oliver in Harrisburg, and after he left them he decided to take that name. He went to Waverly, Ia., and Winona, Minn., coming from there to Chicago.

Has Liberty Bonds.

Wittge had $200 in Liberty bonds and eight War Savings stamps. He told the police that he wanted to do all he could for this country and would work for the government if he could get his board. The police will investigate his story.

British Flanking Tactics Crush Hun Albert Front

[By the New York Times Military Expert.]

New York, Aug. 31.—[Special.]—The fighting of the last week has brought about that which, many military critics felt, was inevitable—a German retreat. Last week the British actions about the Somme were of more or less uncertain character. The British reports stated that attacks were being made and that progress into the German positions was good, but details were lacking. At the same time considerable advances were actually made.

The British had two principal objects, the first being the important road center at Bapaume, the second the line at Albert. The line from Albert to the north formed the bastion of this part of the British front. It bore the same relations to the German line that the defenses of Arras did to the allied line at the time of the great German drive in March and April. The British realized its strength, and, instead of trying to take it by frontal attack, exerted all of their pressure toward the north in an effort to cut in behind it and take it from the rear. This strategy was entirely successful.

Danger to Albert.

As the British pushed their lines further and further to the east between Miraumont and Croisilles, the danger to the Albert front became greater and greater, until finally, in order to avoid serious complications, the Germans were forced to fall back. They were, in fact, all but enveloped. From the moment that the Ancre front fell, the progress of the British was uninterrupted.

Every day has recorded a material advance, a number of towns recovered. Finally Bapaume itself, all but surrounded, was forced from the German hands and occupied by Welsh troops. The pivot of the German line in this retreat—and this might be said of the entire German front between Arras and Peronne—was the old Hindenburg line about Bullecourt and west of that place. Obviously if this pivot could be smashed in, the entire line might be thrown into confusion. Accordingly the Canadians attacked in the general vicinity of this pivot and have made material advances, going forward to a depth of nearly five miles.

At Bullecourt, however, the old stumbling block of 1917, they have met with a decided check and, although they took the town at one time, it was quickly wrested from them in a counter attack.

Hindenburg Line Question.

Whether the Hindenburg line can be broken in the present drive, when troops have been fighting for so long in a continuous offensive, is a mooted question. But the Canadians have one great advantage which was absent in 1917. They are now astride the Hindenburg line north of Bullecourt and Queant and may be able to work their way around and turn the Germans out.

The Germans, on the other hand, are thoroughly alive to the danger and are present in great force south of the Somme. The Germans have given way on the entire front as far as Noyon. In a series of heavy attacks both the British and the French drove deep wedges in the line above Chaulnes and south of Roye.

This section of the line was then forced to fall back, giving up as it did so all that remained in their hands of Little Switzerland—the massif along the Matz river.

The German retirement never hesitated once it began, and was stopped only when it reached the eastern side of the Canal du Nord. Coincident with this withdrawal was that of the Germans north of Chaulnes, in this case the line being established behind the Somme river south of Peronne. The British, however, reached the eastern bank of the river a day later than did the Germans, creating the suspicion that the German intention was not to stop there, but to continue eastward towards their former position.

French Take Noyon.

The French in the meantime by an attack from the west and southwest occupied Noyon and pushing up beyond the town, took the most important height of Mount St. Simeon, the southern end of the Noyon massif, which extends northwest from Noyon, between the Canal du Nord and the Noyon-Ham road. This opened the way for an attack against the eastern bank of the Canal du Nord, which the French were not slow in taking advantage of. As a consequence they have cleared part of the eastern bank and are in a fair way to force a continuation of the retreat.

In our natural and entirely proper exultation over the great victories which the allies have won over the Germans in the last month—victories that are but emphasized by previous German successes—we are apt to be swept off our feet, as it were, and in following the map lose sight of the primary principles which govern all military operations.

Of these principles the cardinal is that before military victory has been won, the man power of the enemy must be destroyed.

Germany Facing Defeat.

On the basis of present man power there is no doubt that total defeat stares Germany in the face. The losses of the allies are being much more than made good by the accretions in strength from America. Day by day the numbers of Americans are increasing and the consequent disparity in numbers continues to grow. Day by day Germany is growing not relatively but actually weaker through the very heavy casualties which the allies are inflicting upon her.

Through the new tactics which are being employed in the recent offensives—the tactics based on mechanical superiority rather than on man power—the allied losses have been relatively slight. Tanks in large numbers preceding or accompanying the infantry have done much of the work of clearing up machine gun nests and of breaking down intrenched infantry resistance that was formerly left to the artillery, and have done it much more rapidly and more effectively through being able to introduce in its highest form the element of surprise.

CONGRESS HOTEL WAITERS' STRIKE ENDURES 7 HOURS

Dining Room Force Quits at Dinner Time for Wage Raise.

For seven hours last night there was a strike of 125 waiters, fifty bus boys, and thirty-five cooks at the Congress hotel. It is said to be one of the shortest strikes on record in the loop. It began at 5:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon and ended soon after midnight.

N. M. Kaufmann, president of the Congress Hotel company, had declined to meet the demands of the waiters for $45 a month, with one day off each week, according to a statement issued by Benjamin F. Parker, president of local No. 7, Chicago Waiters' union.

"They had been receiving $30 a month for a seven day a week service—lower wages than those paid by any other hotel of the same class in Chicago," he said. "Tips have dwindled and necessities have advanced and the men could no longer eke a livelihood."

Negotiations had been going on between the management and the waiters, but a crisis developed yesterday afternoon, according to Mr. Parker, when John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, called on Mr. Kaufmann for a conference, but was denied an audience.

"If they want to go out, let them go out," Kaufmann is quoted as saying by Parker.

They "went out," the waiters first, then the bus boys. Then the cooks followed the bus boys. All assembled at the union headquarters, 115 West Madison street, and waited developments.

They did not wait long. At 11 o'clock a call came from the hotel for a conference. Soon after midnight announcement was made that the demands had been met and "they will all be at work in the morning," said Mr. Parker.

Bonds in Heller-Rose Robbery Case Reduced

Bonds of Isadore H. Starr and Jacob Sampson, arrested in connection with the Heller-Rose jewelry robbery last January, were reduced yesterday by Judge Crowe.

Their attorney, O. J. C. Wray, contended that the bonds of $150,000 were excessive. Judge Crowe reduced Starr's bond to $100,000 and Sampson's to $75,000.

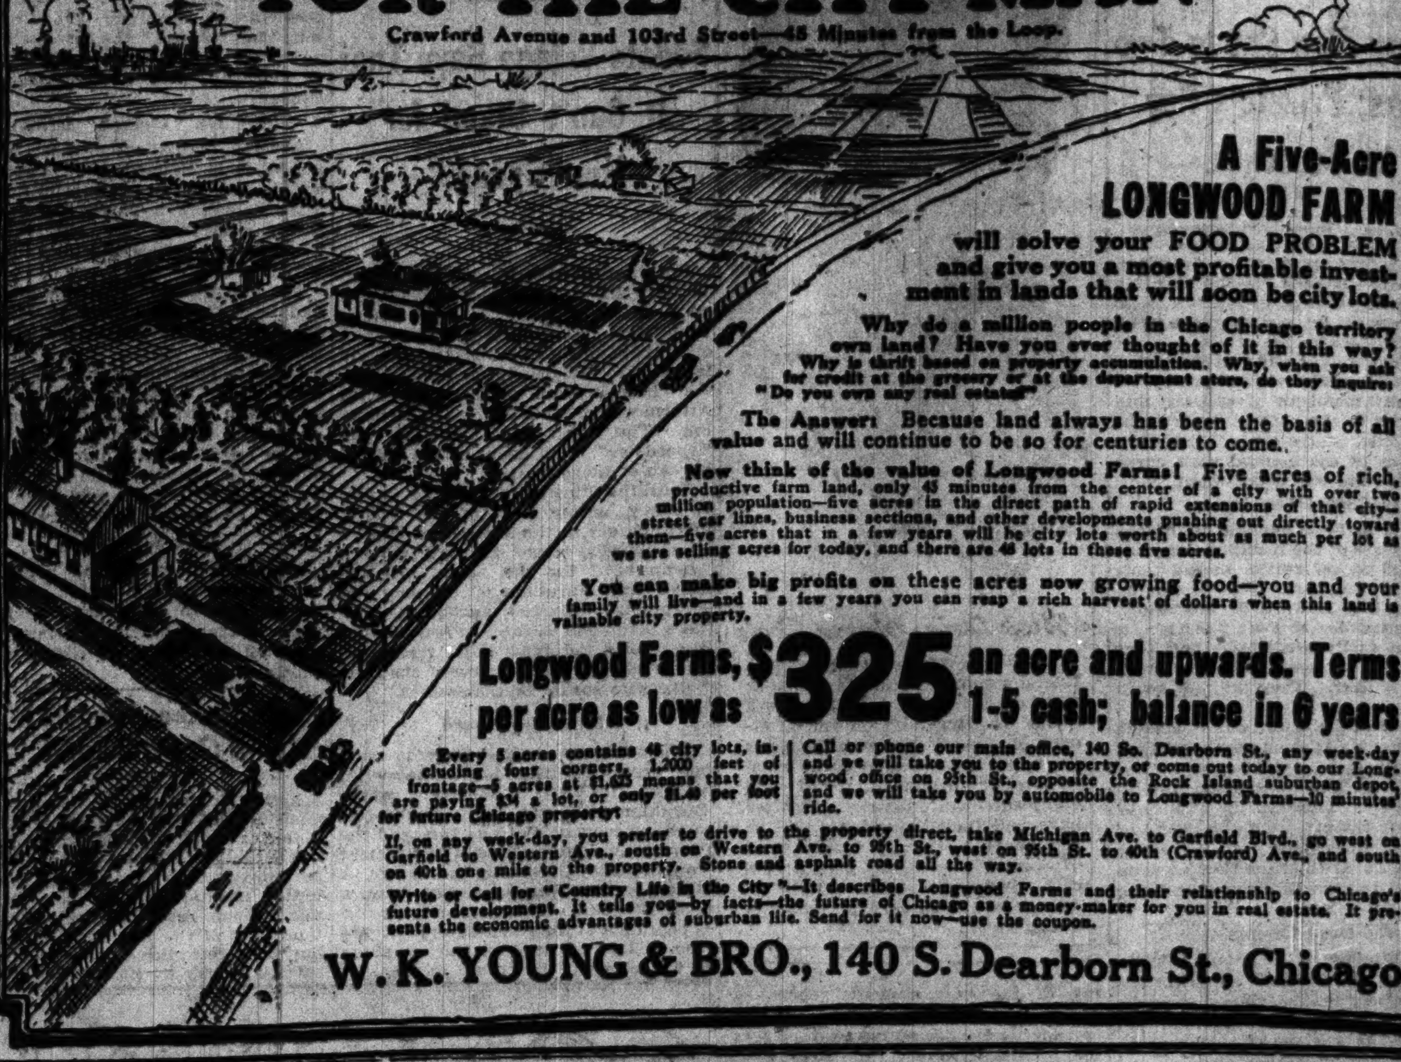
LONGWOOD 5 ACRE FARMS
FOR THE CITY MAN
Crawford Avenue and 103rd Street—45 Minutes from the Loop.



A Five-Acre
will solve your FOOD PROBLEM and give you a most profitable investment in lands that will soon be city lots.

Why do a million people in the Chicago territory own land? Have you ever thought of it in this way? Why is thrift based on property accumulation. Why, when you ask for credit at the grocery or at the department store, do they inquire: "Do you own any real estate?"

The Answer: Because land always has been the basis of all value and will continue to be so for centuries to come.

Now think of the value of Longwood Farms! Five acres of rich, productive farm land, only 45 minutes from the center of a city with over two million population—five acres in the direct path of rapid extensions of that city—street car lines, business sections, and other developments pushing out directly toward them—five acres that in a few years will be city lots worth about as much per lot as we are selling acres for today, and there are 48 lots in these five acres.

You can make big profits on these acres now growing food—you and your family will live—and in a few years you can reap a rich harvest of dollars when this land is valuable city property.

Longwood Farms, per acre as low as $325 an acre and upwards. Terms 1-5 cash; balance in 6 years

Every 5 acres contains 48 city lots, including four corners, 1,2000 feet of frontage—5 acres at $1,625 means that you are paying $34 a lot, or only $1.40 per foot for future Chicago property!

Call or phone our main office, 140 So. Dearborn St., any week-day and we will take you to the property, or come out today to our Longwood office on 95th St., opposite the Rock Island suburban depot, and we will take you by automobile to Longwood Farms—10 minutes' ride.

If, on any week-day, you prefer to drive to the property direct, take Michigan Ave. to Garfield Blvd., go west on Garfield to Western Ave., south on Western Ave. to 95th St., west on 95th St. to 40th (Crawford) Ave., and south on 40th one mile to the property. Stone and asphalt road all the way.

Write or Call for "Country Life in the City"—It describes Longwood Farms and their relationship to Chicago's future development. It tells you—by facts—the future of Chicago as a money-maker for you in real estate. It presents the economic advantages of suburban life. Send for it now—use the coupon.

ACTION TAKEN BY UNITED SOCIETIES STIRS HOSTILITY

Indorsement of Sullivan Candidates Resented by Rivals.

Displays of temper occurred in some political camps yesterday after the indorsement of the United Societies—the "wets"—had become known.

While the bulk of the long list was made up of legislative candidates there was an additional group of eight recommendations. Six of the eight men thus "boosted" are on the Sullivan county slate. The statement of the United Societies was that this came about because the organization confined its recommendations—except for legislative places—to the members of its own executive committee.

Row Over Ettelson.

There also was comment upon the indorsement of Senator Samuel A. Ettelson, who as corporation counsel, is Mayor Thompson's guide in saloon matters.

The six Sullivan candidates indorsed were A. J. Cermak for sheriff, John A. Cervenka for assessor, Peter Reinberg for president of the county board, and Stanley S. Walkowiak, Judge Joseph S. LaBuy, and Joseph Weber for the Municipal bench. The only other recommendations of this character were those of Judge Bernard P. Barasa for renomination and James T. Patterson, one of the Democratic candidates for congress in the First district.

Backed for Legislature.

Doings of Candidates for State and County Offices.

Congressman George Edmund Foss' headquarters yesterday made public resolutions indorsing his senatorial candidacy passed at Eldorado Friday night. Among the signers were Allen E. Walker, state's attorney of Edwards county; J. V. Heidinger, county judge of Wayne county; A. Parks, county treasurer of Williamson county; Clarence S. Seward, state's attorney of Hardin county; Joseph Robinson, Republican county chairman of White county, and Jay Willis, county chairman of Massac county.

The headquarters for Charles V. Barrett, Republican candidate for the board of review vacancy, announced yesterday that Mr. Barrett had been indorsed by 3,000 practicing lawyers in Chicago.

Paul H. Wiedel, Republican candidate for assessor, yesterday canceled all speaking engagements after next Wednesday because of the heavy preliminary working ahead of selective service board No. 34, of which he is secretary.

Real estate men supporting Perkins B. Bass and Charles Ringer, Republican candidates for board of review and board of assessors, respectively, announced yesterday that 5,000 pledge cards have been sent in by "home owners and renters interested in fair tax assessments." Three hundred members of the real estate board have offered to make personal canvasses of their precincts for the two candidates.

Complaints concerning the erroneous erasure of names from the registration lists will be heard by the election board tomorrow, the board holding sessions from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. for that purpose.

Friends of Col. Abel Davis, who is in France, are promising that his absence shall not cost him his place as Republican state committeeman from the Second district. Charles H. Sergel is opposing him.

U. S. TO FIGHT I. W. W.'S RELEASE ON SMALL BONDS

With nearly five score of I. W. W. leaders in the county jail, the government lawyers who brought about their conviction on sedition charges yesterday laid plans to combat efforts to obtain their release on bonds pending the passing upon their appeal.

Frank K. Nebeker, chief of the government's counsel, expressed the opinion yesterday that the heavy fines imposed by Judge Landis, totaling $2,300,000, would act as a bar to the I. W. W.'s release on bonds, as would also the penalties running from one year and one day to twenty years, which the court inflicted. The government will oppose the leaders' release on small bonds, he said.

"The verdict was a fair one," Mr. Nebeker said, "and stands as a warning to all disturbers generally."

DAILEY CLAIMS BIG PLURALITY FOR HIS TICKET

Says Regular Democrats Will Get Three-Fourths of the Vote.

The first official prediction to come from any of the political factions battling toward the primaries ten days hence was issued yesterday by James M. Dailey, chairman of the Democratic county central committee and head of the Sullivan organization.

"There were 100,000 men's votes cast in the Democratic primaries of 1916," said Chairman Dailey. "Owing to the fact that there are at least 20,000 members of our organization in the service of the United States on land or sea there will not be more than 80,000 votes of men cast a week from next Wednesday.

Smallest Vote 60,000.

"Our canvass and all other indications show that the smallest vote that any of our candidates will receive is 60,000, or at least three-fourths of the total. This will leave only 20,000 men's votes to be divided among the various opposition candidates.

"The decrease in the men's vote will be almost, if not entirely, made up by an increase in the women's vote. Women whose male relatives are in the war are going to see that their families are not disfranchised and will go to the polls this time as they never have gone before.

"There will be at least 40,000 women's votes. It is significant that the opposition has made absolutely no effort to get out the women's vote. This, of course, is due in part to the fact that they are making no effort to nominate any of their candidates for whom women can vote, but it is also because they are afraid to allow women to pass on many of their candidates.

Pluralities up to 60,000.

"We will get even a larger proportion of the vote cast by women than that cast by men, but, to be conservative, I am giving the opposition candidates 10,000 women's votes to divide among themselves and putting down the women's vote for our candidates at 30,000.

"This means that the candidates on our ticket for whom women can vote will receive from 90,000 to 100,000 votes and will have pluralities ranging above the 60,000 mark. The pluralities of the other candidates, who have to rely on men's votes only, will be from 40,000 up."

Chairman Dailey said that the strength of the "regular" organization in 1916 has been increased by the addition of two strong Democratic wards which were with the opposition two years ago.

TRUE BILLS FOR THREE IN TAX FIXING CASES

William Buhl, Alleged Victim, Charged by Jury with Perjury.

Three indictments were returned by the grand jury before Judge Robert E. Crowe yesterday in the personal property tax investigation. A new figure entered the scene via one of the indictments. He is William Buhl, owner of the North Shore Hand laundry and interested in other laundries. Buhl was indicted on a charge of perjury.

The others indicted are: Clifford Evans, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for county commissioner, and John P. Dougherty, chief outside collector of the county treasurer's office.

Charged with Conspiracy.

Evans and Dougherty were named in a blanket indictment, charging conspiracy in eight counts. Their bonds were fixed at $10,000 each. It is charged that Dougherty gave Evans tax bills and that the latter settled them for half and that the tax books were then stamped, "Referred to the state's attorney for suit." The tax bills, according to Assistant State's Attorney Charles Center Case, were never referred to his office for action.

Buhl was called as a witness before the grand jury to testify regarding alleged payment of money in settlement of taxes. According to the indictments he denied ever having had a conversation with Evans in regard to "fixing" taxes for half price.

Charge Buhl Gave Check.

It is charged that he gave Evans a check in settlement of taxes and that he also talked with him regarding the matter. Buhl's bond was also fixed at $10,000.

Some of the witnesses appearing on the back of the Evans-Dougherty indictment are: Chris M. Deissler, D. B. Folger, William C. Moulton, F. A. Canfield, and John C. Schorff.

The grand jury recommended that Assistant State's Attorney Case carry on the investigation before the next grand jury.

Railroad Ticket Scalpers Indicted by U. S. Jury

David Lyon and Harry W. Young, railroad "ticket scalpers," were indicted by the federal grand jury yesterday on conspiracy charges. They were arrested several days ago on charges of defrauding railroads now operated by the government through the illegal sale of tickets.

Sixteen others were named in true bills for various offenses, the principal charges being failure to register, selling liquor to sailors, and for violation of the espionage act.

The jury notified the court that it had cleaned up all of its pending cases, but will return within a few days to take final action in its inquiry into the affairs of the aircraft inspection department of the signal corps. The new incoming grand jury will open its sessions on Tuesday.

BRIBERY PASSED VICIOUS CAR BILL, GRAND JURY SAYS

Lacks Evidence to Indict, but Excoriates the Ordinance.

A wallop was landed the new traction ordinance and the city council yesterday in a report made by the grand jury.

The report declared that "the adoption of the ordinance was procured by bribery, corruption, and undue influence, and that it would not and could not have been passed and repassed over Mayor Thompson's veto without such criminality and irregularity."

No indictments were voted by the jury. On this question the report said that while the "evidence might warrant the return of indictments, if not for actual bribery then for conspiracy, that conviction would be difficult unless aditional evidence was obtained."

Demand Special Inquiry.

There were some wrathy aldermen over the reading of the report. A move was started to call a special meeting of the city council to declare for a special grand jury and a special state's attorney to go into the question.

What the aldermen objected to was that the grand jury report dwells entirely on unverified reports and rumors, but nevertheless publicly accuses the council of being corrupt, and that it recommends that the state's attorney tell the public the truth.

"Mr. Hoyne has shown that he is unfitted to make an unbiased investigation," one alderman said. "He is actuated by political motives alone, and it looks as if he kept the grand jury from getting all the facts on the council's action. He did not ask Mr. Fisher to come before the jury."

Ordinance Is "Indicted."

"We feel obligated under our oaths as grand jurors," part of the report said, "and as citizens interested in the future welfare of our city, in so far as we can by this report, to indict the ordinance and the corruption, ignorance, stupidity, indifference, and inefficiency which brought about its passage, and recommend that the state's attorney use his efforts to inform the people as to the truth concerning this ordinance, so that this atrocious legislation, passed by criminal and shameful practices, may be convicted before the bar of public opinion at the November election, and the motives of its sponsors made to stand forth in the searchlight of civic condemnation."

No Report on Fisher.

No mention was made by the report as to why Walter L. Fisher, the city's special counsel in traction affairs, had not been called before the jury to explain the ordinance. Several aldermen asked the jury to hear from Mr. Fisher, but an invitation for him was not forthcoming.

State's Attorney Hoyne prepared an appendix for the jury's report. Mr. Hoyne admitted in this that he had consulted former Gov. Edward F. Dunne and the Chicago Municipal Ownership league, Mayor Thompson's veto message, James G. Skinner, an attorney for the Greater Chicago federation, and J. J. Reynolds, a member of the former harbor and subway commission under the Harrison administration.

Mr. Hoyne told of his work as an assistant corporation counsel. He said he had considerable experience in dealing with public utility legislation.

"Vicious and One-Sided."

The jury based its report on the following:

That the ordinance is a vicious, ill-advised, ill-considered, hasty, and one-sided bargain, granting everything to the traction companies and in no way preserving the rights of the city.

That several aldermen and former aldermen, some of these lawyers, testified that they found not one redeeming feature in the ordinance in favor of the city or its citizens.

That a considerable number of aldermen who testified before the jury knew little or almost nothing about the provisions of the ordinance or its meaning.

A "straw vote" taken a week before the passage of the ordinance showed forty-one aldermen opposed.

A second "straw vote" showed thirty-eight aldermen opposed to it, yet forty-eight aldermen voted for the bill.

The council killed off amendments which would have corrected some of the evils of the ordinance.

Five or six aldermen testified that without the use of money the ordinance could not have been passed.

Numerous aldermen testified of rumors regarding graft and bribery and that the purchase price of votes was said to range from $3,000 to $10,000 each.

An alderman who voted against the ordinance and later voted for it over the mayor's veto had stated that he refused $3,000 for his vote from a prominent traction official.

Two aldermen, two prominent politicians, and a leading traction official were named to the grand jury as having handled the money or promised the money to aldermen for their votes.

Four Admit Bribe Offers.

Four different aldermen specifically admitted that they had either received or had been offered bribes for their votes in favor of the ordinance. These admissions were testified to by four or five aldermen as having been made to them or in their presence.

One alderman admitted that he had been offered $3,000 for his vote, which he refused because he was unwilling to vote for the ordinance for that amount.

Another alderman admitted to a colleague that he had been paid $700 to vote for the thirty year grant legislation, which was defeated by the legislature, and expected money for his vote on the unification ordinance.

Charge Two Got $5,000.

Another alderman stated to two colleagues that he had been paid $5,000 for his vote by a prominent politician who told him that he had paid two west side aldermen $3,000 each for their votes.

Not a single name of an alderman, traction official, or politician was mentioned in the jury's report.

In the appendix Mr. Hoyne cited 168 reasons why the ordinance was bad. He said the ordinance was invalid, that it reeked of corruption, and took away all the rights the city now enjoys over traction matters.

SHRAPNEL

After tireless efforts for more than a year to join the navy, his age, 17, proving a bar, George F. Starr, only son of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Starr, has finally been successful and yesterday received orders to report at the Great Lakes Wednesday. His mother is an officer of the Illinois State Federation of Woman's Clubs.

Company H, First regiment, Illinois Reserve militia, went into camp yesterday at the Camp Logan rifle range. A week of real camp life and discipline is before the members. Battalion Commander N. J. Buddinger is in command.

The relatives and friends of fifty-six soldiers will raise a service flag at 11 o'clock today at West North and Monticello avenues. All of the men in whose honor the flag will be raised formerly resided on Monticello avenue between North and Hirsch boulevard.

Word has been received in Chicago of the promotion of Thomas J. O'Brien to second lieutenant in the Eighteenth battalion at the recruit camp at Syracuse, N. Y. Lieut. O'Brien enlisted as a private. He is a son of W. H. O'Brien, 4046 Clarendon avenue.

A service flag with twenty-five stars will be raised this afternoon in honor of men now in the fighting ranks, who formerly lived in Paulina street between Wabansia and North avenues. Numerous speeches will be made, followed by a banquet and dancing tonight. Paulina street from Wabansia to North avenue is to be closed to traffic for the dancers.

NIMBLE FINGERED COP GETS 'GOODS' ON BOOKMAKER

Picks His Pocket of Record of Bets on Races.

J. W. Barnes of 4209 Kenmore avenue, said to be the head of an independent bookmaking agency, hit hard some time ago through false racing returns, was arrested yesterday. He was booked on the charge of being the keeper of a gambling house, but was released on bonds.

A small note book was obtained from Barnes by Detective Sergeant Flannigan. While Detective Sergeant Mulloy questioned Barnes, Flannigan bumped into them as if by accident, at the same time extracting the book from Barnes' hip pocket. Then he walked on until he had a chance to look into the book.

The book contained the record of racing bets taken over the telephone by twelve agents who are scattered through the loop.

The book seemed to show Barnes had been in the bookmaking business as an independent for eighteen months. Daily losses and gains were recorded. Often the figures of the book showed that Barnes had lost as much as $2,000 and lost up to $1,500 in a day.

Barnes' method, the police said, to safeguard himself against his agents was to recognize only such bets as were recorded before the race.

Two other men charged with operating gambling devices were arrested by policemen of the central station. They are John Rickler, proprietor of a cigar store at 179 North Wells street, and Thomas Ryan of 1822 West Jackson boulevard, arrested in the Quincy building, charged with keeping a gambling house.

In 1895 Mr. Schoeffel married the widow of Junius Brutus Booth, brother of Edwin Booth. She died in 1910.

Injured Man Found Wandering in Daze

A man who was much bandaged and unable to give a coherent account of himself was picked up by the Warren avenue police yesterday afternoon. The man's left arm was in splints and a wad of cotton waste was fastened on the back of his neck. He told the police his name is Peter Roblesky and that he is married. He said that while he was working for the Crane company a lot of iron fell on him but that he could not remember anything that had happened since the accident. As he wore a shirt that looked like those put on inmates of asylums, Roblesky was sent to the psychopathic hospital.

DEATH NOTICES.

IN MEMORIAM.

WEST—In ever loving memory of my dear wife, Julia L. West, who died Sept. 1, 1917.

Use it in your favorite recipe just as you would wheat unless you want a yeast dough. The gluten in corn does not respond to the action of yeast. Use one-fourth less Amerikorn Flour than you would of wheat.

In Amerikorn Meal, corn is again at its best; pure, rich in flavor and food value and granulated just right.

BY JOE DAVIS.

Indian Hill Club, Aug. 31.—[Special.]—Miss Elaine Rosenthal of the Ravisloe Country club won the sixteenth annual championship of the Women's Western Golf association, defeating Miss Frances Hadfield of Milwaukee, Wis., champion, 4 and 3, in the final at Indian Hill yesterday.

It was her second win of the western classic, her previous success being at Midlothian in 1915, when she defeated Mrs. Harry D. Hammond of Indianapolis. Last year she was runner-up at Flossmoor to Mrs. F. W. Letts Jr. of Indian Hill. Her win carries with it possession of the W. A. Alexander trophy for a year and the championship gold brooch.

Victory as Expected.

Miss Rosenthal, by reason of her past tournament successes and her fine work in the Red Cross matches in the east, generally was picked as a finalist, and it was no surprise when Miss Hadfield came through to the ultimate round.

Although defeated by Miss Rosenthal in the semi-finals at Flossmoor last year, Miss Hadfield was expected to give the former titleholder a close match, but these guesses were wide of the mark and, after losing the lead at the fourth hole, her chances fell as steadily as the shades of night.

Perhaps it is unfair to look for abnormal golf in these days of stress, but even making such allowance, it was disappointing to have the most important match of the western season develop into a colorless affair.

Miss Hadfield Erratic.

Miss Hadfield, who is a disciple of the "step up and hit 'em" school, was not hitting well, and a number of shots, like the seed in the parable, "fell on stony ground." Her game typified the enthusiasm of youth. Miss Rosenthal was below her standard, but was not pressed. She was 3 over par at the first hole, but played the next four well, and after getting into the bushes at the ninth, started home well.

Miss Rosenthal won eight holes and her opponent four, and the majority of these were the result of mistakes by the loser rather than by anything especially brilliant on the part of the winner.

A strong northwesterly breeze swept the course, and this was the only deterrent condition to good scoring, as the overnight rain had freshened the fairways.

The biggest gallery of the week turned out, but it was not as large as those of preceding years, nor did it have much chance to become enthusiastic. It was a matter of regret that the final was no closer, so as to have put a good finish to a tournament that ran through without a hitch from start to finish.

Consolation to Mrs. Cameron.

In contrast to the championship final, the consolation event furnished a real struggle, in which Mrs. J. S. Cameron of Toledo defeated Mrs. H. R. Kasson, the South Shore champion, in 21 holes. Mrs. Kasson led all the way and was 2 up at the twelfth. The next four holes were halved and then Mrs. Kasson lost the seventeenth by getting in the water. She lost the home hole 6—7, and the match was all square. After halving two holes Mrs. Kasson missed her putt at the third and lost 5—4.

CAMPS MAY HAVE GOLF LINKS BUILT

New York, Aug. 31.—[Special.]—The encouragement of golf as a recreation for soldiers at training camps is a possibility. Dr. Walter S. Harban, one of the vice presidents of the United States Golf association, has been in touch with the war department on a number of occasions on this subject. The matter has had the attention of the U. S. G. A. in an official way, and the parent organization agreed, if requested, to do all it could in the way of helping. Rumor has it that the officers are very much in favor of nine hole courses being laid out in the vicinity of camps.

TWO SHOT HOLE

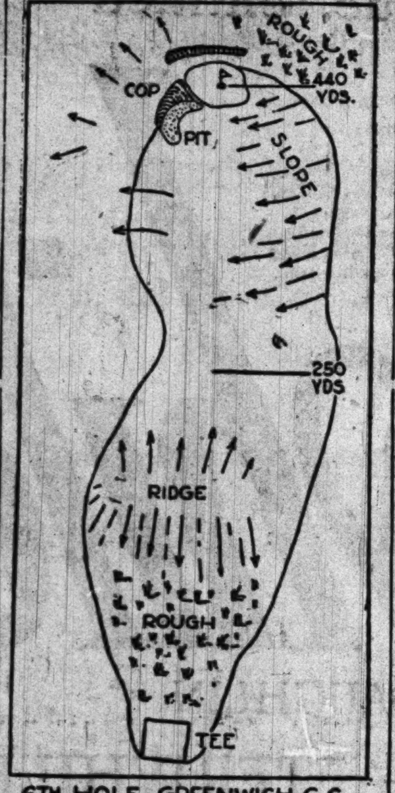
Walter Hagan Selects Sixth at Greenwich C. C. as Ideal in O'Neil Series.

BY GEORGE A. O'NEIL.

[Lake Shore Country Club.]

WALTER HAGEN, the Beau Brummel of the links, is one of the best type of golfers. He has won both the Metropolitan championship and the Western, and is the present North and South champion. He has gained the national recognition he deserved by winning the coveted open championship. This is still fresh in the minds of Chicago golfers, who will agree that he met at Midlothian one of the classiest fields that ever started from the first tee in any championship.

It will be well remembered that when Hagen had turned in his score for the last eighteen, the experts, who always have a chance to win, turned in, one after another, scores that counted them out, leaving finally but one competitor whom Walter had to fear—and that was our Chick. The hundreds who stood around the eighteenth hole will never forget the thrill of Chick's mighty effort to tie the eastern crack as his ball ran up, hit the hole, and trickled a little beyond, leaving him short also by the small margin of one stroke.



6TH HOLE GREENWICH C.C.

As recently as July 14, when partnered with Chick Evans against Jock Hutchinson and Bob MacDonald, Hagen proved that he had lost none of his ability as a player and demonstrated that he is a master in every department of the game. To him must be given much of the credit for the first defeat of the invincible Scotch pair this year.

In making his selection of a two shot hole, Hagen bestows the honor of his choice on the high class course of Greenwich Country club.

This course affords many good holes, but the one that appeals particularly to Walter is the sixth, a hole 440 yards in length. The tee is located at the foot of a ride which blinds the tee shot and makes necessary a very long carry to gain a view of the green. If the first shot has not been played well to the right, the player suffers a heavy penalty, for the fairway slopes to the left; and from the left side he will find it practically impossible to negotiate a trap and bunker covering the left front corner of the green and avoid being trapped in the bunker beyond the green for an overplayed shot.

During his career Walter has made many ones and twos, but probably no shot ever pleased him more than his second shot on this hole, when partnered with Jerome Travers against Alex and MacDonald Smith. All got away good drives; and the second shots of Travers and MacDonald Smith were on the green, while Alex's second was close enough up for a three. After a careful study of the situation, Hagen decided to play a long low midiron, landing short of the green and to the right. The shot was played perfectly and with perfect allowance for the slope, and Walter's good judgment was rewarded with a two.

INDIANS TO QUIT SEASON TODAY

President Dunn of the Cleveland ball club announced at the close of yesterday's game that his team would disband after the contest at Comiskey park today, instead of traveling down to St. Louis to play the scheduled two games of Labor day against the Browns. He explained that several players had secured essential positions and wanted to be at work Tuesday morning.

A message from Business Manager Quinn of the Browns last night stated that if Cleveland failed to appear in St. Louis for the double header the Browns would claim both games.

Miss Rosenthal and Evans to Play in Red Cross Match

The Skokie Country club will stage a Red Cross match next Sunday afternoon in which Miss Elaine Rosenthal, the new western champion, and Charles Evans Jr., will meet Miss Ernestine Pearce and Professional John C. Hackbarth. Fred Stone, the famous comedian, will entertain on the lawn and Lieut. Osborn of the army flying corps will give an exhibition.

RED SOX HOPE LIES IN RUTH, EXPERT SAYS

Hub Writer Declares Team Weakest of Flag Winners.

BY PAUL H. SHANNON.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 31.—[Special.]—On the pitching strength of the Red Sox mostly and the chance of big Babe Ruth furnishing the same powerful offensive he has throughout the whole American league season Boston fans base their none too bright hopes that the Red Sox may bring another world's championship to Boston.

But once before, with a Boston team on the eve of battle for baseball's supreme title, has confidence in the Hub entrant been so lacking. This was in 1914, when the Braves upset dope and tradition by downing a disorganized Philadelphia Athletic team in four straight games. But even then the Braves, by their whirlwind finish at the fag end of the season, had inspired a confidence that the staggering finish of Barrows' aggregation has not aroused.

Weakest of Boston Champs.

To sum it all up in a nutshell, the Boston Red Sox of 1918 look to be the weakest outfit that has represented the Hub in the American league in the past ten years. A team that never would have finished in the first division but for the tremendous clouting ability of the versatile Babe Ruth, and only the realization that the Chicago Cubs are also weaker than the National league pennant winners of other years leads optimists to believe that the Red Sox can preserve Boston's record of never having met defeat in a world's championship struggle.

The Sox have for years been noted for their great strength on the defensive, and in spots this year's aggregation is as powerful as before. But glaring weaknesses at third base and in left field when Ruth is pitching now exist and in the absence of a powerful attack that might help to offset this big handicap these two vital defects become all the more apparent.

Gardner and Lewis Missed.

If the veteran Larry Gardner were at third base and the equally experienced Duffy Lewis in Boston's left garden, the Sox would have less fear of the outcome. But Lewis has gone, and whether Whiteman or Miller takes his place the big hole will be there. The same condition obtains at third base, where Coffey and Cochran, both recruits drafted from the minor leagues at the eleventh hour, contrast most unfavorably with the Cubs' third sacker, a man who has already stood the test of a world's championship struggle. Frequent shifts and changes forced by draft and enlistment compelled Barrows to resort all season to continued experiments and only the lucky breaks as well as some first class pitching has enabled him to bring the team to the finish ahead af all rivals.

Fred Mitchell, on the contrary, has managed to preserve his team pretty nearly intact. Barring the loss of Alexander, he has the same lineup he had when the season started. Right there he has been able to develop a team play that Barrows never had a chance to produce.

Fear Vaughn and Tyler.

In the pitching deparment both teams would seem to show almost equal strength, for no manager could ask for better twirling quartets than Tyler, Vaughn, Douglas, and Hendrix, and Ruth, Jones, Bush, and Mays compose. In the possession of Vaughn and Tyler the Cubs have a handicap that may count heavily against the Red Sox, however. For the Boston team is notoriously weak against lefthanded pitching and Chicago's pair of southpaws are dreaded more by Barrows' men than two pitchers of the Alexander caliber.

The Sox can and do beat right handed pitchers, and they expect to hold their own against Douglas and Hendrix. How to beat the other pair will be their big problem.

To offset this pair, however, the Sox will bank heavily on Ruth and Bush. Ruth, in shape, can hold his own with any team in the country, while Bush can be depended upon to keep Chicago's hits few and far between. Mays, too, with his underhand delivery, may prove a baffling proposition to the Cubs.

Have Been in Big Shows.

These three pitchers have all had world's series' experience and may be depended upon to keep their heads.

Tyler figured in the big championship struggle of 1914. On the point of experience the Sox staff have the edge on the Cub quartet. In this regard alone can they claim any superiority.

Behind the bat Chicago has easily the best of it. Killefer excels by far any of the Hub backstops. He is a better hitter than either Schang, Mayer, or Agnew, and the only one of the Boston trio who compares with him in pegging is Sam Agnew. The big advantage that Chicago shows here may prove costly for Boston.

HIS BEST GIRL.
BRIGGS

In the Wake of the News

By RING W. LARDNER

THE EPISTLES OF EDNA.

South Haven, Mich., August 29.

Dear Mr. Moon:

Thanks ever so much for telling me your first name. But you mustn't say it's a crazy name. I am wild about it and have always been crazy to know a person named Lionel and now my ambition is realized. That is, one of my ambitions, for I have several, but only one other that counts and that is—Heavens! I was almost "telling secrets." Do you wish you knew what I was going to say? I bet you do, Mr. Curiosity, for it concerns you. But you are not going to know, not now at least, and perhaps never. "I wonder!"

But you mustn't ask me to call you by your first name, for I couldn't think of it till you have called me by mine. I know it's "ladies first" in most things, but in this case I guess we will have to make it "age before beauty" or something. So if you really do want me to call you Lionel, you must call me Edna first. So there! So saying, the little girl slammed the door in his face. Not literally, for where I am sitting out on the porch there is no door to slam. And besides, she would never think of slamming it in a certain person's face, though you wouldn't care if she did, would you, Mr. Soldier Man? Or would you?

Seriously, I have been reading all the war news lately and it certainly has been grand. Of course, I have always read it, but not until the past three weeks have I taken so much interest in everything that was written about the war. "I wonder why." But seriously, hasn't the news been just great? And do you suppose there is anything in the talk that peace will come before another year? I am simply wild to know and anything you tell me I will keep to myself. I suppose you think girls can't keep secrets, but I assure you they can, at least one of them can and the one is now writing to a great big soldier man who probably doesn't remember what she looks like. Or am I so homely that you couldn't forget? Even if you thought so, I know you would be too polite to say it because you wouldn't want to hurt a "lady's feelings." Seriously, I do wish I knew just what you thought of me and probably it would be something terrible, but anything would be better than "suspense." So will you try and tell me in your next letter? You see I am hinting for you to write me another letter. I am depending on you being "kind-hearted" you see.

But about the war, do you wish it was over? I suppose you do for some reasons, but I bet you will be disappointed it if ends before you get "over there" to "do your bit." You see, I can read you like a book, Mr. Moon, so don't try to have an secrets from me for I assure you it's useless. I have "second sight" or something like that. Aside from all that, what do you do in peace times? You see, you say so little about yourself that I know scarcely anything. Are you out of college or in business or what? For all I know you may be a millionaire with nothing to do but spend your millions, but I guess if you were you wouldn't waste any time writing to a kid like me. Would you?

But please tell me about yourself in your next letter (You see, I insist there shall be a "next letter") for I am very much "interested". That is my way of saying—But never mind, I am talking too much again.

We leave here Monday night, so you better address me at home. I have had a wonderful time up here, just resting and dreaming and thinking of—Never mind "what," Mr. Curiosity.

I will quit now before you think I am a little f——l and tear this up in "disgust". Good-bye, Lionel. There!

Yours (?)

SERIES TICKETS GO WITH SPEED

Steady demands yesterday for reserved seats for the world's series wilted the hopes of Business Manager Craighead to have a few reserved seats to put on sale on the opening day of the event at the ball park so as to foil the scalpers. It looks now as if all of the 17,000 box and reserved seats would be sold in advance.

Several military and naval units are planning to purchase blocks of seats for their use, and if these applications are received in advance of civilian applications they will be filled, of course.

In addition to the 17,000 reservations that can be made at Comiskey park, there will be over 15,000 general admission seats which will not be placed on sale until the day of each game. Frank Houseman has charge of the reservations for the Cubs Claws club members, who plan to flock together, and those wishing to do so should communicate with him.

CINCY PLAYS FOR 3D PLACE GOAL, SWATTING CUBS

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Cincinnati improved its slender chance to sneak into third place by trimming the new National league champions, 8 to 4, yesterday in the final game between the two teams, but the Cubs got a lot of good practice, which is all they are looking for until next Wednesday.

Phil Douglas was selected by Manager Mitchell for a workout to tune him up for the battle with the Red Sox, and apparently did not risk hurting his good right arm for nothing. The Reds hammered him for twelve swats, five of which were massed in the first inning for four runs.

That lead made the task of Luque fairly easy. He held the Cubs to three scattered hits in six innings and in the meantime the Reds had climbed on Douglas for two more runs in the fifth. The Cuban hurler was wild, giving six bases on balls; otherwise, the Cubs might have hit him harder.

Phil Forces Reds to Hit.

Douglas did not waste time pitching to the Reds, but made all except two of them hit the ball. One of the two he hit with a loose curve, and the other walked.

The Reds practically annexed the game in the first round. Neale singled with one out, and rode all the way to third on Cueto's single. Sherwood Magee pounded a double into right so far that both Neale and Cueto registered on it. Griffith doubled, scoring Magee, and Blackburne singled, sending in Griffith.

The Cubs countered with one in their half on a double by Mann and a very wild pitch. But they could not catch up with the men from Porkopolis.

Redlegs Miss a Triple Play.

It looked like a chance for more runs in the fifth when Flack singled and Hollocher walked with none out. Mann slammed a liner into Luque's mitt and the Cuban held it. He could have started a triple play if the Red infielders had been more alert, but Luque had to hold the ball until somebody covered a base and finally doubled up Hollocher off first.

Before the Cubs had another opening the Reds were too far in front to worry.

SOX WASTE BI[illegible]ES; LOSE TO INDIANS, 2-1

Cleveland's Indians, although outhit more than two to one by the White Sox in the opener at Comiskey park yesterday, won, 2 to 1. Sadness was mixed with the gladness for the visitors, because the score board showed the Red Sox victorious over the Athletics in the first clash, thus eliminating Cleveland definitely from the pennant race.

Red Russell faced the hostiles, and left shortly after the clash for Indiana. He held the Indians to five hits, but his wildness in the first inning cost him the verdict. All his three passes were issued then. A sacrifice fly was sandwiched in, creating a run. Cleveland added another in the fifth when Evans singled and O'Neill tripled.

Chicago had any number of chances to register off Enzmann, who was hit freely but had all sorts of luck. Eleven wallops resulted in a single run. In the second, for example, Collins singled and Mostil doubled. Pinelli lifted what looked like a sacrifice fly to Speaker and Tris nailed Collins in a double play. Later two Sox were nailed at the plate.

CUBS' TRUMPS IN MANAGER AND BACKSTOP

Both Flag Winners Stand Out Above Fading Fields.

A FLYING FAN!

Lieut. Philip J. Reddy of Chicago, an aviator at Scott Field at Belleville, Ill., yesterday telegraphed Fred S. Lewis of the Board of Trade: "Leaving here Tuesday morning via airplane with Col. Robbins for world's series game. Land at Grant park."

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Always a hazardous guess on account of the tremendous figure luck cuts in a short baseball problem, the coming world's series offers a superhazardous proposition to the dopesmiths, by contrast with recent post-season combats for a number of reasons.

Depreciation in playing strength, due to the war, is the biggest factor in the advance dope, and that cannot be estimated with any degree of accuracy.

No one conversant with the nation's pastime for the last decade will question the statement that the playing standard of the game has deteriorated greatly since last year. The national army draft has taken many players from both leagues. A considerable number of the more loyal Americans in baseball's ranks enlisted, either in the army or navy, without waiting for the draft to take them, and more sought to obey the work or fight ruling by seeking so-called essential employment where they could play baseball, too.

Both Leagues Sufferers.

These inroads have been steady all season and have resulted in wrecking several major league teams, one of the most prominent examples being the world's champion White Sox. But there is no way to estimate the comparative weakening of the two major leagues by the process of absorbing ball players into service or essential pursuits.

Chicago's Cubs outclass the rest of the National league teams by a wide margin as the results of even a curtailed championship season have proven. Boston's Red Sox have outclassed the rest of the American league teams by a considerably smaller margin.

For half a decade and more than that, barring one year that is unanimously conceded to have been an accident, the American league has outranked the National in playing strength so far as there has been any basis of comparison.

Problem in a Nutshell.

The problem presented by the 1918 world's series is this:

Has the American league deteriorated in playing strength sufficiently within the year to balance the difference between the margins by which the Cubs have outclassed their competitors and that by which the Red Sox have copped the American league bunting? I do not know any process of reasoning or mathematics by which that point can be determined.

It is certain both leagues have gone back. Otherwise neither the Cubs nor the Red Sox would be champions.

Players have come back in both major leagues in the last three months who had been discarded as too slow or too dumb seasons ago, and have held down their jobs in "fast" company this year. All of you can think of examples without mentioning names.

Cubs' Chances Summed Up.

If the American league has been weakened by the war more than the National league has this year the Cubs have a better chance to win the world's pennant than any team in its circuit in recent years. There are three outstanding reasons.

The Red Sox have had trouble all the year with left handed pitchers. Their cleanup hitters bat left handed, and the Cubs have in Vaughn and Tyler two southpaws who have proven highly successful in the National league. If they can cope with the Red Sox as well as they have with all rivals in their own circuit this season they will win the bunting with a little help from their slab associates.

The Red Sox should not have much trouble hitting spit ball pitching or speed, for they have faced both for many years.

Can't Cope with Killefer.

The Red Sox have no such wizard behind the bat as the Cubs have in Bill Killefer, who outranks any backstop now in the game, with the exception of Ray Schalk of the White Sox. Killefer has got more out of the Cub pitchers this year than they showed last season, and will continue to make them pitch their best brand of goods in the world's series.

Manager Mitchell is a third reason why the Cubs have a good chance to cop the big end of the purse this fall. He has handled his men with consummate tact and skill, and has displayed a brand of strategy that has increased the impression that it was his wizardry that won the world's pennant of 1914 for the Boston Braves, instead of Stallings.

EVANS IN MATCH TODAY TO HELP NAVY SOCIETY

Paired with L. Gullickson; They Tackle Adams and Hutchinson.

Golf fans who will give their automobiles a rest today will be able to ride by street car to Jackson park and hee a high class golf match, the best staged at that course this year.

Chick Evans, the national open and amateur champion, will pair with Lloyd Gullickson of the Great Lakes station, the Chicago champion, against Jock Hutchinson of Glen View, the patriotic open champion, and Frank Adams of Beverly.

The match is for the benefit of the Navy Relief society and play will start at 2:30.

According to advance notices this four ball match is to be one of the "snappiest foursomes" of the season. This may be so, but it will not be a soft snap for either side.

SKOKIE.

S. A. Wilmarth registered 87 for low gross prize in the eighteen hole handicap at Skokie. E. C. Divine, 88—15—73, and W. W. Wheelock, 92—19—73, tied for low net. Winners in Town medal final flights:

This was the second time within a month that Kasper has registered 35 on the first nine. Deducting his handicap of seven strokes, the low net of 72 gave him the war savings stamps. A. G. Wegreener, 87—14—73, was runner-up. In the finals of the class B Liberty tournament H. F. Arnold defeated E. R. Heissler, 5 and 4.

TALES of A TEE-BOX TOURIST

THERE are periods in every one's golfing career when mind and muscle work in harmony, when everything breaks right and you flirt with par. Charles F. Shriver of the Evanston Golf club experienced a brief spell of "traveling along the rose strewn path."

Competing in the sweepstakes event in the recent invitation tournament at his home club, he made the trip in company with three jovial companions. There was nothing eventful in the morning round in which he notched 91, which, with an allowance of 12, gave him a net total of 79. This did not look like a prize winning contribution, but in the afternoon Mr. Shriver began to show championship class. He reeled off the first nine holes in 34, the best made by any player in the sweepstakes. When he made the tenth hole in 5 and the eleventh in 3 his companions began to address him as "Chick."

This great honor proved his undoing as at the next hole, "the Power House," he drove out of bounds, and tried to knock down the property of the traction company. The result was an 8. The jig was up and he joined the "wobblies," finishing the last three holes with 7, 6, and 5, taking 47 for the home trip. Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.

EASTERN STARS MUST GO SOME AT GREAT LAKES

Western Athletes Hold Better Marks than Metropolitan Winners.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Considering the performances made in the outdoor track and field championships of the Metropolitan association of the Amateur Athletic union at New York last Sunday, western athletes again should demonstrate their superiority over the pick of the east in the National A. A. U. outdoor track and field championships at the Great Lakes Naval Training station on Sept. 20, 21, and 23, under the auspices of the Chicago Athletic association.

The 100 yard dash in the eastern meet was won by P. J. White of the Salem-Crescent A. C. in :10 2-5. In the west there are several fliers who can run the century in even time or better. Some of the sprinters who can be depended upon to beat White are Andy Ward, Peterson and Murchinson of the Great Lakes, Jack Scholz of University of Missouri, Howard Drew of Drake, who is in the service, Lieut. Jo Loomis of Camp Custer, and Irwin Mahl of St. Louis.

Tom Campbell Good in 880.

J. R. Sellers, who competed unattached, won the eastern half mile in 1;59 4-5. Although there is a scarcity of half milers in the west, Hauser, the former University of Minnesota runner, who joined the service in the officers' training school on the municipal pier, and Tom Campbell, the promising University High school runner, who captured the junior indoor championship 660 run can beat Sellers' time.

Joie Ray of the Illinois A. C., Eddie Fall of the Great Lakes, and Joe Stout, the former University of Chicago runner, who is in the aviation service and stationed at Hazelhurst field, Texas, easily can beat the time made by W. F. Gordon of Pelham bay in the mile. The sailor won the mile in 4:27 2-5.

Western Jumpers Do Better.

E. Erickson won the running high jump in New York with a leap of six feet. Clinton Larson, the national champion, who is in service in a southern camp; Lieut. Jo Loomis, Siebert of the Chicago Turners, and Carl Johnson of the University of Michigan can clear the bar at a greater height.

ON OTHER GOLF COURSES.

De Palma Goes Four Miles to New Time Record, 2:03

New York, Aug. 31.—Disregarding a large hole which had been burned in the board track at Sheepshead Bay speedway by flames from a wrecked motorcycle, Ralph De Palma, the Italian automobile racer, today clipped six seconds from the track record, covering four miles in 2:03 in an exhibition at the second day of the New York field police games.

Labor Day Grind to Bring Back Old Days of Bike Game

With a twenty mile race as the feature, the greatest bicycle racing meet ever held since the old high wheel days should be held tomorrow at Humboldt park, where the Franklin Skating and A. C. will stage three races in addition to the grind.

Sixty riders, ranging from 16 to 55 years old, will start in the handicap twenty mile event. The cyclists have received allowances as high as 7:00 and these handicaps are expected to make the scratch riders pedal all the way. Such well known riders as Jules Arens of the Belgian American C. C., Roy Mebeck of the Franklin club, and Edward Nelson of the Norwegian Turners, will start from scratch and the struggle for first time prize should rest between them.

The junior race of four miles is expected to be the most interesting outside of the derby. Boys ranging from 11 to 16 years old have been practicing daily for the race with the result each is ready to put forth everything in his physical makeup to win. This race has attracted the largest entry list.

Another interesting event will be the one mile old-timers' event. Any rider who has not ridden in a race for the last fifteen years is eligible, providing he is over 40 years of age. William McCardy, Julian T. Fitzgerald, H. P. Hansen, James J. Patton, and John Engstrom are among some of the well known old-timers who will take one more whirl at the game.

GRAND CROSSING INDOOR FINALIST.

Grand Crossing's indoor baseball team will meet Cornell Square at Ogden park tomorrow for the south park system championship as the result of three victories yesterday. Grand Crossings' victims were Burnside, 13 to 2; Sherman Park, 20 to 4, and Ogden Park, 18 to 0. Frank Amberg, the one-armed pitcher, hurled each game.

FORTY TO SCORCH IN RAGEN CLUB'S BIKE RACE TODAY

Forty riders, representing thirteen local athletic organizations, will start in the annual twelve mile handicap road race of the Ragen A. C. to be held today. The field will be sent away from the clubhouse at Fifty-second and Halsted streets at 2 o'clock and the finish will be at Calumet Grove, near Blue Island.

Jules Arens, the crack rider of the Belgian American A. C., who is among the scratch riders, is favorite for first time prize. Henry Quirk of the Northwest Sportsmen's club, is picked to finish near the front. County Commissioner Ragen has donated a trophy for the winner, while eight time prizes will be given.

The Winter Garden

Presents a "Victory" Revue, entitled

"Afterwhile"

Here's the Chorus of Mr. Van Alstyne's Great Title-Song:

Afterwhile when all is over,
  Afterwhile when all is done;
Afterwhile when foeman yields to foeman,
  And the cause of Liberty is won.
Afterwhile we'll all be sailing homeward,
  And we hope and pray the day is nigh;
Afterwhile we'll settle down in Loveland,
  Afterwhile, dearie, you and I.

Egbert Van Alstyne

PRODUCED BY AL LAUGHLIN

THE music of "AFTERWHILE" was written especially for the WINTER GARDEN by "Chicago's Own" Composer, Egbert Van Alstyne Among Mr. VAN ALSTYNE'S popular song hits thousands will pleasantly remember "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree," "I'm Afraid to Go Home in the Dark," "That Old Girl of Mine," "Sunshine and Roses," "Memories," "Wrap Me in a Bundle," "So Long, Mother," and "Pretty Baby." Many of Van's friends and admirers think "AFTERWHILE," the title-song of the WINTER GARDEN REVUE, is destined to be one of his biggest hits. MURRAY ENTERS FINAL NET PLAY; BEATS VOSHELL

Kumagae or Tilden to Be Opponent in Match for the Title.

Forest Hills, N. Y., Aug. 31.—R. Lindley Murray, California tennis player representing the Niagara Falls Tennis club, won his way into the final round of the thirty-seventh annual turf court championships today and next Tuesday will meet either W. T. Tilden Jr. of Philadelphia, or Ichiya Kumagae for titular honors. Murray won his place in the final by defeating S. Howard Voshell, national indoor champion, who entered from Terrace club of Brooklyn, 6-4, 6-3, 8-6.

Kumagae advanced from the fifth dound to the semi-final at the expense of Lyle E. Mahan, winning at 4-6, 6-3, 6-0, 6-1. The Japanese will play Tilden on Monday and the winner will be bracketed with Murray the following day, weather permitting.

Conditions were far from favorable for fast play. The largest gallery of the week gathered for the two matches and was rewarded by some spectacular play, especially in the Murray-Voshell match.

The indoor champion at times gave Murray some of the hardest opposition that the Californian has faced in his progress through the tournament to date. Murray, however, always held the advantage of his smashing service and ability to hold the net at critical moments.

Kumagae's victory over Mahan was much more easily won. The tall New Yorker appeared utterly unable to control his strokes during the play and the Japanese was not any better in the initial set, which Mahan won at 6-4.

Earlier in the day H. L. Taylor of Brooklyn won the junior national championship by defeating J. Hennessey of Indianapolis at 6-4, 6-2, 6-2.

MISS ASASYS SMITH BEST WOMAN DIVER FOR CENTRAL TITLE

The defeat of Miss Viola Burkhardt of the Chicago Athletic association by Miss Asasys Smith, the former New Trier High school swimmer, who competed unattached in the high diving, featured the third batch of the Central A. A. U. outdoor swimming championships held in the lake at the Edgewater Beach hotel yesterday. Because of the heavy sea, the swimming races were postponed until tomorrow.

Miss Burkhardt won the Central A. A. U. title from the low board a few weeks ago and it was expected she would be an easy winner of yesterday's contest. The Cherry Circle diver performed better in her dives from the twenty-eight foot board than she did from the sixteen foot platform.

Miss Smith executed the high and low dives almost perfectly. It was her general average which gave her the verdict and she was equally good in her difficult and simple attempts.

W. P. Heyn of the Chicago Ahtletic association won the Central A. A. U. high diving title without apparent effort from his teammate, Jack Briggs. Heyn executed double somersaults in almost perfect style.

The fifty yard free style and 100 yard breast stroke for men and the 220 yard free style for women will be held tomorrow.

WILDE STOPS CONN IN TWELFTH ROUND AT CHELSEA FIELD

LONDON, Aug. 31.—Jimmie Wilde, the world's flyweight champion, today won from Joe Conn, featherweight, in the twelfth round of a scheduled twenty round bout at the Chelsea football field. Conn outweighed Wilde by twenty pounds.

The referee stopped the bout, awarding the decision to Wilde, who was badly punishing his opponent. Conn was floored twice in the tenth round, each time for a count of nine. Wilde set the pace throughout, but took considerable punishment.

The betting odds when the boxers entered the ring favored Wilde at 7 to 4. Wilde took the aggressive from the start.

CORN PRICE OFF AFTER BULGE ON EARLY DEALINGS

Liquidation and Changing Carry Oat Charges Down.

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Highest prices on corn and oats were made soon after the opening yesterday on buying induced by reduced estimates of the corn crop. A break followed, with the close, while not at the lowest, showing losses of ⅛c to 1c on corn and ¼c on oats in Chicago. St. Louis corn lost ¼c to ½c and Kansas City finished ¼c higher to ⅝c lower. Oats in the southwestern markets lost ⅛c to ½c and in the northwestern ⅛c to ¼c for the day.

Closing trades on corn, compared with a week ago, show losses of 3⅞c to 5c, the latter on September. Oats are ⅜c to 1⅜c, pork 52½c to 72½c, short ribs 12½c to 15c lower, and lard is 15c higher on September and 2½c lower on October, compared with a week ago.

Corn Market Unsettled.

A sensationally bullish report on corn issued by Snow-Bartlett-Frazier had only a temporary effect on the market early, although it showed the heaviest loss during August in years. There was sufficient buying early to make an advance of ½@1¼c, but the bulge was short lived and a break of 1⅞@2½c followed, with stop loss orders uncovered on the way down.

General commission house selling developed on the bulge, and a weak technical position was disclosed, the break being much more rapid than had been the advance. Evening up for the double holiday made a rally of ¾@⅞c at the last, with the close at $1.53¾ on August, $1.53½ on September, and $1.55⅝ on October.

Expectations of large receipts Tuesday induced buyers of cash grain to go slow, and sample values were unchanged to 5c lower, with some 10c lower, and receipts 336 cars. Cash sales, 5,000 bu, and deliveries 28,000 bu. For the week arrivals were 1,918,000 bu and shipments 406,000 bu. Last year receipts were 640,000 bu and shipments 532,000 bu.

Forecast was for generally fair and warmer over Sunday, which dispelled fears of frost. Good rains fell over part of the northern belt, and no further moisture is needed to mature the crop in excellent shape.

Oats Develop Weakness.

Oat futures were firmer at the start with corn, but broke rapidly on the Snow report suggesting a crop of 72,000,000 bu in excess of the August government returns. A decline of 1c on the active deliveries was made as the result of heavy selling by cash, commission, and cereal houses. Buying against bids and profit taking checked the downturn and a small rally followed. The finish was at small net losses with last sales of August at 69⅝c, September at 69⅞c, and October at 71½c.

Basis for cash sales in the sample market was lower, No. 3 whites selling at 2⅝c to 2½c under and standards at 1⅝c to 2¼c under October. Domestic shipping sales were 45,000 bu and deliveries 123,000 bu. Receipts aggregated 302 cars. For the week arrivals were 5,801,000 bu, against 4,010,000 bu last year. Shipments were 2,263,000 bu, against 3,412,000 bu last year.

Rye and Barley Easy.

October rye sold at $1.69¼@1.70¼, and closed with a net loss of ¼c at $1.69¾, trade being rather light. Spot was easy with sales of No. 1 at $1.67. Receipts, 36 cars. Milwaukee was weak, and Minneapolis 1½@2c lower. The northwest had 56 cars.

Barley showed an easy undertone, although there was no change in prices. Sales were at $1.02@1.05. Receipts, 12 cars. Milwaukee was 2@3c lower, and Minneapolis 1@2c lower. The northwest had 112 cars.

Flaxseed at Duluth closed 1½@4c lower; September, $4.27; October, $4.15½. Winnipeg, 2½c lower to 1c higher; October, $4.04½; November, $3.96. The three leading markets had 8 cars.

Timothy seed unchanged. September, $10.25 bid; December and March, $10.00 bid. Toledo, unchanged to 2½c lower; September, $4.92½; October and December, $4.90; March and April, $4.97½ per bu of 45 lbs. Clover seed, no market. Toledo, 85@95c higher; October and March, $19.50; December, $19.40 per bu of 60 lbs.

Carriers Are Busy.

Most of the trading in provision futures was in changing from September to October. The Anglo-American did the most of it in short ribs, buying September and selling October at 25c mainly, although some was at 30c difference, the widest so far. Longs were moderate sellers of lard. Prices receded and closed slightly lower despite the advance in hogs to the best prices known, $20.30.

Cash trade was not large on domestic account but the various governments are in the market through the food administration. Shipments of lard and meats for the week decreased and of meats were under last year's, while lard showed an increase. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

ALL THE EXCHANGES, STOCKYARDS, AND BANKS IN THE UNITED STATES WILL BE CLOSED MONDAY, SEPT. 2, LABOR DAY.

A corn crop of 2,665,000,000 bu is indicated by the Snow-Bartlett-Frazier crop report issued yesterday. It is based on the Snow estimate of acreage. On the government acreage the estimate is 2,584,000,000 bu. There is a loss of 400,000,000 bu for the month. The government estimate in July was 3,160,000,000 bu, and the harvest last year 3,159,000,000 bu. Condition at the end of August is 64.8, against 79 last month. It was the lowest since 1901, when it was 52.1. Hot winds and high temperatures and lack of rainfall caused the deterioration. Losses were mainly in the far southwest, southern Nebraska, Missouri, southern Illinois, Ohio, Tennessee, and Kentucky. North of a line through northern Illinois and Iowa the crop is of unusual promise. Everywhere the crop is more advanced than usual and in many districts it is now practically matured.

The spring wheat crop is 328,000,000 bu, indicated by threshing returns to Statistician Snow. The government report in August was 322,000,000 bu and last year 233,000,000 bu. With the yield of 569,000,000 bu winter wheat the total wheat crop is 897,000,000 bu of exceptional quality, compared with 651,000,000 bu harvested last year.

Snow's figures on oats suggest a yield of three bushels per acre above the conditional indication. He says the government conditional figures this month will not show much change. There is every indication that the final crop at the threshing machines will measure out in excess of 1,500,000,000 bu. The government report for August showed 1,428,000,000 bu. and last year's harvest was 1,587,000,000 bu.

A great deal of disappointment was experienced in corn yesterday, particularly by those who bought on the sensational crop report. There was a loss of nearly 500,000,000 bu since July 1. Bartlett-Frazier led the buying at the start, but when the market stopped after the local crowd had covered, they turned to the selling side and the price dropped nearly 4c from the high point. The trade was as bearish as ever and few were able to see any change in the general situation. Several of the sharp observers, however, remarked at the close that they did not care to follow the decline early because nearly every one seemed to be impressed with the idea that lower prices were to prevail. There was general buying of bids after the close.

It was noticeable that elevator people were not as anxious to deliver the cash oats on September contract as was apparent early in the week, as there were good buyers of September and sellers of October transferring their hedges. Profitable carrying charges exist, and the buying of September and selling of October was mainly at 1¾c spread, which pays the carriers well. Holders of September contract were anxious to get away from the cash grain deliveries and transferred their lines to October. This has made the October the most active. There are indications that the September deliveries Tuesday may not be as large as was expected a few days ago.

Primary receipts of wheat for the season to date aggregate 121,992,000 bu; corn, 250,972,000 bu, and oats, 49,626,000 bu. Last year wheat receipts were 33,844,000 bu; corn, 211,402,000 bu, and oats, 38,754,000 bu.

Deliveries of provisions on Tuesday are not expected to be very heavy, as the carriers have been active in changing over their contracts.

Canal rates from Buffalo to New York will be reduced 2 cents per 100 lbs, effective Monday. This will make the domestic rate on wheat 8.8 cents and export 8.6 per bu.

Joseph Wild, the Wagner statistician, estimates the corn crop of the six large northern states—Illinois, Iowa, Ohio, Indiana, South Dakota, and Minnesota—at 1,200,000,000 bu, compared with 1,368,000,000 bu last year, 1,123,000,000 bu in 1916, with 1,176,000,000 bu in 1915 and 1,164,000,000 bu in 1914. He says efficiency of this 1,200,000,000 bu crop will easily exceed the record low quality yield of last year and is a full northern average. It, however, meets an excess live stock consumption and liberal southwest requirements. While a 2,700,000,000 bu crop for the country may not appear liberal, the excessive economy due in the wheat sections must be remembered.

Trading in November corn and oats and in provisions is expected to start Tuesday.

A majority of the leading railroads have ordered out inspection crews for work today and tomorrow, and the inspection department will work Monday. It is generally believed that receipts of all grain for Tuesday's market will exceed 2,000 cars.

Carelessness on the part of some of the grain receivers in handling perishable details of switching orders has caused the terminal manager of the railway administration to issue an imperative order requiring receivers, in ordering grain to public elevators, to notify the proprietor of the elevators of the full details, giving the car number, initial railroad from which the car is ordered, grain, and details of the grade and name of owner. Without this information grain cannot be taken into public elevators.

Lake shipments of grain from Chicago last week aggregated 6,474,000 bu, of which 4,477,000 bu were wheat, 1,899,000 bu oats, and 98,000 bu rye. Included in the wheat was 4,477,000 bu and oats 1,749,000 bu to Canadian ports, which will be dropped from the visible statement Tuesday.

Grain receipts at Chicago Saturday were: Wheat, 365 cars; corn, 336 cars; oats, 302 cars; rye, 36 cars; barley, 12 cars.

CASH GRAIN NEWS

Little change was shown in the cash markets of the country Saturday, the bulk of sales being at the government figure to a fraction above. At Minneapolis a good deal of grain is coming damp as the result of recent rains. Local arrivals were 365 cars. The three southwestern markets had 836 cars, against 700 cars a week ago, and 185 cars last year. In the northwest arrivals were 678 cars, against 304 cars last year.

Cash corn was easy, and after a few sales early at unchanged prices, declined 5c, and a few cars were reported to have brought 10c under the previous day's figures. Offerings were liberal. St. Louis was unchanged, Omaha unchanged to 5c lower, Peoria 2@5c lower and Milwaukee 3@5c higher. Leading markets had 374 cars, against 164 cars last year.

Demand for cash oats came mainly from elevator interests. First sales were ¼c higher, and later ¼c under Friday's level was paid. St. Louis, Kansas City and Omaha were ½c lower, Peoria ¼@1c lower, and Milwaukee unchanged to ½c higher. Cash grain prices in leading markets follow:

PRODUCE TRADE

Beginning Tuesday, Sept. 3, all cars of live poultry received at Chicago will be inspected by an officer of the United States food administration before it can be unloaded or offered for sale, unless permission is received. Express runs are subject to inspection at all times. This is expected to do away with excess feeding of poultry, particularly of sand and gravel, to make them weigh heavy.

Butter prices advanced ½c in Chicago yesterday, with a good demand and moderate offerings. In other markets no changes were made.

Fresh eggs sold readily, with the market firm. Live spring chickens were ½c lower and roosters ½c higher. Receipts for the week were 20 cars and 4,615 coops. Small improvement in the demand for potatoes was noticeable. Receipts for the week were 485 cars, against 266 cars the previous week and 375 cars last year. Vegetables were plentiful, the market for tomatoes being weaker. Pears were plentiful and slow sale. Supplies of apples and peaches were increased and the trade fair.

Cattle receipts for the week of 75,100 proved the largest of the month and included 19,000 rangers, most of which were from Montana. Sheep supply at 128,600 stood largest in nearly two years.

No Market Tomorrow.

There will be no market at the Chicago stockyards next Monday—Labor day. Tuesday's receipts are estimated at 25,000 cattle, 30,000 hogs, and 27,000 sheep, against 14,716 cattle, 7,267 hogs, and 15,492 sheep corresponding Tuesday a year ago. REAL ESTATE NEWS OF THE WEEK

DULLEST WEEK IN CHICAGO REALTY SINCE WAR BEGAN

Only Cheaper Classes of Property and Factory Sites Moving.

The week's real estate market undoubtedly was the dullest that has been experienced since the beginning of the war. While there was a fairly good movement of the cheaper classes of property, there was an absence of transactions of any magnitude or importance. With the exception of the Madison street leases negotiated by E. F. Keebler & Co. and a west side building lease the entire week's business with few exceptions was made up of commonplaces.

While present market conditions are strongly tending toward a state of progressive dullness, last week's showing was so much worse than any of the preceding ones of the summer as to be difficult to account for, unless it was another illustration of those occasional happenings when the market's activities are represented by negotiations instead of completed transactions.

Conditions Justify Slump.

However, there is no disguising the fact that practically everything is now making for extremely dull market conditions. What with the steady broadening of the nation's war activities, particularly in the multiplicity of its financial demands on the people, the gradual reduction of the country's business to essential war needs, including the practical suspension of general building operations, the real estate market in practically every particular class of property is suffering acutely.

A few exceptions are to be made, however, which include manufacturing property available as sites for war industries, as well as vacant and improved properties needed to furnish living accommodations in the immediate neighborhood of those industries engaged in war work. This applies particularly to the Calumet district, where the war industries are largely centralized, and for this reason it is probably the livest wire in the real estate field. The central manufacturing district has also benefited greatly from the war activities, but it has been more in the way of warehousing than manufacturing, but a number of big projects involving extensive building operations have been carried through during the last year.

Two Big Improvements.

The southwest section has also been favored in the plans for the big $5,500,000 shell plant at Ashland avenue and West Seventy-fourth street, and the enlargement of the plant of the Amalgamated Machinery corporation on Racine avenue between Thirty-seventh and Thirty-ninth streets, for the manufacture of machinery for making hugs guns and shells. But the Calumet district has been the seat of the greatest activity in the war industries field, and it has resulted in a good market for cheap home property as well, and to a somewhat less extent, for business property.

Improved factory property and warehouses along switch tracks have also benefited, both because of war requirements and also because of the lack of construction of these classes of buildings owing to the paralysis of building operations, and it is said that almost anything with four walls is now commanding larger rentals than ever before. With the exceptions noted the market is about the dullest the city has known in many years. There are a few other localities here and there which have been benefited by war activities and to a less extent by local conditions, but these are of relative insignificance as compared with what is going on in the Calumet district and the other localities referred to.

No Investment Buying.

There is absolutely no investment buying, or it is of too small a volume to be taken into consideration. At infrequent intervals a transaction is carried through in the downtown district, but the general situation is one of extreme dullness, both in the way of sales and in a leasing way. There has been considerable activity in apartment property, it, together with manufacturing property, being one of the chief sustaining features of the market, but it has been a trading market largely, with cash transactions few and far between. Subdivision property, owing largely to unfavorable building conditions, has been exceedingly dull, although here and there considerable activity is reported, but this is the exception.

Just how long this state of affairs is to continue is problematical; in the opinion of most brokers until the end of the war, or until the way it is to be ended becomes a practical certainty, and in a comparatively short time. In the business reaction that is to follow there are few brokers or operators who are not sanguine that a boom real estate market is a certainty.

Wait for the Turn.

For the present, however, it is generally thought to be merely a question of sitting tight and hanging on until the inevitable turn for the good in market conditions materializes.

There are, however, a number of shrewd operators who are conducting a still hunt for bargains, where the owners, either because they were forced to let go, or because they have grown weary of holding on with no immediate prospect of selling to advantage, have offered some rare bargains to those with a little ready money at their command. This is, in fact, one of the most interesting features of the market, and it is one which is going to net a lot of wise operators some neat money when the reaction comes.

BIG BUILDINGS FOR PACKERS IN STOCKYARDS

Two important building projects are announced in the stockyards district, one involving the construction by Armour & Co. of a nine story cooler and storage building at Packers avenue and Forty-fourth street, to cost $1,560,000, the permit for which was issued during the week. It will be of brick and concrete construction, and, it is said, will be one of the largest buildings of its kind in the country. The foundations are already in and it will be rushed to as speedy completion as possible.

Swift & Co. also will erect a five story storage building to cost about $350,000. It will be located at Forty-second and Cook streets on 184x130 feet of ground, and will have a storage capacity of about 8,000,000 pounds of meat. One floor will be used as a restaurant with a capacity of 2,000 people at one time, and another floor will be fitted up as a plant, dressing room, with about 2,000 lockers. The company has just secured a permit for a six story manufacturing building, 34.4x76.9, north of Forty-second street, to cost $30,000.

Realty Brokers Taking Outings in Dull Season

An unusual number of real estate brokers this year are taking advantage of the dull condition of the market for outings. Albert M. Wetten is fishing for big trout on the Nipigon river, north of Lake Superior; Edgar M. Snow, with Mrs. Snow, is at his cottage at the Wausakee club, in northern Wisconsin; Albert L. Strauss is motoring with his family through the Berkshires and the New England states; John B. Knight is with his old time partner, Col. John Milton Oliver, trout fishing on the Two Hearted river in northern Michigan. This is the thirty-third year these two men have camped and fished together in the north woods. E. F. Keebler will spend a week or ten days with his family at his cottage at Green Lake, Wis. He recently has closed a number of big leases in the loop district.

$45,000 PROPERTY DEAL RECORDED ON SOUTH SIDE

There was little doing in business property, the most important transaction of the week being the purchase by the National Meter company, now at 1227 South Wabash avenue, from Rosalie B. Griswld of the property in South Park avenue, 250 feet south of Cottage Grove avenue, lot 50x180 feet, east front, with three story and basement brick building, for an indicated consideration of $45,000, subject to an incumbrance of $15,000. The company will take possession in a few days.

The property on West Division street eighty-five feet east of North Oakley avenue, lot 60½x121 feet, north front, with business improvements, has been conveyed by Harry Podalsky et al, to H. Podalsky & Co., a corporation, for an indicated consideration of $20,500, subject to an incumbrance of $12,500.

Fred Korsky has bought from Peter Kisskus the property in Lincoln avenue, 200 feet southeast of Larrabee street, lot 25x125 feet, east front, with business improvements, for an indicated consideration of $14,500, subject to an incumbrance of $9,500.

STORE LEASES IN LOOP FEATURES OF WEEK'S DEALS

Movie Theaters Lease Madison Street Holdings.

Two large leases of store space in West Madison street and a Jackson boulevard building lease featured the week's business in the way of leases, there having been nothing else reported. There was one large loan, $500,000, to the Stewart Manufacturing company.

E. F. Keebler & Co. leased for Harry C. Moir, president of the Morrison Hotel company, to a local syndicate operating moving picture theaters the store at 63 West Madison street for a term of ten years from May 1 at a term rental of $200,000; also the store at 69 West Madison street for ten years from the same date at a term rental of $250,000. Both stores are now occupied as theaters, but the new lessees will, it is stated, expend a large sum in remodeling the two theaters, which will be operated under the names of the Rose and Alcazar theaters.

The upper floors recently were leased by Keebler & Co. to W. P. Mussey & Co. for fifteen years at a rental of $360,000 for the term. The same brokers recently leased to Mr. Moir for ninety-nine years the property at 27-29 South Clark street for a term rental of approximately $1,000,000.

In the west side lease the Underwriters' Salvage company has leased from M. L. Rothschild the six story building at 771-75 West Jackson boulevard north front, 75x166 feet, for fifteen years from May 1, 1919, at a reported term rental of $240,000. It will be occupied for storage and office purposes by the company, which is owned by the insurance interests of the city and disposes of stocks salvaged from burned buildings.

The Central Trust company is trustee in a bond issue loan of $500,000, one to five years, to the Stewart Manufacturing company, at 6 per cent, secured by the plant of the company and ten acres of land in the blocks bounded by Fullerton, Belden, and Kilbourn avenues and the Chicago and Northwestern tracks.

The Chicago Title and Trust company is trustee in a loan of $50,000, five years at 6 per cent, to Charles T. Luckow, secured by the premises 222 to 226 South Morgan street, lot 79x118 feet, also the premises 1022-24 Jackson boulevard, lot 57x189 feet.

The same trust company is trustee in a loan of $34,000, five years at 6 cent, to Robert A. Donnelley, secured by the property at the southwest corner of Sixty-first street and Woodlawn avenue, lot 50x174 feet, with flat improvements.

Samuel A. Kahn of Lafayette, Ind., has given a trust deed to the same trust company to secure a loan of $35,000, three years at 6 per cent, secured by the property in Clarendon avenue, southeast corner of Wilson avenue, west front, 246x250x220 feet, back to the lake.

H. A. Haugan is trustee in a loan of $40,000, one year, at 6 per cent, to Gustaf A. Nilson, secured by the property at the northwest corner of Hinman and Keeney avenues, Evanston, 168½x173 feet.

Christian R. Wallace has given a trust deed to H. P. Kransz to secure a loan of $45,000, seven years, at 6 per cent, secured by the property at 4448-58 Malden street.

H. O. Stone & Co. have been appointed agents for the Advertising building, 123 West Madison street.

Lot in Jarvis Avenue, Birchwood, Brings $32,500

George N. Neise, vice president of Foreman Bros. Banking company, has purchased from Charles E. Dean the vacant 100x150 feet, south front in Jarvis avenue, just east of the Birchwood station of the elevated road, for a reported consideration of $32,500, conveying in part payment the vacant in Fargo avenue, 350 feet west in Greenview avenue, north front, 164x197x35 feet, at a stated consideration of $10,000. Mr. Neise has no present plans looking to the improvement of the Jarvis avenue parcel.

Herbert M. Ellinwood has conveyed to Edward J. Lusk the property at the northwest corner of Turner avenue and Fifty-eighth street, 270x126x150 feet, and other lots in the same subdivision, for a stated consideration of $22,500.

Cook County Realty Board Opposes Gas Rate

Officials of the Cook county real estate board are going to appeal from the ruling of the state public utilities commission, allowing the Peoples Gas Light and Coke company to make a 27½ per cent increase in rates.

At a meeting during the week of the board's committee on public utilities J. Madison Pace, the chairman, and William M. Lawton, attorney, were instructed to perfect an appeal. The committee adopted resolutions declaring the increase excessive and an unjust burden on the gas consumers.

OLD WORLD'S FAIR FLAT IS BIGGEST DEAL OF WEEK

Only Three or Four Apartment Sales Are for Over $25,000.

What the week's market for apartment property was may be gathered from the fact that with the exception of the old Beveridge apartment at the southeast corner of Twenty-sixth street and Calumet avenue the largest sale of the week was represented by a consideration of only $46,500, with only three or four above $25,000.

The indicated consideration in the case of the Beveridge was $68,500, but for the reason it has figured as a trading proposition in a number of deals during the last several years, its present transfer is not of much importance in a market way. It was conveyed by Mary E. Trotter to George W. Hunter of Hamilton, O., subject to an incumbrance of $58,500, the purchaser giving a trust deed to E. Massey to secure an additional $28,000, four years at 6 per cent. It is a world's fair structure, seven stories high, contains sixty-five apartments of four, five, and six rooms, and is on a lot 70x131 feet.

Deal on Belden Avenue.

The apartment property at the southwest corner of Burling street and Belden avenue, with 95x125 feet of ground, was conveyed by Otto A. Altschul to August C. Banmann for an indicated consideration of $46,500, subject to an incumbrance of $31,500, the purchaser, conveying in part payment the property in Larrabee street fifty feet south of Garfield avenue, lot 66x125, with brick improvements, at an indicated consideration of $10,000.

Another north side transaction made a matter of record was the sale by Mrs. Mary L. Carus to Louis Freter of the twelve apartment building, with 49x123 feet of ground, at the northeast corner of Greenview avenue and Roscoe street, for an indicated consideration of $45,500, subject to an incumbrance of $35,500.

Record was made of the transfer by Norman Fagin to Toba Rightman of the property in Jackson boulevard thirty feet west of St. Louis avenue, improved with two three flat buildings, for an indicated consideration of $34,125, subject to an incumbrance of $24,125.

Flats Are Transferred.

The property at the southwest corner of Christiana and Sunnyside avenues, lot 38½x125 feet, with flat improvements, has been conveyed by Ernest H. M. Koch to Edward and Clara Carlson for an indicated consideration of $28,000, subject to an incumbrance of $20,000.

George W. Hoffman has conveyed to August K. and Nannie Manst the property in Cornelia avenue, 100 feet east of Halsted street, lot 50x125 feet, south front, with flat improvements, for an indicated consideration of $15,000, no incumbrance showing.

William F. Bohn has purchased from Hiram Deleamp the property at the southeast corner of Magnolia and Rosedale avenues, lot 37x125 feet, with flat improvements, for an indicated consideration of $25,000, subject to an incumbrance of $15,000.

Record was made of the transfer by John H. Henry to Frederick H. Bartlett of the old Erie apartments, at the southwest corner of Thirty-seventh street and Lake Park avenue, lot 111x120 feet, and other property, subject to an incumbrance of $31,500, there being 50 cents' worth of stamps on the deed.

TREASURY DRAWS HEAVILY UPON BANK DEPOSITS

Reduction in New York $87,096,000 and Here $19,744,954.

Heavy payments by the treasury department last week caused a reduction of $87,096,000 in the government deposits held by the New York banks. The reserve banks also were drawn upon.

It is assumed the disbursements were in favor of domestic purchases and consequently will work back to the banks again in the form of demand deposits. The New York bank statement, in fact, showed an increase in that item of $45,-252,000, while loans decreased $31,679,000.

Bank Statement Ordinary.

The bank statement as a whole was not much out of the ordinary, though the increase in deposits and expanded reserve requirements resulted in a decrease of $4,027,480 in the surplus reserve. The figures follow:

Draws Heavily on Chicago.

The treasury department drew heavily on the local federal reserve bank last week, drawing down government deposits from $26,940,755 the previous week to $7,462,801, a decrease of $19,744,954. Meanwhile federal reserve notes in circulation increased $12,535,604, bringing the item up to $314,805,767, a new high.

PUBLIC UTILITY COMPANIES SHOW MORE STRENGTH

The financial position of utilities in general was strengthened materially during the week. The War Finance corporation made more loans direct to utility companies and indicated that while it is preferred that the corporations' loans be made through the banks, no essential utility will be permitted to suffer because of the failure of bankers to make loans to it.

Earnings of the conservatively managed properties have turned for the better in the major part and country-wide increases in street railway fares make themselves felt in July earnings reports. The sale of a $3,000,000 Northern States Power company note issue on the day of offering heartened investors and utility managers.

Maturities have ceased to be a troublesome factor for some time. There are only $4,236,200 of utility bonds and notes due in September, and $2,170,700 of this amount are Appalachian Power notes which have been provided for. The next largest maturing issue is less than $800,000.

The Louisville Gas and Electric company is showing, in its improved gross and net earnings, the benefits of increases in demands for industrial power and of requirements for Camp Taylor, near Louisville, where 50,000 men are in training. The electrical output from the company's steam turbine station is running upwards of 25 per cent greater than last year.

WESTERN INDIANA NOTES FALL DUE; NO PROVISION

Holders Wonder How Maturity Will Be Met.

BY GLENN GRISWOLD.

There fall due today $15,000,000 one year collateral 6 per cent notes of the Chicago and Western Indiana railroad and Chicago owners have been searching for information as to how the maturity is to be met. The notes were put out a year ago to pay $12,935,000 of notes then due, a majority of which were extended by exchange.

The notes were floated by J. P. Morgan & Co., the First National Bank of New York, the National City company, and Harris, Forbes & Co. Because of the double holiday payment on the notes will not be due until Tuesday. The character of the houses sponsoring the issue and of the properties securing them assures that the maturity will be met, but the market of the last few days has been a source of worry to noteholders.

Close Near Par.

The notes closed yesterday at 98 bid and 99 asked. Interest of more than 1 per cent for one day would appear sufficiently attractive to have advanced the notes to par had any one with money to invest known that the notes will be paid Tuesday.

The notes are secured by the deposit of $21,000,000 first and refunding 5 per cent bonds and these are secured in turn by property mortgages and the credit of twelve roads owning the property, a list which includes the Pennsylvania, Atchison, Illinois Central, Burlington, and Rock Island.

Farmers Pay Mortgages.

Farmers are driving farm mortgage bankers to distraction by persisting in paying off mortgages before they are due. In some communities farmers are trying to pay off mortgages that have run less than two years. There are fewer renewals asked on maturing mortgages than at any time in recent years.

The ordinary farm mortgage provides that it cannot be paid within two years. During the remaining three years of its life the mortgage may be paid by the serving of notice sixty days in advance. Banks generally are insisting on the literal interpretation of the mortgage and demanding notices. The volume of outstanding mortgages is rapidly shrinking.

Can't Make Improvements.

There are two principal reasons for this development. Farmers are prosperous beyond all precedent, and they ar not making improvements and extensions for which even a prosperous farmer might borrow money in normal times. Building costs are so high as to be almost prohibitive. The same is true of ditching, fencing, and clearing projects. Another consideration is the inherent preference for the farmer with money to invest to put it into farm land that he can look at. After paying off his own mortgage, the prosperous farmer may lend money to his neighbor on more favorable terms than those of the mortgage banker.

INSURANCE NEWS IN ALL BRANCHES EAST AND WEST

Several Conventions Are Scheduled for the Week.

BY THOMAS R. WEDDELL.

Several important insurance conventions will be held this week. The National Association of Life Underwriters and the Life Underwriters' Association of Canada will meet jointly for the first time, their sessions beginning Tuesday at the Hotel Astor in New York City, and lasting four days. The speakers will include Lord Reading, the British ambassador; Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, chief justice of the Circuit court of Canada; ex-Chief Justice Charles E. Hughes, George W. Perkins, and, possibly President Wilson. In addition a number of prominent life insurance men will speak on various phases of the business. The general topic of the conference is "The Contribution of Life Insurance Toward Winning the War."

The annual meeting of the Western Union will be held Wednesday and Thursday at New London, Conn., preceded by a meeting of the governing committee Tuesday. The two year term of John Marshall Jr. expires this year, and it is expected that another Chicagoan will be elected to succeed him.

The thirteenth annual meeting of the Fire Marshals' Association of North America will be held Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday at Sioux Falls, S. D. This is the first time this conference has met in the grain growing section of the country, and the papers will pay special attention to the conservation of the elevators, mills, and food warehouses of the country against the hazards of fire.

ALIEN PROPERTY INSURANCE.

Dean Caldwell, a real estate man in Washington, has been appointed insurance surveyor-broker for the alien property custodian. He has been instructed to survey all properties in which the alien property custodian has a substantial interest, and if they are not adequately protected by insurance, to see that full coverage is provided. This is to include not only fire insurance, but explosion, bombardment, and war cover insurance where needed. The alien property custodian has charge of hundreds of large plants, and Mr. Caldwell has already placed $10,000,000 of explosion insurance on the Botany Worsted mills.

GRAIN ASSOCIATION LINES.

An interesting tabulation has been made of the companies in the Underwriters' Grain association, according to their affiliations. The union companies have 63.42 per cent of the total capacity, the bureau companies have 20.4 per cent, and the nonaffiliated 15.16. The normal proportion of carrying capacity as between the union and the bureau is 77 per cent for the union and 23 per cent for the bureau. The nonaffiliated companies had an unusually large proportion because of the 3 per cent of the Globe & Rutgers, 1.75 taken by the London Lloyds, and the increased subscriptions from the mill mutuals.

TALK OF THE STREET

Railroad issues received most attention in the market. There was a general uplift based upon the probability of the contract with the roads being agreeable to the owners and the extraordinary increases in earnings shown in the July statements.

While the return to shareholders if the properties will be fixed under government operation, still the fact that rates are on a paying basis will encourage proper maintenance and insure the return of the lines, if return be made, in good condition and with the best outlook in a decade. Unless the present trend should change railroad properties after the war should again be in the prime investment class they were before the interstate commerce commission became so critical of efforts made to maintain earnings and provide for development of the properties.

Southern railway, whose showing is now unusually good, attracted the most interest. The shares advanced better than one point. Wall street credited some of the buying to Dutch interests.

The restraint which was put on the market by financial interests operated to depress prices on Thursday and Friday, but yesterday there was a distinct tendency toward recovery. There is still ahead, however, the coming Liberty loan and full digestion of the tax law. The undertone is bullish and any ease in money or the suggestion of it by large Wall street interests would be reflected in higher prices.

United States Steel common afforded a fair index to market sentiment. It was ex dividend Friday 4¼ per cent and for a time was inclined to be weak. But yesterday it rose 1⅝ points and closed at the equivalent of 116. That represents the sum of the influence which the money pool "warning" had.

In good quarters in Wall street doubt was expressed whether a majority of the board of directors of the American Steel Foundries company will favor an increase in the dividend rate or an additional distribution in some other form to shareholders. The company's earnings, however, make a flattering exhibit. Apparently the management having in mind the company's lean years is desirous of cleaning up its bonded indebtedness. The funded debt is now $1,716,800, against $4,364,300 at the beginning of 1916.

Crucible Steel was rather strong, advancing to 68⅝. Bethlehem B stock was also higher. The copper shares were dull. All that has been said in their favor has not brought about any considerable volume of buying. The leather stocks were also in good tone and American Sugar gained 1⅝.

Light on Blue Sky Stocks.

The capital issues committee at Washington has discovered that the blue sky laws of the various states are not stopping the sale of purely speculative stocks. Transfers of Liberty bonds to sellers of such stocks indicate that their sales amount to $250,000,000 to $500,-000,000 a year. There is no suggestion that the laws are not well administered. The weakness must be sought elsewhere.

A study of the operation of the Illinois law throws some light on this question. It has impelled a few stock sellers to remove to neighboring states, but most of them are still here and they are offering as many shades of "blue sky" as ever. In the first seven months under the new law 416 licenses were issued, about three-fourths of them for new promotions and one-fourth for companies that have been operating long enough to furnish income accounts. Promoters of most of the latter carefully conceal the figures. If anyone wants them he can go to Springfield and examine the records. This department has obtained the reports of those that have been most active in stock selling and in a majority of cases has found that they were operating at a loss. It is self-evident that these figures ought to be placed before every person who is asked to buy stock.

Most of the licenses are for new promotions which have no operating profits or losses. A third of these are oil and mining companies offering $19,-000,000 of stock. The experience of many years indicates that only a small proportion of oil and mine promotions ever pay back anything to investors. There are also tire, wheel, auto, and film promotions offering $14,000,000 of stock. Experience of the last four years indicates a mortality among such concerns almost as great as that of oil wells and mines. It is reasonably certain that a majority of these promotions will be unsuccessful, but human foresight cannot pick the winners. If all were required to furnish monthly reports of condition and earnings the weaker ones would drop out of the race much earlier and cause far less less to investors. What is needed is not more official control but more light.

Amalgamated Sugar Company.

F. W., Saugatuck, Mich.: The Amalgamated Sugar company, which is issuing $3,750,000 of first mortgage serial bonds, was formed in 1915 as a consolidation of two companies which had been operating profitably for many years. The American Sugar Refining company controlled one of them and owned a large interest in the other. Neither ever made public any detailed information and the new company has been somewhat secretive. It has outstanding $5,824,400 of stock and no funded debt except the new bonds. Its average annual net earnings in the last three years were $2,156,415. This is enough to retire the $750,000 of bonds which will mature annually and to pay the maximum interest charge nearly five times. As the sugar business is practically certain to continue highly prosperous for several years and most of these bonds will be retired in that time, they are well secured.

Brief Answers.

E. J.—The Mutual Oil and Gas company reports that it has leases on 680 acres in Oklahoma and eleven producing wells. As it gives no figures on production, it is presumed the amount of oil is small. There is $1,000,000 of stock, which seems large. On the basis of this information the stock is almost purely speculative at present.

F. E. K.—A request for official information about the Fort Wayne Tire and Rubber company has brought no reply.

H. P. D.—The Louisiana Live Stock company has been reviewed. Send stamped envelope for clipping if you wish it.

—Does It Pay To Allow Cash Discount?

Your profit is in your turn-over. Let us be Banker for your Customers and carry them for you—and at their expense

Extracts from "The Timberman:"—

"The Primary object is to secure prompt return on sales in order that we may use this capital to produce more business.

It is more profitable for a manufacturer to pay 2% for 45 days' unexpired time (which is 16% per annum) than it is to carry an Account for 60 days without discount.

On Accounts discounted in 15 days, the capital turn-over is 24 times a year. Accounts running 60 days, the turn-over is only 6 times a year, therefore, it takes 4 times more capital to do the same volume of business on 60 day Accounts than it does on 15 day Accounts.

Under our present method of extending credit the manufacturer or his banker is furnishing a large part of the capital for the Dealer. The hypothecation of invoices shifts the burden from the manufacturer to the banker."

Couldn't you make more selling profits if your Accounts were discounted either by your customers or by us, than by waiting 30, 60 or 90 days for your money? What is the difference whether we discount your Accounts or whether your customers discount them?

As you get the cash and your customers pay off the Banker, you are not over-trading by selling either your Accounts or Acceptances.

Reasons Why Your Daughter Should Become a Comptometer Operator

First*—Short Course of Preparation.
It takes the average high school girl six months to a year to become a stenographer or bookkeeper. Six to eight weeks' training will make her a Comptometer Operator.

Second*—Salary Above Average from the Start.
Because a good Comptometer Operator can do as much figure work on bookkeeping, billing, payroll and cost work as two to three people working mentally—thus conserving man power and money—also cutting down errors and costly mistakes.

Third*—Pleasant, Agreeable Work.
There is none of the drudgery of mental figuring. The work is clean and interesting among high class business associates. We can place you in positions that are conveniently located.

Fourth*—Big Demand for Comptometer Operators.
The men are leaving and these vacancies must be filled so there will be no slackening in the war work. Since August 1st our School Department has had calls from our customers for over 300 trained Comptometer Operators.

This Young Girl GETS $1200

Agnes Norlin, a "Spencerian" stenographer only 11 months out of school, is paid $1,200 per year.

This is not unusual, for "Spencerian Quick Writing" is learned so quickly that you are 2 to 3 months ahead of other systems the day you start, and it doesn't take long with this remarkable system to acquire the speed that commands a high salary.

LARGE SCHOOL THE BEST

Our large force of expert teachers, each specializing on one subject, gives pupils better instruction and personal attention than is possible in the small school, where 1 or 2 teachers must teach all subjects, as in a country district school. Don't put convenient location before an expert teaching force, only possible in a large school.

COMPLETE COURSES.

Besides "Spencerian Quick Writing," our schools offer complete courses in Bookkeeping, Office Practice, Advanced Accounting, Van Sant Shorthand, Typewriting, Adding Machine, Dictaphone, English, Penmanship, etc. Special Secretarial and Comptometer Courses. A Great War Course

LEARN STENOTYPY
The Machine Way in Shorthand

War demands the quickest and best of training. Here Stenotypy predominates, for you can learn Stenotypy much more quickly than shorthand and at the same time develop 50 to 100 per cent greater efficiency.

Stenotypists Excel

Stenotypists hold all world's records for speed and accuracy in recording speech. This means that they turn out more and better letters per day. So in Business and Civil Service the demand for these super-stenographers is far greater than the supply. For this reason their salaries are high and opportunities rich.

An Opportunity for You

Stenotypy makes hardest Civil Service examinations easy. It means a good position with the Ford Motor Co., Goodrich Rubber Co., Bethlehem Steel Co., or any one of thousands of concerns, large and small, who eagerly take all the Stenotypists we can furnish. And they send in dozens of calls daily for more.

This School Highly Endorsed

Established and directed by The Stenotype Company of Indianapolis, it maintains the highest standard of teaching excellence. And through employment offices in eleven large cities from coast to coast insures you a good position anywhere.

Approved by students from seven states last year. Central location, light, airy quarters and pleasant surroundings make study here a pleasure.

A new and interesting plan of night school work gives time for healthful recreation and guarantees superior results.

FROM SWITZERLAND THIS WOMAN WROTE

"YOU know her kind of woman—chic, dainty, exquisitely feminine, independent of the world in general, tasting the honey of life wherever she chose."

She had been traveling about from London to Paris, then to Switzerland and on beyond. She had learned the comfort of traveling with CREME ELCAYA for her constant use. Then the war came, making shipments difficult, and she learned the discomfort of traveling without CREME ELCAYA. And so began the search for it, ending with this letter:

Aarau, Switzerland.

Dear Sir:

I have used ELCAYA products ever since they could be had at Selfridge's, in London, but am no longer able to obtain them. You would oblige me very much by kindly letting me know whether you have a depot in Switzerland, or whether it would be possible to get ELCAYA direct from New York.

Yours truly,
(Miss) M...... L......

This letter tells its own story of the place CREME ELCAYA, the non-greasy, disappearing toilet cream, has made for itself with women who are careful about the little niceties of their appearance. They write us frankly and unsolicited what they have learned from their own experience — that there is no substitute for CREME ELCAYA, and they go to no end of trouble to get it.

As I have said before, it is not alone what CREME ELCAYA does to protect and soften and clear your skin—

It is the unbelievable attraction that it adds to your personal appearance which will make you love CREME ELCAYA just as every woman does who uses it rightly.

And the method is so simple if you will follow it whenever you use your face powder. Here it is: .. . .

Begin today to make your skin beautiful by this formula—

A little CREME ELCAYA rubbed gently into the skin; then if you need color, a very little good rouge spread carefully over the cheeks before the cream is quite dry; and after that the film of face powder over all.

Watch the improvement in your appearance. Even your eyes will gain charm. Before you'd believe it possible, your skin will be so good to look at that you will go often to your mirror. And the joy of knowing that you give pleasure to all who see you will add new joy to life.

We want to send you a trial package containing Creme Elcaya, the non-greasy, skin-refining toilet cream, and a sample of Elcaya Complexion Powder, which many find to blend most pleasingly with Creme Elcaya. Send ten cents in a letter marked Department "K" to the address below. We recommend Elcaya Rouge; it combines "naturally" with Creme Elcaya.

How I Improved My Memory In One Evening

The Amazing Experience of Victor Jones

"Of course I place you! Mr. Addison Sims of Seattle.

"If I remember correctly—and I do remember correctly—Mr. Burroughs, the lumberman, introduced me to you at the luncheon of the Seattle Rotary Club three years ago in May. This is a pleasure indeed! I haven't laid eyes on you since that day. How is the grain business? And how did that amalgamation work out?"

The assurance of this speaker—in the crowded corridor of the Hotel McAlpin—compelled me to turn and look at him, though I must say it is not my usual habit to "listen in" even in a hotel lobby.

"He is David M. Roth, the most famous memory expert in the United States," said my friend Kennedy, answering my question before I could get it out. "He will show you a lot more wonderful things than that before the evening is over."

And he did.

As we went into the banquet room the toastmaster was introducing a long line of the guests to Mr. Roth. I got in line, and when it came to my turn Mr. Roth asked, "What are your initials, Mr. Jones, and your business connection and telephone number?" Why he asked this I learned later, when he picked out from the crowd the 60 men he had met two hours before and called each by name without a mistake. What is more, he named each man's business and telephone number, for good measure.

I won't tell you all the other amazing things this man did, except to tell how he called back, without a minute's hesitation, long lists of numbers, bank clearings, prices, lot numbers, parcel post rates and anything else the guests gave him in rapid order.

When I met Mr. Roth again—which you may be sure I did the first chance I got—he rather bowled me over by saying, in his quiet, modest way:

"There is nothing miraculous about my remembering anything I want to remember, whether it be names, faces, figures, facts or something I have read in a magazine.

"You can do this just as easily as I do. Any one with an average mind can learn quickly to do exactly the same things which seem so miraculous when I do them.

"My own memory," continued Mr. Roth, "was originally very faulty. Yes it was—a really poor memory. On meeting a man I would lose his name in thirty seconds, while now there are probably 10,000 men and women in the United States, many of whom I have met but once, whose names I can call instantly on meeting them."

"That is all right for you, Mr. Roth," I interrupted, "you have given years to it. But how about me?"

"Mr. Jones," he replied, "I can teach you the secret of a good memory in one evening. This is not a guess, because I have done it with thousands of pupils. In the first of seven simple lessons which I have prepared for home study, I show you the basic principle of my whole system and you will find it—not hard work as you might fear—but just like playing a fascinating game. I will prove it to you."

He didn't have to prove it. His Course did; I got it the very next day from his publishers, the Independent Corporation.

When I tackled the first lesson, I suppose I was the most surprised man in forty-eight States to find that I had learned—in about one hour—how to remember a list of one hundred words so that I could call them off forward and back without a single mistake.

The first lesson stuck. And so did the other six.

Read this letter from C. Louis Allen, who at 32 years became president of a million-dollar corporation, the Pyrene Manufacturing Company of New York, makers of the famous fire extinguisher:

> "Now that the Roth Memory Course is finished, I want to tell you how much I have enjoyed the study of this most fascinating subject. Usually these courses involve a great deal of drudgery, but this has been nothing but pure pleasure all the way through. I have derived much benefit from taking the course of instruction and feel that I shall continue to strengthen my memory. That is the best part of it. I shall be glad of an opportunity to recommend your work to my friends."

Mr. Allen didn't put it a bit too strong.

The Roth Course is priceless! I can absolutely count on my memory now. I can call the name of most any man I have met before—and I am getting better all the time. I can remember any figures I wish to remember. Telephone numbers come to mind instantly, once I have filed them by Mr. Roth's easy method. Street addresses are just as easy.

The old fear of forgetting (you know what that is) has vanished. I used to be "scared stiff" on my feet—because I wasn't sure. I couldn't remember what I wanted to say.

Now I am sure of myself, and confident, and "easy as an old shoe" when I get on my feet at the club, or at a banquet, or in a business meeting, or in any social gathering.

Perhaps the most enjoyable part of it all is that I have become a good conversationalist—and I used to be as silent as a sphinx when I got into a crowd of people who knew things.

Now I can call up like a flash of lightning most any fact I want right at the instant I need it most. I used to think a "hair-trigger" memory belonged only to the prodigy and genius. Now I see that every man of us has that kind of memory if he only knows how to make it work right.

I tell you it is a wonderful thing, after groping around in the dark for so many years, to be able to switch the big searchlight on your mind and see instantly everything you want to remember.

This Roth Course will do wonders in your office.

Since we took it up you never hear any one in our office say "I guess" or "I think it was about so much" or "I forget that right now" or "I can't remember" or "I must look up his name." Now they are right there with the answer—like a shot.

The Man Behind the Gun

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

NEVER before perhaps in poster form has the power that lies behind our khaki clad ranks been made as manifest as in this strong piece of painting by Dean Cornwell. The embodiment of the spirit of labor stands clear against a background of ships and factories, their red funnels belching smoke and flame into the heavens, and below pass, file on file, the rows of men, gun on shoulder, going "over there."

Not less a fighter is he who stands back to back with them and pits his strength against the strength of the Hun hordes. Not the less a hero though he never sight the enemy himself. Rather is he Labor, the bulwark of our fighting forces on land and on sea. With his strength he makes them possible. Mr. Cornwell has caught this truth and made it visible in the figure of this muscular, half naked man with his firm chin and far seeing eyes. In the simplicity of the appeal lies its power.

This poster is one of several which Dean Cornwell has painted for the government. Mr. Cornwell was a student at the Art institute and later worked in the east under Harvey Dunn. While at the institute Mr. Cornwell was on the staff of "The Chicago Tribune." He is one of the leading illustrators in the country among the younger men. His position in this regard is the more remarkable as he has attained it in the comparatively short apace of three years. Mr. Cornwell paints his illustrations in oil—a rather uncommon medium for this type of picture. His work is found in several of the leading magazines of today.

EAT AND GO SIN

And Tracy Brewster Obeyed and Enjoyed It.

TRACY CYRUS BREWSTER awoke and yawned a neat, precise yawn as he pushed back the violet coverlet on his colonial four-poster. Then he tapped a dulcet chimes which stood on an ivory inlaid table. Judson emerged.

"Draw the shade, Judson," said young Mr. Brewster in a fatigued and cultured tone. "That sunbeam clashes frightfully with the rug. And what time is it, Judson? Don't speak harshly, my nerves are wretched."

"It lacks a few moments of half after the hour of 10," said Judson, smoothly dispensing the information as one paying out a silken ribbon.

Mr. Brewster's brow furrowed ever so slightly. "Have I slept well, Judson?" he asked.

"You tossed some, I believe, sir," said the valet.

"That's what comes of settlement work, Judson. Are you familiar with settlement work?"

"Well, not as you might call familiar, if I may say so, sir," said Judson. "I frequently take a hand at whist, sir, with the kitchen maid and the chauffeur."

Mr. Brewster contemplated Judson unblinkingly for a moment. "Yes," he said, "it's a matter of contribution, in either case. Settlement work, Judson, is helping the poor."

"Thank you, sir."

Brewster's brows lifted slightly. "You're not in want, are you, Judson?"

"O, no, sir. I said 'thank you' for enlightening me."

"Yes, yes, of course. Last night I heard a philanthropist lecture to the Ghetto sufferers on the 'Impress of Japanese Art on the Emotions of Fishmongers.' They seemed greatly benefited."

"I have no doubt, if I may be permitted to say so, sir."

"Fishmongers are rather smelly, aren't they, Judson?"

"I believe I have read of some such thing, sir."

"Um, yes. Afterward I went out and bought these people something to eat," continued Mr. Brewster. "Have you ever had occasion, Judson, to notice how lectures on art improve the appetite?"

"I have no doubt, sir."

"Would you mind telling me, Judson, who is in the house?"

"No one, sir."

"No one?"

"The family have gone aboard the yacht for the week end, I believe, sir."

"Father, mother, every one?"

"Yes, sir."

Mr. Brewster pondered a moment. "I suppose I shall have to pawn the family plate," he said presently.

Judson's face lengthened in pain and surprise. "Beg pardon, sir," he said.

"O, merely a figure of speech," said Mr. Brewster wearily. "I am going settlementing again this evening Judson. The Ghetto probably will be hungry. It is expensive."

"But, if you will pardon me, sir," said Judson, "you have an engagement this evening with Miss Carrington."

"Right," said Mr. Brewster. "Miss Carrington is to speak to the mission persons on 'The Architectural Beauty of Staircases.' They will require a great deal of provender. I have no doubt architectural staircases are as appetizing as impressed fishmongers. Better take a night out yourself, Judson."

"Thank you kindly, sir."

"And Judson——"

"Yes, sir."

"I think the settlementing has improved my appetite."

"If I may be permitted, sir, I would suggest that you continue to observe the diet prescribed by your physician."

"I may have olives this morning, mayn't I?"

Judson held up his hands very gently and very reprovingly. "Begging your pardon, sir," he said, "the doctor's orders do not admit of olives, sir."

"O, hang the doctor! Nor codfish balls, I suppose?"

"The doctor's best judgment forbids codfish balls, I believe, sir."

Mr. Brewster scowled. His lips formed a thin line. "Judson," he said, "I am determined."

"Yes, sir."

"Quite determined, Judson."

"Yes, sir. And if I may be so bold, sir——"

"I am determined to have olives, Judson."

A look of pain crept into Judson's eyes.

"O, Mr. Brewster——" he began.

"And I am determined to have codfish balls, Judson."

"O, please, sir——"

"And mince pie!"

"O!"

"I have seen them eat these things in the Ghetto, and they didn't have the slightest distress. Next week we are going to give them a one act drama. Do you approve the one act drama, Judson?"

"Very much, sir, for them as likes them, sir."

Mr. Brewster pondered this "for them as likes them," and presently decided nothing would be gained by pursuing the subject further with Judson. After a luxurious dawdle in the bath he managed a cup of coffee and by easy stages reached the point of his villainous breakfast far along in the afternoon. Judson observed with rising concern the disappearance of the undigestibles.

"Calm yourself, Judson," said Mr. Brewster as he finished the mince pie; "it's done every day in the Ghetto. A person in the mission told me so."

"No doubt, sir. But if I may be permitted, sir, may I not suggest that a bit of Scotch will give temporary relief from oppressiveness later?"

"No Scotch, no oppressiveness, old skeezicks," said Mr. Brewster. "Don't worry your silly bean about it."

II.

The velvet of evening which mantled Lake Shore drive, sending the lights up and the blinds down, was black cotton worsted in South Clark street, where, for the purpose of darkness, cotton is just as good as velvet. The "uncles" of adversity sat beneath their gilded three ball signs, perspiring and shirtsleeved, taking the cool breeze that blew strong (you said something!) from the pungent river.

Porky Flynn was leaning against a tier of barrels in the rear end of a "sample room." With mild disdain he viewed those who fringed the bar; samples of everything that strong liquor can do to a man. Not that Porky was averse to the cheery bowl; but he met the morning after like a deacon. It was his observation that those who drink on the morning after are only a step from the following night. Here it was evening and Porky was sober. It was well.

He was lean and hungry, like a greyhound. His nose was long and inquisitive, and his eyes sad and apologetic. His jaw was unshaven and loosely hung, and yet there was a certain alertness about him

Presently a bartender spied his negligent pose and reached indifferently for a seltzer syphon. Porky' subconscious self caught the movement and he made arrangements for his immediate departure. A thoughtful look passed over the bartender's brow and he dropped the syphon.

"What's on your mind tonight, Porky?" asked the bartender.

"Nothing but my hat, Suds," said Porky.

"Are you in shape to take a little job?"

"Am I?" asked Porky. "Say, if daylight was on sale for a nickel, I couldn't buy enough to illuminate my vest pocket."

"Do you know English Eddie?"

"I heard of him. He's that dude boxworker, ain't he?"

"That's him. Well, me and him has got a fine joint all framed up to prowl tonight. But I can't go. I got wind a couple of flymugs was hep to me, so I've got to lay close. Now, I got a swell idea just this minute. You go and meet English, and the two of you prowl the joint while the coppers is watchin' me. I guess that'll be poor, eh?"

"Bring it on; what is it?" said Porky.

"First," said Suds, "you take the kit and meet English."

"Yeh, but how will I know him?"

"Can't miss him," said Suds. "He dresses like a Easter parade, and he talks very toppy. Here." With this Suds guardedly passed a small black bag of burglars' tools over to Porky. Then he gave minute instructions for reaching the "swell joint" to be burglarized.

"Maybe you better call a cab," he suggested. "English likes to work with lots of class. You wait at the corner of Clark and Jackson till he comes. I told him I'd be there at 8. You can explain how it was."

Porky placed the kit under his coat and in the hollow of his arm, his hand thrust in his pocket, and started off.

"And say," said Suds, "English has been hitting the booze for the last few days. He may be shaky. Slip this pint in your pocket. He'll want a bracer. Sometimes he's upstage that way."

Porky thrust the flask in his pistol pocket and continued on his journey. It was near 8 o'clock when he flitted into the street. He glanced up and down the sidewalk and then laid a course northward. At Van Buren street he took his bearings and was rewarded with the view of two detectives. He slipped behind an elevated pillar. When the detectives had passed he emerged and slid across the muddy cobbles. He kept close to the buildings and presently found himself at Jackson boulevard.

Two blocks east young Mr. Brewster was just descending from the top of a motorbus. The evening was fine and cool along the lake, and Mr. Brewster felt a keen sense of executive ability.

As he stepped from the motorbus he favored the immediate vicinity with a somewhat tolerant glance and then strode briskly across the street. Another time he might have experienced a sensation of conspicuousness, philandering about thus in top hat and evening clothes, but now he gloried in his bold and forward behavior.

He recalled that Judson had attempted to summon one of the Brewster motors for him, and that he had promptly and effectually squelched Judson in this project. He would sally forth into the night alone and be a regular demon. He considered himself abundantly capable of steering a course to the murky little mission in Harrison street within whose dingy portals Patricia Carrington was addressing the aborigines of that unsoaped quarter.

After they had been properly fed up on architectural staircases he would take them to Pittsburgh Joe's and regale his being by watching them eat large portions of unthinkable food. If they could eat pigs' knuckles and kraut, so could he; and he would show Judson.

Swinging freely along, he gained Dearborn street, crossed it, and passed into the shadow of the somber Union League club. He would continue to assert his dietary independence, he would. Who was Judson, to say what was to be eaten? He paused upon this thought. A worried look came into his face. He tilted his hat back on his brow. It was cold and moist. He gulped once, twice, thrice. His knees seemed weak and incapable. A violent tumult beset his abdominal region, and he clasped his waistcoat despairingly. He recalled that Judson had warned him against the olives, and now he began to suspect there might have been something in it. Or perhaps it was the fish balls? Or the mince pie?

He seemed unable to maintain a fixed judgment in the matter. His mental processes were frivolous and evasive, skipping from olives to fish balls, to mince pie, and then back to olives, and loath to believe a charge against any of them. But presently he cast aside all equivocation and accepted the net verdict that he was distinctly distressed beyond any hope of mental relief. O, why had he been so perverse?

Porky Flynn, being alert and circumspect, peeped around the corner and beheld with some satisfaction the approach of a fastidious youth in evening clothes. The fact that the fastidious one reeled slightly and seemed labored in his movements caused Porky to mutter:

"That's English, all right. Gee, wot does a good crook want to ruin his future for by hittin' th' booze?"

He now beheld "English Eddie" pause in the shadow of the Union League club; so he passed swiftly around the corner and faded into the same shadow. Mr. Brewster still was observing the phenomena of vehicles progressing upside down. Then, somewhere out of the depth of his memory, there came the parting injunction of Judson. The thought came to him so unexpectedly that he gasped it aloud:

"If I had some whisky——"

An angel must have heard—a very dirty, slouched, and unbarbered angel. Then, out of the far-away, there came a harsh, grating sound, and Mr. Brewster tried to imagine that it was a human voice. He listened. Yes, it was a voice—a sort of a voice.

"Feel a little wabbly, English?"

Porky Flynn's mournful gaze rested upon Mr. Brewster's pale and tortured face. Mr. Brewster didn't seem able to connect the words with anything he had ever considered before. He favored Porky with a stupid grin. Something peculiar in his throat made him suspect that any attempt at speech would be unsatisfactory; so he nodded aimlessly.

"Take a little shot o' this, brother," said Porky.

He produced his flask, recalling the suggestion of Suds, the bartender. Unresisted, Porky held the fiery mead to Mr. Brewster's lips and permitted a generous, O, a very generous quantity to gurgle down his throat. During the moment of its passage the potion seemed cooling and soothing, but when the flask was removed it developed a most prodigious and devastating activity. It was as if he had gulped a lake of molten lava. It would have revived a dead man. Tears came into Mr. Brewster's eyes. He sought to speak. His vocal cords were tangled and useless. The liquor crashed through his internal economy like an angry policeman laying about him with a club. The olives, the fish balls, and the mince pie curled up and surrendered. Mr. Brewster gulped and breathed deeply. Porky held forth the torrid draft again. Mr. Brewster put it away from him with a weak and insincere smile.

"All right," said Porky, "I'll drink the rest o' this after we get through."

"Wha—wha—what is it?" asked Mr. Brewster, weakly indicating the flask.

"Just plain old panther poison," said Porky. "One slug of it'll blow a man's hat off. How do you stack up now?"

Mr. Brewster took an invoice of his person. To his intense gratification, he found his distress was no more, and he pleasantly observed that the federal building had been restored to its original position; also the street cars were going about their business as formerly. He detected with rising zest a glowing tingle in his veins. He readjusted his hat at a droll angle and called Porky "old top" in a most amiable fashion.

"Tut, tut, Judson," he said airily, "and pooh, pooh, as well." Then he executed a lithe, fantastic step.

"Nix, nix," said Porky. "Want to get us pinched?"

"My good fellow," said Mr. Brewster, "I'll blow you to a sausage and potato salad. Tit-willow, tit-willow, tit-willow!" And he sounded a pleasing vocal note to these last.

"Say, what do you think this is, a Maypole dance?" asked Porky, now inclined toward slight rancor.

"My dear fellow," said Mr. Brewster, beaming hugely, "you haven't favored me with your name."

"Aw, cheese," replied Mr. Flynn, "call me Porky. "Suds sent me t' meet youse, and he said to hand you this." He guardedly thrust the black bag into Mr. Brewster's hand.

"Dear me, of all the unexpected things," said Mr. Brewster. "Where do we—employing the popular idiom, you know—where do we go from here?"

Porky stepped to the curb muttering. "I see I gotta humor this stew," he advised himself. "A guy can't be a good crook and drink booze." He wound up this soliloquy by hailing a taxicab.

"Come on, English," he said; "we'll give th' job some class."

Mr. Brewster lolled back in the cushions and deposited his feet splendidly in one of the front seats. Then he favored his companion with a free and cherubic grin.

"Porky," he said, "Porky! What a perfect sizzler of a name. What ho!"

Then he sang, in a tuneless, triumphant voice:

"'O, the mountaineers, they have no fears,
And they march in leather breeches.
On Sabbath morn they see their dears
And squander all their riches.'"

"Aw, nix, now, English," pleaded Porky solemnly. "You'll gum up the whole party."

"Porky, good old Porky," said Mr. Brewster, tapping Mr. Flynn reassuringly on the knee, "what could be a greater measure of my esteem than that I favor you with tuneful merriment? A troubadour I, Porky, who lightly twang my harp. How did I meet you, Porky?"

"I told you," said Porky, "that Suds sent me, English."

"O, English," mused Mr. Brewster. "Silly English Judson keeping a spy on me."

"Judson?" queried Porky.

"It's all right, Porky," said Mr. Brewster with a new and glorious smile, "it's perfect—perfect—perfectly all right. Excuse my faulty locution. Silly ass said I couldn't eat olives and fish balls and mince pie, and he sends spies to watch me.

"'O, the mountaineers, they have no fears,
And they march——"

"Listen, listen, nix," Porky expostulated. "That traffic copper was watchin' us. I don't want to hurt your feelin's, but you ain't no Caruso."

"Porky, you grieve me," said Mr. Brewster with a plaintive note in his voice. "Let's have another sip from your flask."

by Robert Lee

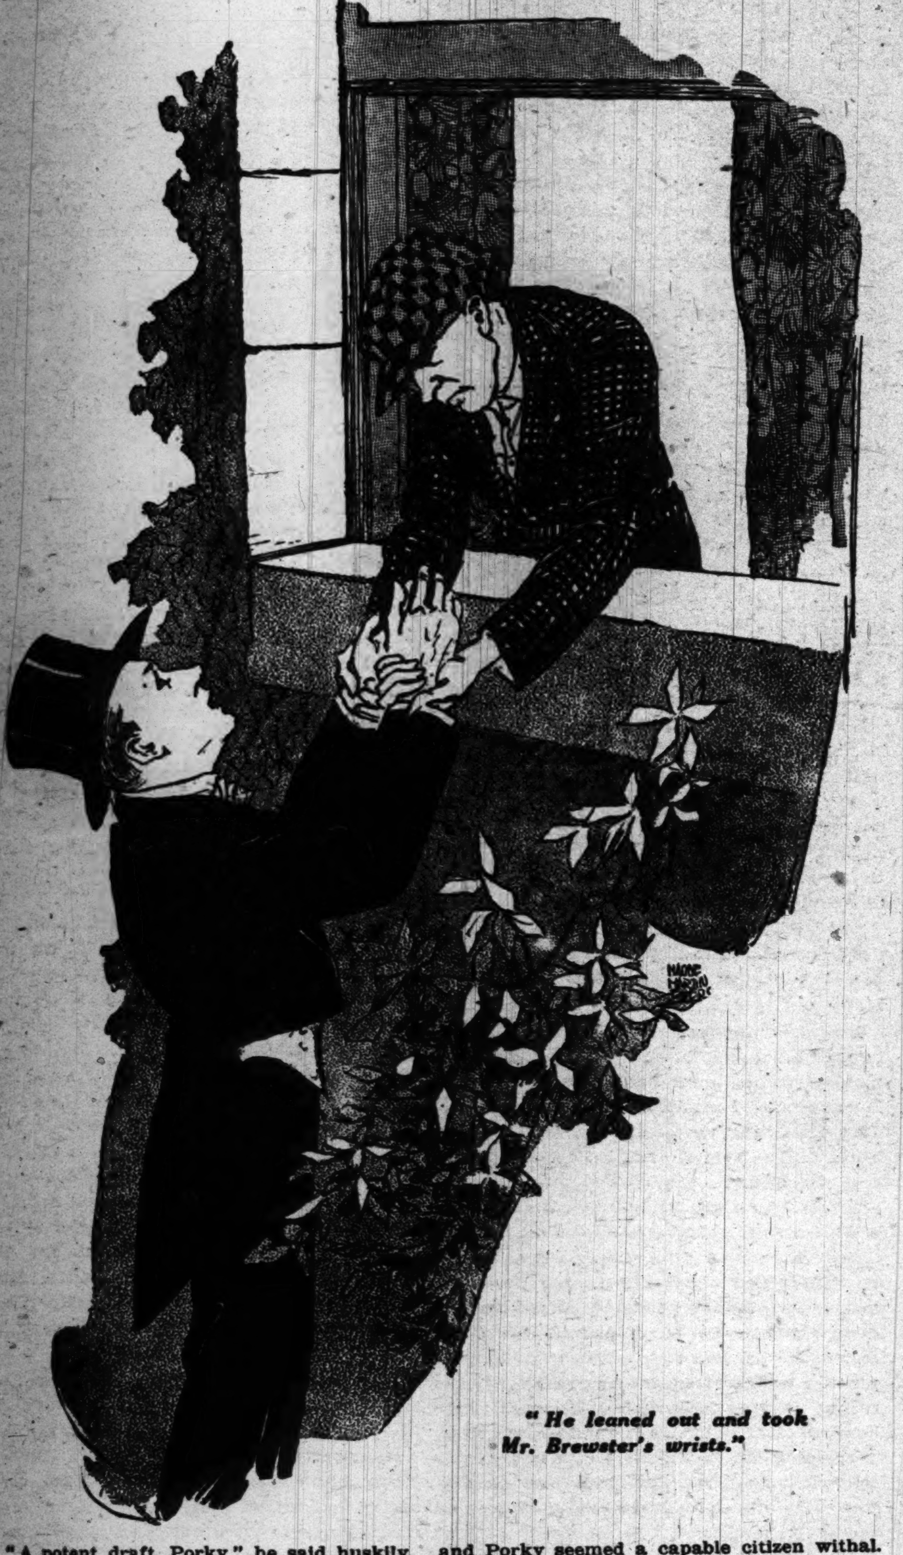
Porky's chin quivered in the exquisite shock to his moral being.

"Please, English," he said, "please don't do it. I don't claim to be no Sunday school boy, but this stuff ain't good for you. Even bankers and brokers don't drink when they're on th' job."

Mr. Brewster waved him to silence. "You are displeasing me, Porky," he said.

Porky reached for the flask. As he did so he permitted himself a brief soliloquy. "These swell crooks is certainly tough babies to get along with," he mused. He passed over the liquor, and Mr. Brewster again drank deep.



"He leaned out and took Mr. Brewster's wrists."

"A potent draft, Porky," he said huskily. Then he paraphrased Sir Walter Raleigh, who at that moment danced into his thoughts standing on the executioner's block: "'A keen medicine, but it cures all ills.'" And he laughed.

The taxicab stopped in a shaded corner. "Here's where we get out," said Porky. "Don't forget the kit." This last he whispered. Mr. Brewster felt a sense of the keenest elation. He stepped from the taxi as if he were wearing magnifying glasses, and each inconsequential object suddenly became of transcendent importance. The chauffeur drove away, leaving them to their own devices. Mr. Brewster looked about him.

"Good old Porky," he murmured. "Good old Judson. Right to the very house." He peered across the street and observed there the frowning mansion of the Brewsters, which he had but recently left.

"You know the place, all right," said Porky.

"You may jolly well wager I do," said Mr. Brewster. "I'm not so bad as that."

"Sure, you're all right," said Porky hastily, with that soothing sympathy which has characterized the friend of the potted companion through all the ages. "You carry it like a precinct captain."

Porky peered this way and that until he perceived an advantageous moment for the advance. "Come on, now," he cautioned, "easy, and no noise."

The slight ecstasy of mystery added zest to Mr. Brewster's enterprise, and he followed jauntily in the wake of his mentor. For a brief moment he paused between the huge concrete gate posts which indicated the entrance to his own home, but Porky plucked his sleeve.

"Nix," he said huskily, "they ain't no use of gettin' too gay; around by the side."

Mr. Brewster's impulse was to debate this point with Porky. He could lay hold of no immediate reason why he should not enter his own front door, and yet Porky's leadership seemed to indicate other purposes. Certainly Porky knew his business; Porky had rescued him from death with his magic bottle, and Porky seemed a capable citizen withal. He reasoned that it was a small consideration to show Porky, and he would humor him in this trifling respect. Wherefore, to further prove his utter insouciance, he lifted his voice:

"'O, the mountaineers, they have no
fears——'"

His clarion notes were abruptly hushed as Porky turned upon him with emphatic and violent gestures of impatience and alarm.

"Fer th' love o' Mike," he pleaded, "you'll get us sent to th' bandhouse fer a t'ousand years. Cheese it."

Mr. Brewster subsided into an injured silence and favored Porky with a wink of great gravity, as if he knew perfectly well what he was doing and it was all right.

They now reached the garden wall, and Porky suddenly faded into the murky shadows. Mr. Brewster followed. The shrubbery was dense, and branches of young trees slapped him in the face as he pursued a tortuous course by feeling along the wall. At an appropriate spot Porky halted. Mr. Brewster, unable to define his companion's form in the dark, suddenly became aware of his proximity by stepping on his feet, causing Porky to cry out with profane emphasis.

"Beg pardon, old dear," said Mr. Brewster in a loud and reassuring tone. "Wouldn't have done it for the world."

"Not so loud," begged Porky. "You'll wake up th' whole nort' side. Now, over th' fence. You go first an' I'll give youse a lift."

"But, Porky," said Mr. Brewster, "the gate would be so much simpler. Or, I could call the chauffeur and have him fetch a ladder."

"An' youse could also call a copper and have him fetch th' wagon, I s'pose."

Mr. Brewster stretched his hands upward and obligingly gave Porky his neatly shod foot and was boosted to the top of the wall, where he paused. Porky, trained to the service, sprang nimbly and hoisted himself to the top, and then dropped easily inside. Here he waited patiently.

"O, Porky," came the soft voice of Mr. Brewster from above. "Would you mind skipping up here for a moment."

Porky groaned. "Wot now?" he said.

"One of the silly pickets is up my trousers leg and caught fast."

Porky sighed and scrambled back upon the wall and disengaged his companion. "Now, don't break your neck coming down," he pleaded.

Once more on firm ground, Mr. Brewster felt a singular desire to celebrate the occasion with song. His purpose must have been divined, for his companion held up a warning hand.

"Slip us the jimmy," he said, "an' we'll go right in this window." He indicated the place.

"Not bad," observed Mr. Brewster, "but somewhat awkward. If you'll wait a minute, Porky, I'll just skip around front, open the door, and let you in."

"Don't go crazy," said Porky. "We go in this window."

"No trouble at all, if you must. I'll go in and open the window for you, if you have inherent objections to doors."

"Cut th' comedy and gimme th' jimmy."

Mr. Brewster handed over the kit, and from it Porky selected with unerring sense the proper tool. Mr. Brewster tilted his topper at a new angle and observed the scientific progress of his companion.

"Surprise Judson," he mused. "Old bonehead, Judson. Smuggle me in back windows, and all that rot."

There was a snap of weak metal, and the window rose slowly and silently. Porky's lank and agile frame wriggled over the sill and disappeared inside. Then he leaned out and took Mr. Brewster's wrists. In a second they both stood in the dining room breathing deeply. In the dusk of the room Mr. Brewster moved casually and freely toward a far wall. He pressed the electric switch and a flood of light poured from an inverted dome. Porky all but collapsed.

"Can it, can it!" he hoarsely commanded.

"Tut, tut, Porky," said Mr. Brewster, "tut, tut."

Porky now gazed in admiration upon his confederate. "I heard you was a game guy," he said, "but you're too fast for me. I won't be happy till I'm nine miles from here and still goin'."

"O, be comfortable. What's next?"

"Th' silver," said Porky gingerly.

"The—the—beg pardon, Porky."

"Well," said Porky, rubbing his chin dubiously, "I s'pose we ought to of brought a suitcase. We ain't got nothing to carry the stuff in."

"Silver? Suitcase?" said Mr. Brewster. He gazed at Porky, and then passed his glance amiably about the immaculately appointed dining room. A buffet decanter arrested his survey. "Porky, friend, guide, and counselor," he said, "let me pledge you in a bumper of——"

"No!"

Mr. Brewster had advanced to the decanter. But he found his progress blocked and Porky's untidy paw laid on his arm.

"Say, listen," said Porky, a look of real grief besetting his features, "let's be reasonable. I know how it is when a guy gits all lit up like a cathedral. He wants to cut up and make funny jokes an' take chances. Now, that ain't me. I'd ruther swipe a dollar watch and git away with it than grab a hatful o' diamonds and git caught. While we're all in one piece let's wrap up this silver, make a quick sneak, and be out of sight before the tax dodger what lives here gits home."

In spite of his marvelous gastric regeneration and its attendant intemperance, Mr. Brewster's mental processes suddenly came about, and he discovered himself much in the position of an actor who sees one scene swept from him and another and entirely different one substituted. He had believed himself, in some strange manner or other, under the protecting wing of Judson. But now he found himself a burglar, and not only that, but engaged in the surprising project of pilfering his own home. It struck him as being an idea of the most astonishing possibilities.

"Ripping!" he said. He beamed upon his companion with unbounded admiration. "Good old Porky, where do you get such perfectly astounding wheezes?"

"Aw, tie the bull outside," said Porky, although not at all displeased by the reference to his prowess. "How'll we pack this junk?"

Mr. Brewster held his forefinger to his brow in deep thought. A crafty smile presently played over his features.

"Make yourself comfortable a moment, old Juggins," he said. "I'll poke about a bit." He steered a happy course for Judson's throneroom, the butler's pantry. He hazily recalled telling Judson to take a night out, and he hoped for this happy advantage. He cautiously entered the pantry. Judson was out. He switched on a light, and a moment's search rewarded him. Under a shelf he found a traveling bag bearing the initials "H. J."—Henry Judson.

"Old Buzzfuzz Judson," he giggled. "Family plate in old Judson's bag. Ripping!" He bore it off and displayed it to Porky as might a boy who had performed some work of merit and expects commendation therefor.

"That's a punk keester," commented Porky critically.

Mr. Brewster was grieved. "Suppose, now," he suggested, "I should hop up and fetch one of my own?"

"Yes, an' git lost in some saloon while I hang around here till th' coppers come. I'm full o' them tricks. This'll do; let's git busy."

The bag was opened and Porky flipped open the silver drawers and began dumping the Brewster plate. Mr. Brewster lifted a bowl of assorted fruit and gravely poured the contents into the bag.

"Say, where do you git that stuff?" demanded Porky. "Do you think I'm takin' a chance o' ten years in Joliet fer a dime's wort' o' oranges?"

Mr. Brewster was pained. "No fruit?" he asked simply.

Porky moaned. "No, no fruit," he snapped. Mr. Brewster regarded his companion doubtfully for a moment, and then said: "Well, you needn't be so beastly frigid about it."

Having accomplished this swift rejoinder, Mr. Brewster stood stiffly apart and permitted Porky to do his own packing. Finding himself at liberty, he carelessly strolled back to the decanter, which recalled to him Judson's wise prescription that a bit of Scotch would inevitably relieve distress. He permitted himself a libation behind Porky's back, and was gratified to discover a blissful feeling taking possession of him. He decided to forgive Porky everything, even his last frigid retort. His generosity prompted song. So he threw back his head and lifted his voice:

"O, the mountaineers, they have no
fears——"

There was a crash, and a handful of silver fell from Porky's nerveless hands. Mr. Brewster left off singing and stared in surprise.

"Porky, old person," he said, tilting his head graciously, "music hath charms to soothe the savage breast."

"Say, mister," said Porky, with a tear in his voice, "wot makes youse t'ink you're in a zoo? I ain't no savage beast. I'm just a workin' man tryin' to make a decent livin'. Can't youse, please, please, behave?"

"Forgive me, Porky; I am young and foolish."

"Well, bein' young won't never git you in trouble. Now, grab that bag; we ain't got no time to monkey around here any more."

"I carry the bag?" asked Mr. Brewster.

"Yes, you carry th' bag," replied Porky. "That is, if you can do it without droppin' it on a copper's foot. How far do youse t'ink I could pack a keester wit'out some fly-mug stoppin' me?"

"Your reasoning is faultless, Porky. Let me carry your bag, sir."

Porky was for departing by the window, but this time Mr. Brewster was obdurate and won his point. They made their exit by a side door.

"Here's where we say good-by," said Porky. "We can't be seen together. You ease off down the street an' I'll beat it up th' other way. Meet you down at Suds'."

Mr. Brewster insisted upon gravely shaking Porky's hand, which accomplished, he set off jauntily down Lake Shore drive. It was all so pleasant.

Suddenly his smile vanished and a harrowing thought pervaded his being. He had completely neglected the architectural staircases and Miss Patricia Carrington, who was even at this moment enlightening the masses in the Harrison street mission. He put energy into his steps and made haste to reach the mission at least in time to escort Miss Carrington home. And these thoughts completely excluded the bag of Brewster silver, which he continued to carry in total unconsciousness.

III.

English Eddie awoke somewhere around 7 o'clock in one of those quiet, upstairs Wabash avenue hotels. He moved his head cautiously and then groaned. It seemed as if some one had hit him with the Masonic temple. Three days of debauch found his nerves gone, his palate burning, and his hands unsteady. Again he slowly endeavored to lift his head. It throbbed as if some engine of the Inquisition were pounding at his soul. His brow was hot and his eyes glazed. His conscience was seared with the sin of his disgrace. Painfully he sat up and beheld the fingers of scorn of the whole world pointed at him. Sick and feverish, he donned his clothes. Another time he would have been immaculate and precise; now he was nervous and impatient.

He reached the street, where he beheld with sinking heart that day with its sunshine and cheer had fled and that he emerged upon cloaked and forbidding night. Depression bestrode him like a wicked gnome, pulling his hair and irritating him with vicious jabs. The jaunty behavior that had gained for him a reputation for blitheness and drollery was gone. Instead there arose before him all the blackness of his sins, and he shuddered. His jangled nerves cried out for a soothing cup of liquor, an "eye-opener," handmaiden of the bourbons. His feet, uncommanded, turned toward a saloon. Eddie discovered their design in time.

"No," he said. "No more booze. I'll suffer this thing out. First thing I know, I'll be talking to myself."

He passed the saloon and proceeded south in Wabash avenue. Overhead, the elevated trains seemed leagued with the devil for purpose of brain-racking pandemonium. Then his punished nerves began to tantalize him. He imagined the negligent stragglers of the street, chauffeurs, loungers, and the riff-raff, were eying him. He hastened on. The dingy, ill-lighted, and almost deserted shops in Harrison street held forth an inviting calm, and he turned west. Block after block he walked, pain and grief and self-accusation harrowing him. He paused before a whitewashed window. A song of many voices, unmusical but eager, rose in his ear:

"While we are waiting for you,
Come, sinner, come——"

Eddie looked about him. He had stopped before a little mission for the down-and-outs. He started anxiously. He was a player of "hunches." What if this were a "hunch"? He couldn't go among his own kind. They would deride him. Here, in this little haven among the reefs and shoals that beset the human vessel, he would be taken at his face value. He would not be chaffed. There would be peace and quiet. He entered.

He noted with relief that none turned to embarrass him with grins and oglings. He sank into a rear seat. He longed to lean forward and rest his bursting head in his hands. The opportunity came with the wish. A sincere man prayed, and the flock bowed with him. So did Eddie, thankful in the bottom of his heart for the spirit that moved the supplication. When it was ended Eddie did not change his prayerful attitude; it was restful. Then, through the despair which mantled his every thought, he heard the soothing, coaxing voice of a girl.

"'Come unto me, ye who are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest,'" she quoted. She was on her knees at his side. Her voice was cool and sweet to the senses. When she left him to give comfort to another wayfarer it was as the passing of sweet music. The regeneration of English Eddie was complete.

"This is the game for me," he said. "I'll suffer it through, and every night you'll find me here, instead of breaking into——"

A dread thought crossed his mind, and he glanced hurriedly up at the little mission clock. It was five minutes after 8. At 8 o'clock he had an appointment to meet Suds, the bartender, to rob a residence in Lake Shore drive. Great fear rose within him. He felt that some power had intervened to prevent him from engaging in that felony, but what of Suds?

"He'll find some one else to help him," groaned Eddie, "and they'll turn the trick. If I'm going to be on the level, this is the time to begin. I've got to stop that burglary."

Without further ado he flew out the mission door and east to Clark street. He gave no heed right or left, but kept uppermost in his mind the one thought of his reformation. If he was to be on the level, he must not delay. He caught a trolley car by a perilous second and rode north to Jackson boulevard. Here he alighted in the hope of finding Suds and preventing the nefarious excursion. He was ten minutes late. His heart sank. Again he ran and leaped aboard a street car. As he stood on the front platform his mind dwelt on the one word, "hurry," "hurry," and his nerves bent to high tension in a purposeless endeavor to lend impulse to the jolting, rattling car. Ahead there was a clang of bells, the rattle of chains, and the swinging of red lights. The bridge was opening. Eddie's heart all but collapsed.

It seemed ages before the bridge again resumed its habitual position. Minutes were speeding. But now with a spurt the car started northward again. At Goethe street he again alighted and sped eastward. He hoped the projected burglary had been declared off, or at least postponed. He hoped everything that lent itself to hope, but he hurried on. He reached the drive, and now assumed a more leisurely gait. He gained the wall about the Brewster mansion and felt his way slowly along it until he reached the professionally strategic spot selected by Porky Flynn. He scrambled over with the ease of a cat. There was a light in the house. Smoothly Eddie made his way to a window and peered in. Almost a moan escaped him as he saw an immaculate cracksman, even more sartorially distinguished than he had ever been in his proudest moment, accompanied by a rangy, unshaven individual of low type, making off with a bag of loot.

"Too late," he sighed. "But wait; if I can't get that bag away from that dude crook and put the stuff back where it belongs my name isn't English Eddie."

With which firm and steadfast resolution he beat a quick retreat and prepared a new strategy. A few moments later, from an adjacent vantage point, Eddie beheld a slouching form slink away into the darkness empty handed, and another and upright person walk boldly down the drive lightly carrying a bag. It was he that English Eddie followed.

"If I couldn't stop the burglary I can put the stuff back," he said to himself. "That'll square me a little bit."

Mr. Brewster's sudden recollection that he had an errand to perform in escorting Miss Carrington home from the mission sent him scurrying for the first motor bus. As he again mounted the bus top he grinned in appreciation of the fine sense of humor he sort of thing. It meant nothing at all to him that another passenger had mounted the bus immediately behind him and now sat taking a mental invoice of him and how best to relieve him of his ill-gotten gains.

Eddie was disappointed. He had hoped his prey would c ontinue to walk some distance and then depart into the darker streets, in which he could without difficulty, creep upon him, snatch the bag, and be gone on his errand of restitution. He marveled at the boldness and insouciance of a burglar who worked in top hat and evening clothes, bearing off his swag in the face of the multitude.

At Jackson boulevard and State street Mr. Brewster for the second time emerged from the bus and strode off carelessly south. Eddie was displeased. Here were lighted streets and many pedestrians. He must take a tremendous chance to commit legal robbery under such untoward circumstances. He feared every moment that Mr. Brewster would step into a building and be lost to him forever. He noted with some hope that the latter kept steadily on below Van Buren street and then turned abruptly west in Harrison street.

Thus, now, the redeemed pursuer and the blissfully unconscious and unregenerate pursued made their way, each after the manner of his present employment, Mr. Brewster tripping lightly, scornful of the times and the manners, and English Eddie guided doubly by the unerring instinct of his late calling and the moral purpose of his rejuvenation.

Mr. Brewster's steps diminished in cadence. He had again discovered that he bore in his hand a bag. In the haste to reach the dingy mission in time to meet Miss Carrington he had temporarily forgotten his rôle of fleeing burglar and now, drawing near the object of his errand, he walked more slowly to give himself opportunity for reflection.

"I could give it to a boy," he mused, "and have him skip home with it. Silly business, wagging about the slums with a bag of silver. Patricia'll think I'm nuts. Well, heigh, ho! she does anyhow. But I wish I were rid of it."

Mr. Brewster did not sense the approach of a dark form which silently drew up alongside. Indeed, his first and only impression was of a vast, glorious, and fleeting astronomical display. He spun about once and possessed in thus gayly going about the city in most utter irresponsibility, riding upon busses and committing burglary and all that, then sat down abruptly, leaning against a lamp post, stunned by the impact of English Eddie's gospel fist.

When English Eddie smote, it was with the strength and courage of his new found religion and he tarried not to contemplate the effect of the castigation. He snatched the bag from Mr. Brewster's nerveless fingers and shot up an alley with all the agility of his kind.

"I wish I could of stayed and showed that guy where he was wrong," he muttered, as he sped along. "But I got to get this junk back where it belongs. Maybe I can find him afterwards and explain things to him."

IV.

Judson, stiff, orthodox, British Judson, returned home from his evening out. He returned early, but there was a reason, and this lay in the vigor and abundance of the refreshments afforded in the below-stairs parlor of the mansion in which he visited. The élite of the butlers and maids had been merry, and Mr. Judson, ogled by one, flattered by another, and teased by another, had looked upon the bowl with a good deal more complacency than was his wont. Now he presently found himself too well dined and against the protests of his fellow revellers set off for home.

His arrival in the Brewster mansion was simultaneous with the departure of Messrs. Brewster and Flynn, but he saw them not. Indeed, he was so engrossed with the tedious business of locomotion that he did but indifferently well in reaching the kitchen door. He sighed refreshingly that he had arrived in advance of his young master, having no judgment of the time o' night. With vast contentment he made his way to the butler's pantry, drew a chair to the window, opened it wide, and sat down for a slight nap and to take the cooling air.

How long he slept thus he could not know. Nor could he know that English Eddie at that moment was hastening to right the wrong in which he had conspired but had not participated. But in the fleeing minutes a dark form slunk in the shrubbery about the Brewster mansion, trying first one window and then another.

"If I only had a jimmy for a half a minute," thought Eddie. "I could open a window far enough to drop this bag inside. Hello——"

He turned the rear of the house and found himself looking into a dark room through a window whose lower sash was flung wide. He approached stealthily and peered in. A man sat dozing peacefully in a chair. Cautiously Eddie held the bag inside, dropped it, and scampered away. Once more in the street, he breathed freely and with the consciousness of a deed well done.

Judson awoke with a start. For a minute he sat looking about him in the darkness, attempting to collect his muddled senses. Soon a great sense of shame and self-rebuke overcame him. He recalled his recent intemperance with increasing embarrassment. He wondered what indiscretions he might have committed; if he had slept the night through, permitting his young master to come home without attention? His conscience struck him. He started up. He stumbled over an object on the floor. He investigated and found a heavy bag there. Then he switched on the light and beheld to his amazement his own bag, carrying his own initials, sitting by an open window! Meticulously he went about opening the bag. As its mouth flew apart he stood dumb with horror as he discovered the Brewster silver. He passed a nervous hand over his brow and found it was cold and damp.

He tried to think over the immediately preceding events; then he extended his survey to embrace the activities of the day. He gasped.

"I suppose," he recalled having heard Mr. Brewster say, "I shall have to pawn the family plate."

He wondered if the young man could so far have taken leave of his senses as to pledge the silver to buy food for the mission persons. It seemed untenable. Wagging his head in utter melancholy, Judson took up the bag, retired to the dining room, and for the next half hour set himself to the precise task of depositing each piece of silver in its original position. This accomplished he locked the chests and again went to sit in his pantry chair with many a renewed wagging.

V.

Mr. Brewster's slight aphasia, induced by English Eddie's judicial fist, passed. He blinked and found himself occupying a most undignified position on the curbstone and leaning against a post. Ranged in front of him was a semicircle of amazed faces. The ragtag and bobtail of the mission district viewed him as an exhibition of unusual [illegible] and charm. He heard a most horrified feminine voice.

"Tracy, what are you doing?" It was Patricia Carrington.

Mr. Brewster slowly collected his wits and looked about. He took up his topper which lay beside him and tapped it down upon his head with neat attention to detail.

"Earthquake?" he asked gently.

Mr. Brewster arose and after some endeavor to review his affairs gave it up as a bad job. He took Miss Carrington's arm and they walked quickly away.

"If you are trying to set an example of the rich before the unfortunate," she said caustically, "you are succeeding admirably well."

"Beastly, wasn't it?" said Mr. Brewster. "I've lost my bag—been robbed."

"Bag? What bag?"

"Bag of silver," said Mr. Brewster.

"Tracy, will you please explain yourself?" Miss Carrington felt her patience was giving out.

"Walking along the silly street—somebody biffs me on the bean," said Mr. Brewster, still trying to straighten matters out in his own mind. "Bag's gone."

"A bag of silver," sniffed Patricia. "What silver?"

"The family plate. Silly, isn't it?"

"Tracy, you've been—your breath smells of——"

"Judson told me."

"Told you what?"

"A nip of Scotch to settle the fishballs," said Mr. Brewster helplessly.

Miss Carrington threw up her hands in a gesture of utter despair. "Judson, Scotch, fishballs, bag of silver," she cried. "And all this has to do with coming to see me home?"

"Sounds awfully foolish, doesn't it?" asked Mr. Brewster, feebly. "And there were olives and mince pie, too, Patricia."

"Tracy, you're spiffed."

"Quite the contrary, Pat," said Mr. Brewster; "Porky wouldn't let me."

"Porky?"

"Yes. He helped me prowl the joint."

"He helped you—Tracy, I am going to see you safely home."

"O, don't be silly, Patricia."

"I—silly? demanded Miss Carrington. She compressed her lips firmly. "That's too good. Come along; a rabbit may bite you if you remain out alone. You may tell me your incoherent story."

By his quick fist English Eddie had accomplished two results; he had relieved Mr. Brewster of his bag and also of the effects of Porky's liquor; and now Mr. Brewster was at loss to explain how it had seemed so richly amusing earlier in the evening to engage upon a burglarious expedition and now, as he endeavored to relate the incident, so utterly devoid of zest and interest. He strove to lend color to his narrative. Miss Carrington was coldly unappreciative. They alighted from a taxicab at the Brewster mansion.

"If you think I am going to believe this idiotic story," she said, "you are mistaken. You had better take a long night's rest."

They entered the house. Mr. Brewster rang for Judson. That personage came forth, solemn with his own woes, but determined not to admit anything until clearly accused.

"Judson," said Miss Carrington, "will you please look around and see if the silver has been disturbed?"

"No need of looking," said Mr. Brewster.

Judson felt his lips go dry and his knees unsteady. "I—I—I think it is—I will see," he said. Weakly he led the way to the dining room, fully confident that he was about to be denounced as a thief. He nervously drew open the drawers in the chests. Mr. Brewster's eyes popped out like a fifer's. The Brewster silver was intact. Not a piece was missing, and it lay, every bit, just as it always lay.

Miss Carrington drew herself up haughtily. "Judson," she said, "I would suggest that Mr. Brewster be recommended to an exceedingly hot bath and a good night's rest."

She turned, nodded to Mr. Brewster, and closed the door firmly behind her. Mr. Brewster heard her heels click to the waiting motor. Then he walked slowly up the stairs. He heard the crash of water in his tub. Judson was moving softly about, preparing his bath and his bedchamber. A half hour later Mr. Brewster lay under his violet coverlet. Judson put out his hand to switch out the lights. Mr. Brewster stirred.

"O, Judson," he said softly.

"Yes, sir."

"For breakfast——"

"Yes, sir."

"Tea and toast."

HALF A SCORE

by Jack Lait

A Rich Plebeian with an Itch for Publicity Takes Up a Costly Fad.

BERNARD (always referred to as Barney) Boober was a business man. He was not tired. In truth, he was very vivacious. His business was huge; it was colossal. He didn't know how many millions of dollars belonged to him.

Now, when a man gets up to that period he falls—he falls for a fad, an expensive fad. What's the use of being revoltingly rich if one cannot flirt with, bid on, and capture a fad? Fads are usually poor men's sincerest passions and rich men's costliest diversions.

Barney fell for opera. Knowing nothing about it, he thought he'd burn his fingers a little on it, as had many other millionaires before him. And so he started by buying the most extravagant box in the opera house, which gave him standing; proceeded by sending a check with many zeros to the right of a substantial digit; followed that up by giving a week end party to the impresario, Carmio Biggutti, and as many of the warblers as would accept. The symptoms were familiar and unequivocal. He was told how much it would cost him to be a director the next season, and he doubled that and wanted to be two of 'em, so he was elected to office besides—assistant vice president.

Among those who had come to the first of his soirées was Signorita Lydia Comgetmi, a new coloratura canary from Milan, who was singing second rôles, but who had first part looks. She had eyes—ooh, such eyes! And she was olive-skinned and curvilinear and spirited and temperamental—and ambitious.

Barney saw stars when he saw Lydia. He saw Lydia as a star. She fascinated him; he was a director and an officer in the Home for Dependent Divas, and that should be all there could be to it. He buzzed about her with what he thought was the approach of a winged butterfly upon the petal of a rose, but which to her looked like the advance of a rhinoceros on something good to eat. He lauded her voice, her looks, her technique, her personality, classing her as "first rate goods. He asked her whether she wouldn't like to be a prima donna—he didn't pronounce it that way, but she had a good ear for that kind of talk in any key. She smiled, first at him, then on him, and so he pompously said he'd see Biggutti about it. And he did.

The opera maestro heard him out, then, with garlic scented imprecations upon the granite heads of all rich vulgarians, tore into a tirade in which he flung his white hands on high and called on the muses to bear with him: make Comgetmi a star? Run his artistic enterprises at the dictates of cattle like Boober. Sacramento! He had stood much, but this was beyond. If this interfering ignoramus didn't leave his studio at once——!

Boober was up against it. He was dining Lydia that evening. He told her what Biggutti had said. Lydia sneered, peeved and miffed, and said she ought to have known better than to take seriously any professional promises from a chewing gum manufacturer. Boober said never mind—he'd buy her a limousine. She pushed away the food, arose, demanded to know how dared he—to insult her, an artiste, a highstrung woman. He could give the limousine to—to his cook; she wanted none of it, she wanted nothing from him—he was a pig.

Lydia called for her wraps, and Boober's butler called a cab. The rich plebeian saw her drive off. He realized that he was what he was, that he was impossible in the eyes of these romantic, commercially worthless people whose salaries he was paying and whose livelihood he was maintaining. He was almost tempted to abandon his directorship and stop his contributions. But the itch wouldn't be salved—he longed to see his name listed on the programs, he craved to see his name printed in the annual reports of the progress and deficits of the opera company, he who dreaded to see his name in print through the city editor's department.

As he turned to go from his dining room he heard a noise. One of the French windows leading from the conservatory was being opened. A moment later in burst a wild looking young man, clad in convict's clothes. Boober reached for a button. The intruder intercepted him, hesitated a moment, then fell to his knees before him.

"O, signor," he prayed. "Sava me. The police he come behinda me, and if I'm katchad he putta me back in prison. If he do I die. I committa no crime. I am artist. I not can standa prison. I escapa. Sava me, signor."

Boober gave him a hard look. He to help a convict escape? He was a respectable business man, and paid large taxes to keep men in stripes behind bars. He——

"It killa me if they taka me back," cried the jailbird. "I am composer. I write the opera—grand opera—grandest opera what sometimes yet in the world. I am writing the opera in Milan. I am writing her because I am love a woman. The opera she is half fineesh. My friend, Iambo, he write the libretto. Iambo, he a poet. I, signor, I a cellist. Every nighta I play in orchestra in Milan and my enamorata she seeng and I eat her with my eyes, and in my soul comes eenspeeration for the sublima opera. I speaka to Iambo, who coma every night in the gallery, and he says he's got eenspeeration for libretto. So we go every night to my garret and we writa.

"Then one night he hear my new aria, and he go in raptures. He say: 'Divine! I write for heem words of passion. And when my Lydia she seeng him——!' I cry to him, 'Your who?' He say, 'Lydia.' He say Lydia she eenspire him to write libretto; every night he see and hear from the gallery, and he eenspired. I cry to heem that every night I see Lydia from the pit, and she eenspire me to write exquisite music. He jump at me. I jump at heem. I keela him with my stiletto. I keela the man what dare to say he eenspire from my Lydia, the superb Comgetmi. I keela heem and I fly. I fly to Amerigo. I steal passaport from emigrant. Offeecer in Castle Garden he question my passaport. I fight heem. I getta ninety days.

"I am ten day in prison. I runna away. O, signor, I——"

"Get through that door," commanded Boober, pulling open a way to an adjoining room and hustling the refugee into its darkness as footsteps became audible in the conservatory. An officer entered. He inquired whether Boober had seen a man in prison clothes, who had been seen heading toward his grounds. Boober said he hadn't. Boober was Boober, so the officer apologized for the disturbance and left. Boober called his visitor back.

"I'll make you a proposition," he said. "I'll keep you here—in this house—feed you, give you clothes and money, enough money to go anywhere you wish, protect you meanwhile, guarantee you against going back to the hoosegow. But you have to write me that opera. Do you remember it?"

Pietro Bowshovo's big, dark eyes flamed up. He would write the opera—he would do anything.

Boober led him to a room in his basement.

"Here's where you'll live," he ordered. "Tomorrow I'll send you down a grand piano and a lot of music paper. Can you compose on a piano? Great! Here you stay—under guard, for I'm going to put an armed guard over you, and you grind out that opera. When you get it done I'll ship you wherever you want to go and slip you enough to live on the rest of your life. Go to it."

For days Boober hovered around the room in the basement where he had Bowshovo. The prisoner worked lustily. In two weeks he had produced on paper about enough for half an opera. Boober called in a musical expert and had it privately played. The professor said it was a classic.

Boober sent for Biggutti.

"Look here," he said. "I am writing an opera. O, don't looked amazed. I haven't said much about it, being the kind of a man who doesn't brag about myself. But I've always been a bear at composing. This is the damnedest opera that ever was written."

"A new opera?" exclaimed Biggutti. "New operas are rare. If you have one that is worthy, you will be immortal—so will I."

"So will Comgetmi."

"Why she? She is a mediocre soprano."

"Let it go at that. But you've got to agree on this deal: if you put on the new piece—O, I'll finance it—Comgetmi is starred. She inspired this, you know. Yes, I'm fond of her. I might never have written an opera if it hadn't been for her. You wouldn't put her over for Boober, the director with the bankroll, but you would for Boober, the composer. Come, now."

"I want to hear it," said Biggutti.

"Tonight. Bring Lydia with you. I'll have it played."

They came. It was played, the half an opera. Biggutti danced like a delighted child, ran over and kissed Lydia, ran over and kissed Boober, who resisted, but who was lost.

"Marvelous! Miraculous! I accept. Comgetmi shall star. Boober, you knock Verdi off his pedestal."

Boober tried to be modest, but it just wouldn't work. When Lydia looked into his eyes he saw there something that made him sizzle.

"I never dreamt it of you—forgive me," she sighed.

He was a generous man to opera singers, was Boober, so he forgave.

Next day the newspapers shrieked the tidings—Boober, the mundane chewing gum maker, had given the world the nucleus of a wonderful opera, and was now engaged in completing it.

And Boober was engaged, good and plenty. Pietro, who had so readily and so rapidly turned out the half an opera, was "stuck." For days he teased the piano in his basement prison, and at the end of each day threw up his hands to his master and said nothing had been accomplished—where crashing crescendos, cooing cadenzas, moaning misereres had issued, now he could produce nothing but discordant piffle.

"Eet's no use, boss," groaned Pietro. "I wrote the firsta half in Milan, when every night from the pit I see my Lydia. She my eenspeeration. Now I no get eenspeeration, I no can maka the compose."

So Boober brought a photograph of Lydia down to Pietro. The musician looked surprised, then screamed, then raved, then clawed.

"Where you getta the pickch?" he yelled. "Where you getta the photographio of my Lydia? Answer, or I keela you like I keela that bum poet what he dare find eenspeeration in my Lydia."

"Don't be a jackass," said Boober. "Comgetmi is a well enough known opera singer to have her photos on sale in every part of the world. Now, go to work."

That night Pietro wrote a few bars, better than he had been doing since his creative collapse, but not of the standard of his first half. He quit after that.

"Senda me back to prison, signor," he wept. "Dissa pickch he maka me only meeserable, not eenspire. O, if I could only see her!"

Biggutti was growing aggressively restive by now. Comgetmi was devoted, but nervously inquiring when—when?

Boober, at his wits' extremities, consulted with several celebrities famed as composers. He brought them into consultation and secretly offered them large sums to contribute melodies. The tunes poured in, tunes that ran from syncopated jazz to those whining ones marketed as "high class sentimental ballads." But none measured up—even Boober could tell that none of his bought and paid for drivel could vie with the harmonies and mellifluences of Pietro.

Boober now closeted himself in his home, refusing the telephone or the door bell, belaboring and cajoling and beseeching Pietro, the drooping prisoner of his basement dungeon.

The pressure grew more intense. The product faded paler and weaker.

Boober took the last painful way out. He curtly announced to Pietro that he would be taken to the opera that night, in disguise. The ethereal one perked up a trifle at the prospect of again hearing his beloved strains—the opera was to be "Carmen."

Pietro was smuggled into a closed automobile, and, with his face muffled in a fur collar that hid all below his eyebrows, was pussyfooted into Boober's box. Lydia was playing the cigaret girl who tears hair with the star. Her first entrance was unobserved for a moment by Pietro, but he suddenly leaned forward, began to shake violently, started to leap to his feet. Strong hands seized him—Boober had anticipated his emotions—and two guards quietly gripped him from behind, one holding him down and the other gaggin him with his hand. Boober turned and hissed into the temperamental Italian's ear that if he would sit quietly he might remain, but if he caused any commotion he would be carried out, out of the inspiring presence of the adorable Lydia.

Pietro nodded that he would be good. And he was, until the end of the performance.

That night Boober stood over his victim, beneficiary, guest. Pietro threw open the piano and made a show of bravado, biffing a few keys and making as though to write some notes on paper. Then he tossed the pencil away with sudden and final surrender, and turned weakly to Boober.

"Signor," he said, "eet no use I go on further. I no never composa the music; I no never composa the music what you got upastairs. I lie to you alla the time, everything excep' that I was cellist. I never was in love by Lydia. I was stalla you."

"What!" shrieked Boober. "You——"

"I didn't was in prison for what I tolda you. I never killa the poet. I never knew such a poet. I getta ninety days for drunka and disorderly. Keela me or do whata you like—now you know the true."

"But the opera—the half an opera——?"

"Bunka. He was written by Longhairo, the greata Italiano composer, and we rehearse him in the orchestra in Milan when I gétta the bounce, so I remember the halfa what we rehearsa. I never hear the resta, or maybe I remembera that, too. The new opera she play soon in Milan, maybe she play already, and pretty quick Biggutti getta the music from Milan, and then he hitta you with a chair when he recoganize, see?"

"Get out of here, you ingrate, you bunko steerer, you spiffy-eyed safeblower!" cried Boober. "You've gotten me into a nice mess, you foreign scalawag."

And he opened the door and kicked Pietro out—out of the basement, out of his life.

Next day Biggutti got his first intimation of the turn of events when he read in a newspaper the following item:

"Bernard Boober, one of the foremost local patrons of grand opera, an officer and director in the institution, announces that he is going to Patagonia to recuperate from the strain of composing. His new opera is unfinished and may never be finished. Mr. Boober intimates that he recently received an advance score of the new opera shortly to be produced in Italy, the work of Longhairo, the illustrious composer, and that, to his great surprise, he noticed that Longhairo's work was very similar to his own, and he therefore abandoned further effort on his own for the present, gracefully yielding to the Italian master, who is a recognized professional, whereas Mr. Boober is only an enthusiastic amateur, a successful business man to whom music is but a diversion and relief from the humdrum of commercial affairs."

The SPLENDID CHANCE

SYNOPSIS.

Katherine wanted to paint well more than anything in the world, so she said good-by to Dick Conrad without a pang, offering a sisterly cheek for his salutation just before the boat slid away from the dock. She resented hotly the quizzical air of a young Englishman who happened on their leave-taking. One day a caricature she had made of him fluttered across the deck and he caught it. In the days that followed they were together a great deal, and just before she left the boat he asked if he might come to see her in Paris. She began her precious year of study, plunging with ardor into her work in the studio. When her friends, the Whartons, were about to leave Paris she mentioned Edgerton's proposed visit. They hastened to discourage the budding friendship, hinting that she is an ineligible party for a man of his rank and distinction. MacNare, the surly young sculptor, whose studio is downstairs of Katherine's, had to appeal to her one night when his little girl was ill. The Surly Man proved to be not such a bear after all, and—Jeffrey comes to see her. She tells him that the field is clear—that there is no other man who has any claim on her, and after his departure plunges happily into her work. MacNare warns her that if she is to succeed she must cut everything but work. Katherine plunges into her work doubtfully. MacNare becomes a more constant caller and confesses an unfortunate marriage that has darkened his life. She comforts him. Katherine plans a trip into the country. MacNare follows her. At Les Buissons MacNare, who has allowed himself to long for Katherine, learns of her love for Capt. Edgerton, and broken-hearted he returns to his studio. Katherine and the captain stay the week end out and pledge each other their love, Katherine on her return to Paris is almost struck dumb with fright—war has been declared!

SEVENTH INSTALLMENT.

FRANCE AT WAR.

LA GUERE—the word beat meaninglessly in her ears as she hurried away, turning instinctively toward the Avenue de l'Opéra. War—France was in war, then? The trouble which had seemed to be brewing in such far off codrons, that cry of Slavic peril—what had that to do with France?

Those rumors, then, those flying undertones of anxiety, the whisperings of the men about the cafés, the gatherings of the women in the streets, these had not been meaningless ebullitions of anxiety, of far fetched apprehension born of the terrible memories of 1870. There people had known——

Her thoughts flew to Jeffrey. Could this actually involve England? But it could easily delay his leave and play havoc with their cherished plans. She told herself that was all, but the queer breathless excitement in her was tightening its tension. She raced along the streets faster and faster.

Katherine plucked at the sleeve of the nearest man; when he remained oblivious she shook it vehemently.

"What is it? What is it?"

He looked down on her with glassy eyes. It was the mobilization order, she was told, and pressing closer into the throng, she caught the glaring print of the huge posters.

ARMEE de TERRE et ARMEE de MER
ODRE
DE MOBILIZATION GENERALE

Very quietly and very soberly she made her way out of that crowd through the streets. Over and over again she tried to tell herself just what it was that was happening, but her mind refused to accept the monstrous thing. A million men in arms. A million men uprooted. And many times a million hearts wrung with parting and suspense.

The streets were scene after scene of parting. Paris was oblivious of everything but the beating of her own heart. Everywhere the girl saw the sudden, unforgettable glimpses of agony, an old mother clinging to her sons, a man taking the ribbon from the neck of his little child to stuff within his shirt, a husband comforting a wife, a girl stifling her sobs as her sweetheart left her. A million men going. Every one between the ages of 21 and 48.

At the American Express office and at Cook's the Americans were gathering excitably, but to Katherine's heart, weighted with sympathy for the great grief of France, the anxieties of her compatriots as to boats and trains and money was not of great moment. What did it matter if they were delayed, or lost a passage or had no money for a time?

Her American acquaintances of that day's luncheon party were in the throng, their buoyant assurance of noontime gone, their ire keener against the reassurances of the subeditor which had percolated so cheeringly from pension to pension.

An experience! Yes, it was that, even for him. But for the French?

Outside Robert MacNare's door she found him talking with a group of Frenchmen, artists she recognized as his occasional companions at a café, two already in uniform. In the dim hall, in her cage, Mme. Bonnet sat unstirringly, her head sunk forward on her shoulders.

Katherine felt a fresh pang, remembering the younger son Henri was still doing his military service. "This will mean Henri," she said, with diffident sympathy.

Mme. Bonnet raised her head slowly, staring straight at nothing.

"Les deux," she said expressionlessly.

Of course it would mean them both! How sluggishly her mind was working. Jean was not 30. He would be going away today, leaving Marie alone upon the farm with her little ones.

It is only by individual instances that the mind comprehends a general disaster. The greatness of it is too great. But when one knows that it is Henri and Jean—and Marie who is left—when it means the husband in the crémerie across the way whose little wife of a year is expecting her baby, when it means the only son of the old woman boarding overhead with them, and the tailor down the street whose five children are motherless, why, then, pang by pang, the meaning of pain comes home.

A million men.

That evening Katherine strolled with MacNare up and down the Boul' Miche', an altered, sober Boul' Miche', where the students, with linked arms, sang "The Marseillaise," with young voices that shook in the beginning of their passionate realization of love of country. And everywhere were the scenes of parting, and everywhere through the streets the incessant rolling of taxicabs and carts and automobiles and carriages and fiacres, laden with men and women and luggage of every description, hurrying to and from every station in the city, men arriving, provincials leaving, foreigners fleeing, a turmoil of transit.

Sometimes there were cheers and gay greetings for some crowd of dusty reservists marching by with haversacks over their shoulders and a long loaf of bread sticking from some jacket pocket; sometimes the irrepressible humor of the people would be tickled to smile at some self-conscious boy parading with a pretty girl in his fresh regimentals, red trousered, blue coated, his knapsack and rifle and tin pans clattering as he walked, but the tears were too near the surface for laughter, and the uniform was too dear to their hearts for youth's naïve airs to alter the symbol.

MacNare was very silent. To one question of hers he replied, rather contemptuously, that he was not going to run away. He did not think that the Germans would reach Paris, although they must be magnificently ready or they would never have incurred the war.

"But do you think—that the Germans have always intended——?" she began diffidently, feeling her deep ignorance of the real Europe.

He looked down on her somberly. "For years the guns have been invented, the powder made, the boy babies encouraged into the world ere this day should come! Now that men and machines are at a maximum strength they judge the time has come to toss a match into the powder. Any match will do. In 1913 it might have been one thing; in 1914 the archduke's murder will do as well as another. Raise the cry of Slavic peril—and march on to France. Straight to the heart of her, get Paris by the throat, make her buy her breath with a strip of sea coast opposite England. Then peace, perhaps, for more machines and more men and more powder—but not forty years of it, for eyes will be opened—and then England. And then—"

Katherine could only stammer: "But—but I thought the Germans were different—were—"

"The Germans? When have the Germans ruled Germany? When have the Schuberts, and the Schumanns, and the Goethes, and the Schillers, and the Wagners, and the Heines been a political influence? The Germans, individually, are delightful—collectively their very peculiar virtues make them the finest instrument in the world for Prussian militarism to wield—docile, fervent, sentimental, brave. Pour them out in masses, inflame them with a prepared brand of patriotism, instill a calculated hatred, fling them at the enemy—there you have your ideal fighting machine. God help those boys," he added under his breath, his black browed gaze on the marching ranks.

"Then—then what in the world is to happen?"

He said very slowly, "A struggle to the death."

Her eyes clung to him in sudden appeal. "Will England be in it?"

"Who knows?" Then as if he knew that she found his answer evasive he said grimly, "I hope so."

"You are cruel," she said chokingly.

"I am not thinking of individuals. The hour has struck for nations."

The grim foreboding of his words settled like a weight on her heart.

With the crowd they followed to the Gare de l'Est to see the men depart. Here the men were to take trains for Toul, Verdun, or for whatever barracks where they were to report the next day. And their destination after that? Who knows?

A high iron fence stretched in front of the station, with three gates—three gates guarded by soldiers. Three scenes of last farewell . . . and scenes more terrible in their poignancy, their ultimate realization, than those the day had held.

It made Katherine think of the guillotine. For just one last minute those women had their men, their sons, their sweethearts, their husbands, clutched in their arms, warm and safe against their breasts, and then—through the iron gate—into the black oblivion of the future. And so many . . . so many . . .

What would happen? What would happen?

She heard the sounds of the women's sobs under all the strains of "The Marseillaise"; she could feel the breaking of their hearts under the fervor of sacrifice that had leaped to meet the spiritual demand of their defense.

"C'est pour la France," "C'est pour la patrie"—these were the words she heard oftenest on the lips of boys to their mothers, of husbands to their wives, and the women, too, touched with this sacrificial flame, echoed it with lips that paled with their deeper understanding of what lay back of those words. Some of those women remembered 1870. Some had worn black since that year.

"C'est pour la France," Katherine heard one acquiesce in a dry whisper. She had parted with her husband and three sons in that moment. Alone she turned and made her way out of the throng. And as she went she kept tapping upon her breast and speaking in that husky voice which was like the last dry whisper of a consumptive, "C'est fini—c'est tout fini."

The individual was finished. It was only nations now that counted.

. . . .

By Sunday noon two facts had made their connection for Katherine. There were no potatoes at her little restaurant. People were provisioning for a siege.

By Monday the auto busses were gone from the streets. People were swarming about the provision dealers, carrying or wheeling away sacks of flour and rice and macaroni, and Katherine went out and painfully lugged home a heavy supply—to the Surly Man's amusement.

Into the quiet streets the newsboys had rushed with their damp sheets, "Speciale de la Guerre!" now announcing Germany's ultimatum to Belgium. Indignation ran high. The excitement was tense, but not hysterical. Later, another edition told of the bombardment of Lunéville.

In the larger department stores while some girls were busy putting away stocks the others were making Red Cross supplies. The sight of these bandages, deftly rolled by those busy fingers, was the first glimpse to Katherine of what thing it was that Paris was preparing for. Having sent her youth and strength to meet the enemy she sat waiting to receive the shattered returns.

The next morning she found the door of MacNare's studio wide open and narrow cots being carried in. She saw that the great room was stripped and cleared, with the statues and marble crowded into one corner, and cot after cot was standing in a white, orderly row. Peggy was scurrying up and down the stairs with bundles in her arms.

"A sick man's a-coming," she whispered excitedly to Katherine, her eyes big with the fascination of novelty.

"We shall sleep on the top floor—I've given this for a little nursing depot," said MacNare, and it was not from him, but from the nursing sister, a quiet, gray haired woman of La Croix Rouge, that Katherine learned that his private income was being given for its service.

She felt her heart contract with the painful expectancy of those white beds.

No letter had come from Jeffrey, and she doubted if her telegrams to him had reached him. She felt isolated and alone, and a feeling of fear was creeping higher and higher in her, like a stealthily rising tide. Everywhere the talk was of England. What would she do? Day had dawned with the Germans still in Belgium, having made no reply to Great Britain's midnight warning, demanding respect for Belgium's neutrality, and all day there was that horrible sense of waiting, waiting.

She read Sir Edward Grey's speech before the English parliament and she thrilled—but her thrill died in a shudder. There was a horrible, muffled pounding in her heart as if it were blindly fleeing from some unnamable apprehension.

She tried to tell herself that it was a hundred years since England had sent men to a European soil, and that only the gravest urgency would bring them now—but still the Germans were in Belgium.

Late in the afternoon a letter from Jeffrey, much delayed, reached her already opened, thus giving mute evidence of the activities of the censor. It was very brief and grave; he promised to let her know as soon as anything was certain for him.

That night she went to the Boul' Miche' with MacNare and Peggy, and strolled up and down among the little groups that were casting occasional glances up at the sky for stealthily gliding Taubes. Once a guarding aeroplane winged its way overhead, the hum of its engines sounding faintly, like a swarm of far away bees.

From out a brown study she said aloud, "If I left at once——"

MacNare was painfully clairvoyant to the girl's thoughts. His voice was full of rugged understanding. "I don't believe you could see him," he said. "He is with his regiment and any moment——"

She echoed, "Any moment!"

As he looked at her, her slender figure drooping slightly as she walked beside him, her youthful color paling under premonitions of anxiety, he felt a resurgence of old anger against the idiocy of this scheme of things. What infinite waste! With no great confidence in the good intentions of life toward himself, he had unconsciously conceived of no destiny as capable of treachery to this girl's bright trust. And now, to see the beginning of fear in her eyes——

"But she is too young to know what it means," he told himself. "And she will have his heroism to adore. He is one of life's lucky ones."

He stopped and bought her one of the little English flags offered for sale with those of France and Russia and Belgium and Serbia.

Everywhere upon the streets was the talk of England's sending troops to Belgium. Some rumors declared that they were already on the way. There were stories now of fighting near Liege, and the women and old men and boys told each other, with kindling faces and shining eyes, of Belgium's heroic reply to Germany.

Four mornings later Madame Bonnet was at her door with a blue envelope, and ripping it open, Katherine stared blankly at the French words,

"Ayez de courage. Avec tout mon cœur.
"JEFFREY."

All telegrams must now be sent in French but the unwonted phrases seemed utterly unrelated to her lover. It took a moment for her mind to realize the truth. "Have courage," she repeated under her breath, and then, "With all my heart."

"From the captain?" madame was eagerly demanding. "The English, mademoiselle, they are in France?"

Katherine turned a soft, unseeing look to her. She spoke without emotion. "Yes, they are in France. The message came from Havre."

somewhere toward the fighting.

It was incredible to her. If she could have seen him again, could have talked with him, have held him in her arms as those women had held their men; if they could have met and parted, the parting would have been believable, but this blank—this silence—this slip of blue paper with strange, hurried words—

She could have held it a dream but for that grinding pain in her side, that sick, drunken lurching of her heart.

"God be thanked!" said madame. "The English—they keep their word. O, God be thanked they are come."

The sight of the girl's blanched face recalled her.

"C'est la guerre," she repeated to her, laying a hand upon her shoulder in a comrade's gesture. "You are one with us, mademoiselle." And as she turned away, her flare of enthusiasm sunken to the stolidity of every day, "This is war."

Unthinkable now to leave Paris, to leave the city for whose safety her lover was fighting. She was nearer to him here than anywhere; here he would know where to address her.

. . . .

In those tense days of waiting, when the red rush of the invader rolled nearer and nearer to the gates of Paris, Katherine King knew that incredible, stifling sensation of one struggling to break the gripping bonds of nightmare. So utterly had war been a thing apart from the happy security of her American environment that it was fantastic and unreal to be here in this city that was girding itself for mortal combat, with the rage and ruin of war blazing closer and closer, and somewhere on that red line of defense the man whose life was dearer to her than her own.

Ah, those communiques! How infrequent they were—and how laconic! And always the same. Always the Germans were nearer, nearer, a great, oncoming, machine mass, endless, irresistible.

"It is the guns," said the little bride of a year, in crémerie, clinging pitifully to her hands. "They have the guns, mademoiselle, the monsters that deal destruction. For this they have been making ready. And our men are there."

"You must not cry so, you must not," Katherine whispered, her own throat choked, her heart aching.

The little woman flung back her head with an effort of defiance. "I will not," she answered. "I will live for the child. And if it is a son—a son whose father does not return—then when he is a man I will put a gun in his hands to slay the murderers of his father!"

So the war seed was sown, thought Katherine; so the heritage of hate and enmity brought its festering fulfillment.

"You will not talk so when you have sons to lose," said the old woman who boarded with her. "My mother saw five go in 1870 and I was all that was left to her. And then my man—he was my bridegroom—it was there he got the wound that took him off in the end. But for that he would be here now. You will not talk so when you have lived a little more."

She turned feebly to Katherine. "Is there news, mademoiselle? I am not strong to go out in the streets today—"

And Katherine went for them and searched the scanty lists for those names that meant everything to those women. There were very few lists and those brief and incomplete.

All day now Katherine made Red Cross supplies, or aided where she could in the nursing going on in MacNare's small asylum. Only the lightest cases were brought there, but as she went from bed to bed, looking down on those rows of wan, drawn faces.

The story of Begium, brought by flying rumor, gasped from the lips of the first poor refugees, had reached the city and set the anxious hearts there afire with a passion of agonized sympathy. Eyes were raised to the mute skies; locked hands were lifted in despairing prayer. Women fled to the churches to plead at the Madonna's feet for pity upon those helpless ones and safety for their own.

It seemed to Katherine that the sun could never shine for her again. That in this day of vaunted Christianity invaders who took Christ's name in prayer could pour upon a peaceful countryside, burning, shooting, stabbing, terrorizing, meeting the defense of innocent burghers with the brutalities of Huns, with wanton reprisals.

All the idealisms, the sugary coating of civilization's assurances, went down like a pack of cards.

Often the Surly Man, wrung by the girl's white cheeks and questioning eyes, made her come for long walks with him through the strange and silent streets, emptied of sound and stir, motorless, trafficless, where old men and youths drilled in little squads and herds of sheep and cattle grazed in the Bois and Champs Elysées. Out from the city had streamed long miles of refugees, women and children, most of them, mothers bearing their babies to safety, little lads hurried by frightened grandmothers, rich or poor, all unprepared and needy, they had poured out the gates and down the dusty roads beyond the sound of guns.

Hushed and tensely waiting, her heart with her youth upon her battle line, Paris was beautiful in those August days as never before. The uncut grass grew long in her gardens; the red geraniums and white roses rioted gorgeously in the borders. And at night the moonlight bathed the lampless streets in spectral brilliancy, glistening white upon the dome of Les Invalides, upon the Arc de Triomphe, upon the blunt towers of Notre Dame and delicate traceries of fretted column and Gothic arch. If Paris was to die it would be in the full panoply of her beauty, in the splendor of her ancient and irrecoverable loveliness.

Nearer and nearer the battle line. On it came, closer, closer, with dull and sullen thunder stealing from the horizon, an arrow pointed battering ram hammering and hammering, a sweeping tide, surging and submerging, and then—in a sugar beet field near Claye, ten miles from the outer fortifications of Paris, the farthest reaching fringe of that tide was met and turned. Slowly it receded, borne back by desperate force.

But all this time no word of Jeffrey. No scrap of writing came back from that unknown place in the front of battle.

She heard the stories of the poor, wounded boys in the hospitals and she thought of him there in the days and nights, harried and desperate, fighting those overwhelming odds, pushed back, still stubbornly defending, outnumbered but bitterly resisting, each instant a chance in the hell of battle, and her heart would stop its beating before those fears to which she dared not give a name.

Sometimes she wrote her heart out to her mother, only to tear the letter into a hundred pieces. Why sadden those dear ones at home with her own agony of suspense? It would shock and wound them. And any day now might bring news. Any moment she might hear. And no news was not the worst.

So she went about her work, rolling bandages with a little group of French workers, taking lessons in nursing from one of many classes held, spending her money in comforts for the poor boys in the hospitals and the wretched refugees that brought the misery of Belgium home again and again to tender hearts, writing brave letters to America, begging more money for help for the homeless ones—and then one day the miracle happened, and there was a new heaven and a new earth about her.

Its precursor was a tremor of alarm, for Madame Bonnet came into her room, bringing Jeanne and little Thomas with her, and the sight of the children brought a fear of disaster, so many terrible stories had come of slaughter and fire and bloody reprisals.

Quickly Mme. Bonnet explained. "No, no, the Germans have not been there. They were all about, but, God be thanked, the village was saved. A wood just beyond—they could not get through that, where our soldiers had their guns. But Marie has sent them. The train came in this morning. She feels it safer in case anything should happen to her—she is not well, you understand, and her time is come. See, the little innocents—they are big eyed with the war. The soldiers took the pigs, yes, our soldiers—they have stomachs, the poor lads. Does Marie think they win battles upon emptiness?"

"And news—have you news of your boys," Katherine asked quickly.

"Of Jean, yes. He is one of those stationed in the wood beyond the village. One arm was out, nothing to make a fuss about, you understand. A scratch, when the Boches tried to come through the wood at night." Madame was excited; her old liveliness reanimated her face, which had been settling into lines of masklike rigidity. "But it is not of my boys that mademoiselle is thinking—no?"

A look of sly pleasure came in the old woman's eyes and she pushed little Jeanne toward the girl. "Show the mademoiselle what is about thy neck."

Obediently the child began to tug at a discolored ribbon; presently a little leather case came outside her collar band.

"Voilà, mademoiselle," she said shyly, putting it in Katherine's hand.

But Mme. Bonnet could contain herself no longer.

"From Monsieur le Capitaine!" she exploded. "From the captain of mademoiselle! In truth! In truth! He came riding through the wood—he came to the farm, and learning that the children were about to start he declared that Jeanne was safer than the post!"

Madame chuckled delightedly, her keys jingling with their old fervor. "Read, mademoiselle," she exhorted, as if Katherine were not already lost in those few hurried lines. "Read, and tell me what he says! All is well, yes?"

Thumb grimed and creased, the little square of paper lay in Katherine's hand.

"My Dearest Katherine: Fancy writing you at the old farm in such times! We have had the devil's own scratch of it, but now we're getting a bit of our own back. It's nasty business—to see your comrades going—but it's for the right, and we're in it to the finish. You mustn't worry about me, darling, even if you don't hear. With your love all mine there isn't a bullet that can stop me. Write me here; we'll stick a bit till we get forward. Your Jeffrey."

As an afterthought he scribbled that he was perfectly well though starving, and Marie had produced a fine hen for him.

Little Jeanne supplied a thousand eager details, when once her shyness was overcome. The captain had taken her up on his big horse; he had laughed and kissed her and told her, O, yes, she was not to forget, that this kiss was for Mlle. Katherine.

Madame clapped her hands eagerly. She forgot that she had cherished a grievance against this captain who had so utterly overthrown those unselfish hopes for MacNare and little Peggy.

"A man in a thousand—a man of courage and of heart! But mademoiselle," she added naïvely, "is there any word of Henri? Has the captain heard?"

And at Katherine's gesture of pitying negation, "Of course he would not hear, among so many," she returned with a semblance of briskness.

Mme. Bonnet wiped her eyes. "It is for France, of course, but it is very hard. Why should such things be, mademoiselle?"

She added, restlessly, "It is hard on a mother not to smooth her son's brow in his last moments, not to look into his face. But there is no help for it."

The children, growing more familiar in the room, recalled her.

"Jeanne! That is the mademoiselle's cushion—do not let thy little brother sprawl upon it like that! Thank the mademoiselle for the chocolate. That is better. I must take these little ones to a neighbor," she added, "for I have much to do if I am to leave tonight. Would mademoiselle prefer to confide a letter to me sooner than to the army post? If the Captain Edgerton is stationed there I shall get it to him with certainty."

"But where are you going?" Katherine demanded quickly.

"To Les Buissons, of course. My daughter needs me. Besides, it is my home and my heart has been heavy with fears for it. I shall go tonight." She nodded her head slowly, with the air of a Sibyl confirming a decision.

"But the permits—the passes—?"

"There is a train tonight," said madame, and Katherine saw that she was formulating a plan already matured. "I shall obtain a permit if I must have one—in truth I am but returning to my home. And if mademoiselle will make ready her letter—"

"My letter?" Impetuously Katherine turned upon her, her face shining, a great hope dancing in her eyes like a blown flame.

"It is not so easy." Madame eyed her doubtfully.

No, Katherine knew that it was not so easy. She knew that newspaper correspondents were mewed up in Paris, cooling their heels in much to be regretted but unavoidable delays; she knew that when their military passes were at last made out many started for the front in their expensively acquired motors only to meet with strange difficulties over papers, with polite detentions. No, it was not so easy. France was not baring her defenses and her stories for every writer to rush to print. The censorship was unimaginably strict.

And in a country constantly betrayed by spies, with treachery slipping through every avenue of life, the mere presence of a foreigner in an unwonted place was suspicious in itself. Many of the Americans who still remained in Paris, and even English visitors, were subjected to constant surveillance, and she herself had often been made aware that her simple days were not unnoticed.

She gave no thought to the difficulties, the possible dangers. She was on fire with the knowledge that the fortunes of war had brought Edgerton to Les Buissons, of all dear places, and that he was actually within reach. If it were humanly possible she was going to him.

And so she stormed Mme. Bonnet's sympathies and affections, and that good woman surrendered, not at discretion, but with an enthusiasm that entered wholeheartedly into the plan.

"But you may have to be my cousin," she declared, eying Katherine with an air of humorous misgiving.

"My cousin, whose grandfather went to America. I had such cousins—or my mother did. We have lost track of them. But if you are to come with me put on your hat—no, not that one; you are too chic, child, and come and say nothing. We shall see what we shall see."

. . . .

It was not humanly possible that every one in that station had passes! Katherine eyed the throng with hopeful reassurance, as she edged her way through it after Mme. Bonnet's bulky person. Her American passport and papers of identification were tucked safely away within her blouse, in case of some serious difficulty arising, but for the present she trusted wholly to madame's protection.

And it had proved as simple as addition. It had been merely a matter of getting to the station, of finding when a train left for Les Buissons, of buying the tickets, and waiting until the train actually left.

The pair of them were an unnoticed part of that jostling crowd of refugees, returning to the homes which they had left through the fear or the fact of German occupation, vigorous women clutching babies and bundles and bird cages, middle aged men in peasant smocks, some of them, some of them in their Sunday best, by way of carrying it, and girls and boys with arms piled with indiscriminate household goods, most of their faces wreathed in smiles at this return to their acres.

But there were some who were going back to villages through which the Germans had actually passed, once in the rush of their advance and once in the bitterness of their retreat, and these were troubled, and apprehensive of what might lie before them. Here the women talked of their homes and household supplies and the men and boys of the crops and the hayricks.

Into a train already crammed beyond all hope of comfort, Katherine followed Mme. Bonnet, and found wedged places among thirteen others in a compartment intended for eight.

It grew dusk and the October haze veiled the landscape; then night came on rapidly. Now the train was rumbling through a darkness punctuated by occasional brief flares of bonfires against which men's figures were silhouetted.

The train was stopping frequently, with racking jerks, and a guard would often put his head in the door, eying the occupants, but a glimpse of the nurses seemed to allay all suspicion. And at last, after delays interminable to Katherine's eager impatience, they came to Les Buissons, now the end of the railroad, for on the German's advance the tracks beyond had been torn up.

A Game of Tag

So Near and Yet So Far!

THEY had parted forever. That fact, the one certainty in a most uncertain world, filled "Billy" Bailey's consciousness. To him, at 23, both life and love had lost their glamour—that is, if she had really thrown him over. All that lay before him now was work, and work, some way, had never especially appealed to him, probably because he had never given it a fair chance. Even at this moment, when it offered its bony breast as a refuge from his misery, he regarded it without enthusiasm. There was no hurry about going to work. First, he would see Edith again, make one last appeal, grovel if she wished—and perhaps she would give him another chance.

His black depression lifted a little as he made the decision, and he crossed the room to his desk with a swing and vigor in his movements which they had wholly lacked during the last week. He even whistled softly as he selected a pen and began his note begging for an interview.

It was short, but every word was a tribute to the glory of Edith and an admission of the utter insignificance of everything in himself save his great love for her. He sealed the letter, called a messenger boy, and sent it to her at once. Then, with Hope once more at his elbow, he went down to the hotel dining room and ate a satisfactory luncheon.

His sense of well being, however, was rudely jarred by the phenomenally prompt return of the messenger, who, having been earnestly charged to hurry and to bring back the answer, had done his best according to his opportunities. He was back, but he was still conspicuously grasping Billy's note, which bore evidences of having passed through several hands.

"Nothin' doin'," he announced, defensively.

Stunned, young Bailey regarded the letter, then addressed him as man to man.

"She didn't send it back?" he stammered.

"Naw. She wasn't there. She's gone to Europe."

"Gone to Europe!"

For an instant Billy could not take it in. He had imagined everything but this.

"How do you know?" he asked, quickly. "Who told you so?"

"House all boarded up. Saw the caretaker. And, say, you said you'd gimme a dollar if I hustled."

Billy gave him the dollar, got rid of him, and thought hard.

He and Edith had hosts of friends in common. Undoubtedly they had been restrained from telling him of her departure by what they considered the most delicate tact. Quietly but fervently he confided his opinion of them and their tact to the unresponsive walls of his room. Then, hurrying to the telephone, he called up one of them, and, fortunately, found her at home. Breathlessly he poured forth his story, and as she listened the heart of Mrs. Mayhew softened.

"I'm so sorry, Billy," she said. "I supposed, of course, you knew. Edith and her mother sailed for Triest yesterday. No, I don't know how long they'll be gone. They didn't say. It was all arranged so hastily that I fancy they didn't make any definite plans beyond just going over. But they're going straight from Triest to Vienna, and I heard Edith say something about Hungary and Roumania and Greece."

Billy listened in sick dismay. This was worse than he had expected, for these were the days before the war, and Edith and her mother thought nothing of remaining in Europe for months at a time.

"Does any one else know any more about it than you do?" he bluntly asked Mrs. Mayhew.

She was sure no one else did.

"Why don't you foolish children kiss and make up?" she asked, kindly. "I thought Edith looked wretchedly unhappy the other night."

"O, did she? Billy grinned widely over these sad tidings. Edith jubilantly sailing toward the Adriatic was a picture he could not have contemplated. But Edith hastening to the world's end to deaden the dull ache of a broken heart was a reassuring vision. At the same time he did not intend to let her suffer a moment longer than was necessary.

He was a singularly energetic young person, and, once resolved to "get Edith back," as he expressed it to himself, he lost no time in pursuing that laudable purpose. He counted his ready money, cashed a check for more, and sailed for Europe the next morning. It seemed safe to assume that, taking the leisurely voyage of the southern route, they would be in Vienna in two weeks.

"I'll take the northern route and beat them to it," Billy told himself, elegantly.

But he had failed to take into consideration the fickle nature of women. On the second day of his voyage he received a wireless message from Mrs. Mayhew.

"Just learned they decided to leave ship at Gibraltar and travel in Spain. First hotel Reina Christina, Algeciras."

Mr. Bailey read the message and then hastened to a lonely spot on the upper deck, where, untrammeled by convention, he could express his feelings to the unsympathetic sea. The expedient of making the captain change the ship's course at once occurred to him, but was dismissed as he remembered that other desperate men had attempted this in vain. A wild desire to swim back he wrestled with and conquered. But these and similar mental struggles so preyed upon his mind that before he reached Cherbourg the entire ship's company were discussing the metamorphosis of a sunny natured young man into an embittered being whom none cared to approach more than once.

Taking into consideration the admitted uncertainties of travel by airships and automobiles, young Bailey decided that the safest and quickest method was to travel by rail. As long as his journeying was confined to France this theory was quite correct, but when he reached Spanish soil the difficulty of getting anywhere by any means seemed at times so insuperable that even the intrepid lover almost gave up hope. All trains, leaving for any point, seemed to start at some gray, mysterious hour toward dawn. Like sluggish serpents the engines crawled over the Spanish landscape, pausing whenever they reached a particularly bleak and desolate "junction" to let their passengers linger a few hours on the sun baked platform of some primitive station. By night a wonderful moon swam in the heavens and the love songs of nightingales came pregnantly from olive trees, for it was still spring, though it began to seem to the unhappy young man that he had been traveling for months. But at last he reached Gibraltar, and with leaping heart embarked in the little packet boat that plies between "the Rock" and Algeciras.

The dignified young English woman in the office of the Reina Christina was pained by the abruptness of his manner.

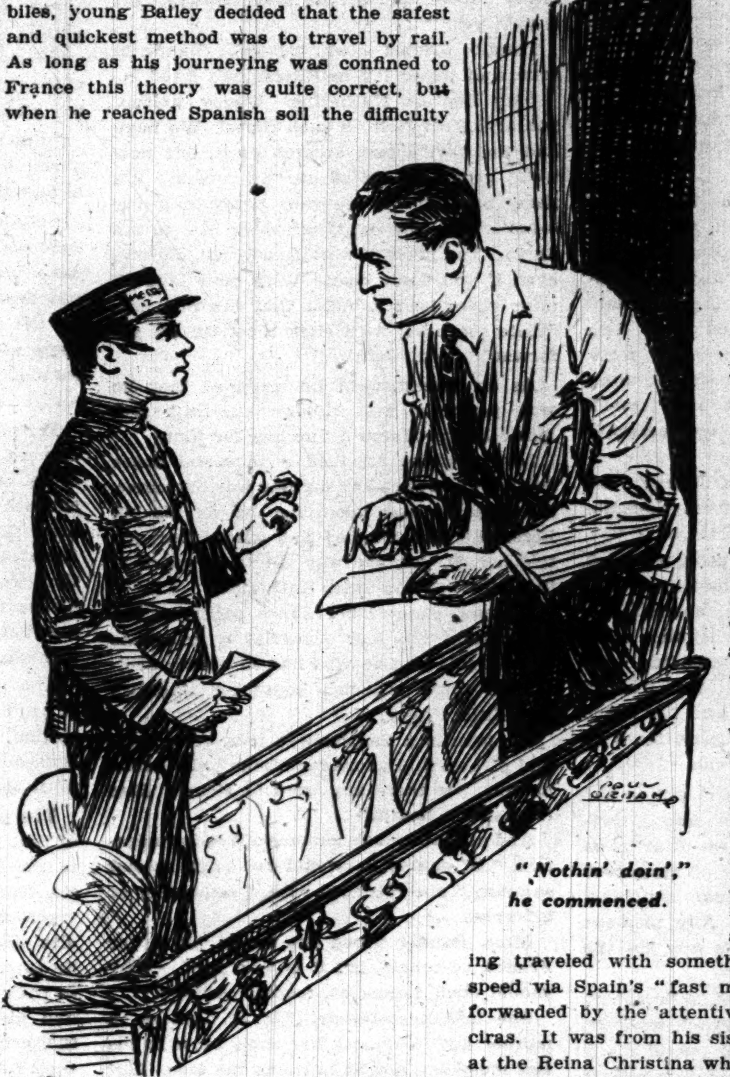
"Here," cried the young man, irritably, "their names wouldn't be registered last month. Look at this week's entries. They must have arrived two or three days ago."

Thus guided, the slow fingers of the clerk moved toward the more recent registrations. "It mightn't be Mrs. Henry White of Albany?" she suggested. She had been there four days ago. No?

"Might this be the lady?" she then asked, timidly. It might be, and indeed it was. With difficulty the young person recalled her. According to the records (and this required another search), Mrs. White and Miss White had remained only until morning. The clerk's manner was becoming weary. She had not the remotest idea where they had gone next; and now there was a distinct edge to her voice.

The porter who attended to the luggage of his friends might remember to what destination he had booked it. She summoned that excellent and intelligent employé, explained the gentleman's wishes, and the whole situation cleared almost miraculously. The porter's memory, stimulated into hectic activity by the gift of 5 pesos, recalled facts in almost embarrassing detail. He had attended to everything for the ladies, and had booked their luggage through to Seville. It was only nine hours to Seville; one ought to reach there inside of two days. They were probably just arriving. Following them, the gentleman could leave on the earliest boat in the morning—there was, alas! no other boat tonight. And, yes, sir; thank you again, sir, Billy should be awakened at dawn and presumably—so great was the porter's zeal—carried on board.

Mr. Bailey retired gloomily to his room. It opened on the famous garden, and there was a balcony outside of one window, on which until midnight he lounged and smoked. To be here with Edith would have been a joy he hardly dared to picture to himself. To be here without her was an irony which turned the incredible beauty of the night and the place into mockery. Yet it bore its reassuring message, and insensibly he felt calmed and soothed by it. Surely, somehow, in a world as wonderful as this things must come out right.



"Nothin' doin'," he commenced.

He reached Seville two days later and went at once to the principal hotel, at which he expected to find Mrs. White and Edith. They were not there; but awaiting him, having traveled with something approaching speed via Spain's "fast mail," was a letter forwarded by the attentive porter at Algeciras. It was from his sister, and had been at the Reina Christina when he arrived, but the exacting duties he had put upon the young lady at the desk, he gathered, had driven it from her mind. Without much eagerness Billy opened the envelope; then, a sentence claiming his attention, reread it with shining eyes.

"The day after you sailed a letter came to your hotel addressed in Edith's handwriting. The clerk remailed it to father, as you had left no other instructions. I'm not at all sure where you're going to be, so I'm sending this note on a chance. But I don't want to risk remailing Edith's letter until I hear from you. It may be important. So I'll hold it here."

A letter from Edith—that was news. Should he cable his sister to read it and cable the contents? No. It might be merely another "farewell forever," and Mollie, he remembered, had a confoundedly keen sense of humor. Besides, he'd see Edith herself in a day or two more, and she would tell him what was in the letter.

But two days passed and he found no trace of the Whites in Seville. It seemed obvious that they had changed their plans and not come there at all. In his inquiries he was greatly handicapped by his ignorance of Spanish and by the national Spanish ignorance of any other tongue. They might yet come, so he dared not leave. They might have gone straight on to Madrid, so he was afraid to remain. He waited, however, but on the edge of his nerves, whiling away his time by cabling inquiries to Mrs. Mayhew. At the end of his fifth day in Seville he received a cable from her. It read

"Hear they abandoned Spanish tour and sailed from Gibraltar to Naples on 17th."

Billy ground his teeth. The 17th! That was the day he had started from Algeciras for Seville. And even as he started Mrs. White and Edith had been just 20 minutes away from him, comfortably taking ship at Gibraltar. He went to Gibraltar in a desperate frame of mind. He would take the next boat that sailed from there. If its destination happened to be Naples, all right. He would go to Naples. If, on the other hand, it was sailing for New York, he would take it and go home. He was sick of this wild goose chase.

By a stroke of luck—the first he had experienced since he left America, he told himself, bitterly—a steamer stopped at Gibraltar the day he arrived there. Within two hours he was sailing toward Naples. He knew Edith's favorite haunts in Italy. She would stay in Naples a few days, he thought, at Bertolini's. Then she would surely go to Amalfi, stopping for a day or two, perhaps, at Sorrento. It seemed certain that in or near Naples he would catch up with her at last—and where could there be a more perfect spot to meet Edith again than on the Capuchin terrace at Amalfi?

At Bertolini's Billy was greeted with seeming rapture by the head clerk, who remembered his visit there the year before. But the face of this gentleman clouded with a deep sorrow when he had heard the young man's eager questions. Was Mrs. James Frederick White in the hotel now, or had she been here? Alas! No.

Slowly, heavily, Billy turned away. Then he went down to the steamship office and took passage on the first ship home.

"Ought to have had sense enough to do that from Gibraltar," he told himself. "There's Edith's letter; everything is in it, the whole thing settled one way or the other. And here I've been gadding about like a maniac."

He did not linger at all in New York, but hurried on to Boston, going straight from his steamer to the train, delighting his sister as well as impressing his father by this unusual expedition. He arrived in the early evening and found them both at home. Almost before their greetings were said he drew Mollie to one side and demanded this letter. His sister stared at him.

"Didn't you get it at your hotel?" she asked. "I sent it there—mailed it last night." Then, at the expression of his face, she put her arms around him. "O, Billy!" she cried. "You poor boy! And I thought I was so clever to have it waiting in New York, so you'd get it without an hour's delay. I never dreamed you'd rush home without going there."

Billy bowed his head. The whole world seemed topsy-turvy. Everything, he felt, and every one, had conspired against him.

"Well, never mind," he said, ungraciously. "Let me have what mail there is. I suppose there's some."

"O, yes, a heap."

Mollie went for it and brought the pile to his room, lingering lovingly with him while he opened the letters. He had glanced at all the addresses and postmarks before he opened any, but Mollie saw by his expression that he had not found what he wanted. He tore open the envelopes listlessly, dropping bills on the floor, half reading and tossing aside personal letters and invitations. Then he rose.

"You'll look after these, won't you?" he asked. "Just say 'no' to everything."

"But, Billy, where are you going?"

"New York," he announced, briefly, and started downstairs. Mollie followed him, and while he was picking up his hat and handbag hurriedly explained the situation to his father. That gentleman appeared in the hall just as his erratic son was opening the door leading to the street.

"Hold on, Billy," he called. "What nonsense is this? Can't you bear with us one night at least?"

"Sorry," said poor Billy, stopping reluctantly, and he added, vaguely, something that sounded like "'portant 'sness."

The elderly Mr. Bailey uttered a sound expressing contempt. "Business!" he repeated, ironically. "Billy, you're acting like a fool."

"I know it," admitted Billy, ignobly, and closed the door.

When he reached his hotel in New York he checked the buoyant greeting of the night clerk by demanding his mail.

by Elizabeth Jordan

"Everything gone on to Boston, Mr. Bailey," said that unfortunate, blithely. "We've forwarded all your mail since you went away."

His victim glared at him. "But the letter—the things that came yesterday from Boston," he stammered, "to catch me here. How about them?"

"Sorry," said the clerk. "But, you see, we didn't know! No instructions, and we don't stop to examine postmarks. So if anything came from Boston it went right back to Boston." He smiled happily upon Bailey and received one of the surprises of his life.

"Damn you!" said the young man intensely, and retired to his own rooms.

Rising in the morning and glaicing out of the windows, as he moodily dressed, he was almost surprised to find that the portion of the outer world around his hotel seemed much as he had left it, little more than a month ago. It had been May then. It was now June, but there was the same deceptive tang in the air, the same mocking sunshine, and, yes, somewhere near by, an organ man was making a street organ senilely betray its age.

After breakfast he strolled out on the avenue, with some vague notion of looking up some one who knew something. His mind, dazed by recurrent disappointments, was apparently failing him, too. And then, as if fate had wearied of him as its toy, it tossed a favor in his way. Before he had gone three blocks from his hotel he met Mr. Horace White, unimportant in himself, but great in the eyes of Billy Bailey as the uncle of Edith.

The fervor of the greeting Mr. White received was so great that the phlegmatic gentleman was unable to conceal his surprise. He was hurrying to his office, and had stopped reluctantly, obviously unable to see why he should waste precious business time in conversation with Billy Bailey. But after a sharp glance at the young man's face his expression changed.

"What's the matter with you, Billy?" he asked, kindly. "You're looking seedy."

Billy had entered upon the second day enveloped in a wretchedness so complete that it scorned concealment. It was from the depths of this that he answered.

"I guess you know what's the matter," he muttered.

The other looked at him again, thoughtfully. Then he yielded to a rare impulse of friendly sympathy.

"Edith, I suppose?" he asked.

"Of course."

Edith's uncle glanced at his watch, then snapped it shut with a movement of decision. He could give this young man another minute.

"Sorry," he said. "But since you feel that way, why don't you fix things up?"

Billy uttered a laugh he intended should sound sardonic, but which merely sounded pitiful.

"Takes two," he explained. Then, with a wild impulse of hope, "Would Edith——"

Horace White was a busy man, with no time for beating about the bush.

"Would she?" he echoed. "You bet she would. Been eating her heart out ever since the quarrel. Fix it up. Good-by."

He was off, but Billy pursued him.

"Here, wait a minute," he begged. "Where can I write her?"

The other paused. "Write, the devil!" he exclaimed. "Go and see her. That's the best way."

"But where, where?" cried poor Billy, grasping his elbow. "I've been chasing her and her mother all over Europe. Where is she now?"

Horace White turned and stared at him. Then he seemed to understand.

"Why, you young idiot!" he said, almost affectionately, "it's my daughter that's in Europe with Mrs. White. At the last minute Edith wouldn't go. She's been right around the corner for a month, ostensibly keeping house for me, but really waiting for you to call!"

The FURLOUGH

by Oney Fred Sweet

Just for An Instant There Was a Debate in the New Lieutenant's Mind About Where to Spend It.

THE Piermont hotel was the pride of an American city that was so new that forty years previously the paved street in front of the ten story edifice had been a cowpath. The Piermont lobby was a place of plush and gold and light. Its walls were frescoed with scenes depicting pioneer days in the section. The paintings were artistically dimmed. What you saw when you entered the lobby was bellboys scurrying across the tiled floor, well groomed traveling men scanning telegrams, a balcony where delicately gowned women leaned. And amid it all, on this particular evening, you would not have failed to notice Lieut. George Bond.

Lieut. Bond was sitting in one of the plush chairs near a marble pillar. His head of hair was such as goes only with extreme youth. It had not thinned and it was smoothed back as though he had just left a barber's chair. He had the sort of face that you see on magazine covers and in razor and fountain pen advertisements. His collar fitted tightly about his throat and the gold bar on his shoulder glistened. His swaggering boots shone.

A hotel flunky came to the lieutenant's side and gave him some sort of information. The youth arose majestically and passed out of the hotel's entrance.

The debate was over. The lieutenant had decided where he would spend his brief furlough. As he stepped into the street he briskly returned the salute of a couple of privates. The debate was over. He would turn down the invitation to spend the five days among his newly formed acquaintances. He sighed. He would spend his furlough as the other did—at home.

In the dim early hours of the following morning Lieut. Bond alighted from a train when it stopped at a small station far down the state. There was no one about.

The youth could have found his way home blindfolded. He was back in the town where he had been born and where he had spent his years until the time of the call to the training camps. By closing his eyes he became the barefoot boy again—"one of the Hank Bond kids." The curtains in the windows of the stores along the block or two of Main street were drawn and the doors were closed, but it took no stretch of imagination to see the proprietors in the doorways—to see them watching him pass as they had always watched him pass, with an air of domination. But the town that had always made him feel so unworthy and of no account was not yet awake.

He reached home. He knew what the place was going to look like, but the sudden appearance of it as he turned the corner caused him to pause and shake his head. An early robin hopped among the weeds. He struggled for a minute with the gate until it was back on its hinges. He took time to clear some of the debris from the dejected front porch.

The door was open and the screen was unlocked. It was a superfluous screen; the flies had long since discovered that it offered no barrier. He awakened Dick first. The lad rubbed his eyes and crawled out of bed.

"Sh-h-h," warned Lieut. George. "I want you to go down to the store for me and get some things for breakfast as soon as it opens. See some of those melons I saw in the window. You ought to wash your feet before you go to bed at night."

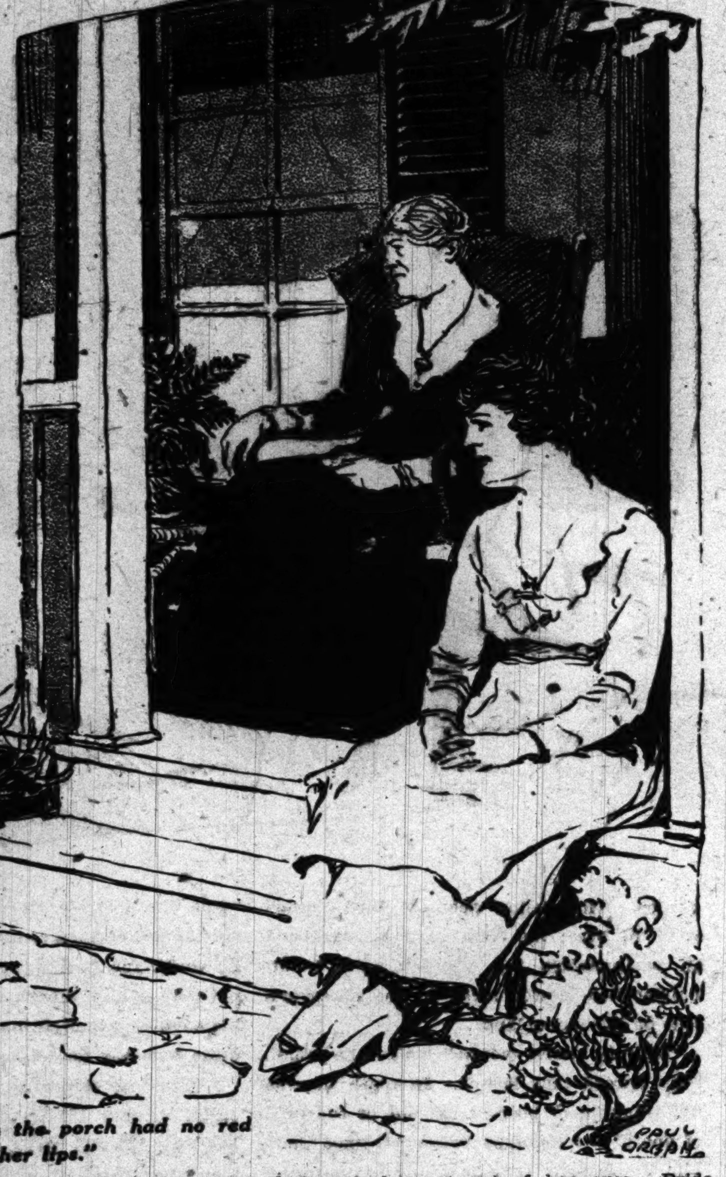
"Ma didn't know you was comin'. Nobody did."

"Sh-h-h! Is the old man home?"

"Gee, I don't know. Ask me somethin' easy. Say, those are classy boots"

"I thought the town had gone bone dry."

"That don't make no difference with pa."



"Kate, seated on the porch had no red on her lips."

The boy was out of the house, his eyes sparkling, his bare feet active. The lieutenant turned. She had heard his voice. She was in the doorway.

"You should have had your sleep out, ma," he smiled. "Hot weather been pretty hard on you?"

"But you wrote you wasn't coming," she exclaimed with a gasp of joy and surprise, "that you probably wouldn't have a chance to see us until you got back from France!"

"You take it easy now. I'm going to get breakfast. Where's Kate—still working down at the hotel?"

"She don't come home much any more. I can't do anything with her, it seems like."

"Didn't think I'd come back a lieutenant, did you, ma?"

"A what?"

"An officer."

"You're so filled out and tall and spruced up. But every one said you'd never have a chance and that it was foolish for you to try."

"You didn't think it was foolish for me to try, did you, ma?"

"I—they said—"

"I know what they said. They said a Bond couldn't expect to get anything like that. But I fooled 'em. See that bar on my shoulder. And Frank Haywood, who spent all those years away to the military school, he lost out, ma. He didn't get his commission. I did."

The woman stood back and stared. The forlorn look went out of her eyes. Pride glistened in them. She straightened back a wisp of hair from about her ears. Something that had been a part of her girlhood came back. She threw up the window shades and started to tidy the room.

"I'd ought to've washed the dishes last night," she apologized. "I didn't know you was comin'. I thought there'd be jes' me and Dickie, anyhow. There ain't a thing to eat."

"There will be as soon as Dickie gets back from the store. Too bad the weeds haven't been kept out of the garden."

The three were at breakfast when the door opened and Hank Bond stumbled in.

"H-m-m-m," he grunted, "so you're back."

The youth stood, towered.

"Who told you you was an officer?" smirked the man, trying to clear something—an imaginary something—from before his eyes.

"The authorities told me so when the camp closed," answered the youth steadily, "and they're not given, that bunch, to making mistakes."

"Look, pa," yelled Dick. "Look at his boots! He'll have a hundred men under him. Frank Haywood didn't pass."

"Didn't, huh?"

"Sit down, pa."

"I'll go out on the porch. I ain't hungry. Do they know it here in town—that you passed and young Haywood didn't?"

"They will know it. How's work been?"

"I'll be out on the porch."

The young lieutenant came out and found him there—found him struggling with the cobwebs before his eyes.

"I hadn't paid much attention," the father began. "Folks said it wouldn' tbe any use for you to try. Haywood didn't pass, huh? Wonder how old man Haywood likes that. You look a lot like my brother George used to."

An automobile was coming up the street. It started to chug past—stopped.

"Hey, George—congratulations!"

"Thanks."

"Read your name in last night's Indianapolis paper. Turned down a lot of them, didn't they?"

"It was pretty stiff."

"Drop into the office when you're downtown."

When the car had gone the father leaned over. "Who was that, George?"

"Asa Wathey, the lawyer."

"Reckon you'll stop in to see him."

"O, I may."

The father straightened.

It was in the middle of the afternoon that Lieut. George met his sister Kate on Main street. She was with a stranger—a stranger who glanced rather too wisely from beneath the lowered rim of his hat.

They had played together as brother and sister in the years gone. She had given promise then of becoming a pretty woman.

"Yuo could've knocked me dead with that hat cord," she began.

"Ma says you haven't been home lately, Kate."

"When a girl works all day at that old hotel she's got to have a little fun on her hours off. Say, a lieutenant, how'd you put it over?"

The stranger had edged away and was gone.

"I'm going down home now," he suggested. "Let's walk along."

She took her handkerchief to dab some of the artificial red from her lips.

Their mother, in her Sunday dress, met them at the door.

Evening came on.

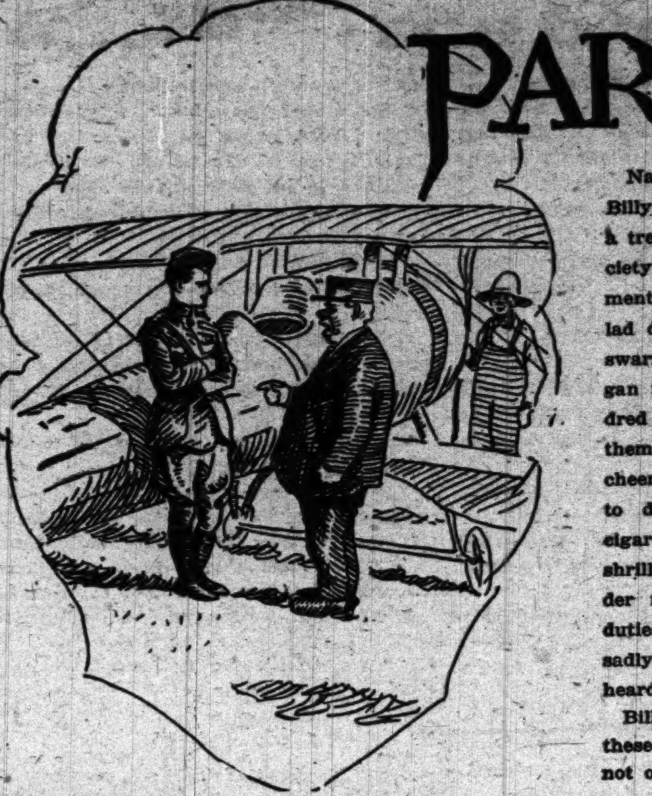
Hank Bond was pulling weeds in his garden. His fingers trembled as he worked among the weeds that had all summer run riot. Dick was at the well scrubbing his feet.

On the front porch Mrs. Bond rocked back and forth, back and forth. Kate, seated on the porch at her mother's feet, had no red on her lips—her lips were firmly pressed as she listened to a pair of birds breaking the quiet as they chirped in the maple's top.

An automobile passed, heavily loaded. The occupants stared at the youth in khaki who was mowing the tangled lawn. The words of the driver to those in the back seat came distinct:

"That's young Lieut. Bond. Yes, this is the Bond place."

PARTHON'S FOLLY



Billy Did Not Care a Hang About Anybody's Past While His Country Was Fighting for Her Life.

BILLY TUPPER took to flying as a duck to water. He was at the game shortly after the Wrights astonished the world at Pau, and when he fell into the channel and did not win the big newspaper prize he was quite sure about his destiny.

Now he is a great personage who flies the new planes from the neighborhood of Salisbury plain—and all the flappers gaze on him with tender awe. He is the hero of a hundred conquests and of one adventure which might very well have cost him his liberty. So let us now talk about famous men.

It was just about a month ago. Billy was out for a long flight upon a machine I must not name, and in the course of that flight he found himself over an island which is also part of England, and incidentally above a famous convict prison, where the prisoners are supposed to be so exclusive in their tastes that nobody under the rank of viscount has any chance of popularity among them. Billy knew nothing of this, for he was a thousand feet up in the air, and the unhappy convicts below were but so many flies upon a great green carpet. Moreover, his petrol pipe was troublesome, he was really beginning to wonder whether he would take lunch in this world or the next.

They are amazing creatures, these aviators, and the rest of us must continue to regard them with an admiration we cannot express in words. Some of us are frightened out of our wits if we are asked to stand upon a ladder fifty feet high and look down upon the giddy throng below. Your flyer, on the other hand, clings to a flimsy kite at an altitude of five thousand feet and never turns a hair when the old girl begins to wobble.

Billy Tupper was one of these. He used very bad language upon occasion, but he never stopped to think what would happen to him if the "old girl" gave it up, and he went hurtling like a stone to the ground some thousands of feet below. Upon this particular day he had a scare beyond ordinary, for it really did seem as though the engine had had enough of it—and, convinced that he really might lunch in paradise, he made a mighty quick descent and landed, as he put it, absolutely on the clock.

Now the scene of this descent was a wide field upon the edge of the slopes. In this field were working some half dozen highly distinguished gentlemen whom the king had stamped with a very broad arrow to show how fond he was of them. A very lusty fellow with a watchful eye and a rubicund jowl superintended the labors of these aristocrats, who appeared to be engaged in the childlike occupation of making hay while the sun shone.

Naturally the advent of Billy and his machine was a tremendous event in a society not given to excitements, and no sooner was the lad down than the convicts swarmed about him and began to ply him with a hundred questions. He answered them all with his accustomed cheerfulness and was about to distribute a packet of cigarets among them when a shrill whistle from the warder recalled them to their duties and they slunk off sadly as lads who have heard a school bell ringing.

Billy was very sorry for these good fellows and he did not offer his cigarets to the warder. That fellow seemed chiefly interested in beer; his first remark concerned an earthenware jug which Flight Lieut. Tupper had stowed away in the observer's seat of his monoplane.

"Thirsty work yours," said the man. Billy agreed that it was. In truth he was not thinking of beer at all, but of the eyes of one of the unhappy prisoners, fixed upon him so wistfully that he would never forget their gaze however long he might live. They were the eyes of a handsome man in the prime of life, but they spoke with rare eloquence. Such a one, said Billy, was trying to look out to the world he had left. He saw figures there, but chiefly the face of a woman he loved. Billy was quite sure of it. The man lived through a mad moment, and the eyes said "save me" as plain as anything ever was said in all this world.

"Thirsty work," the warder repeated. Billy agreed that it was. A new and wonderful idea had come into his madcap noddle and it excited him strangely.

"You don't travel dry," the fellow continued. Billy answered, "not much." He added also that the warder's employment might upon rare occasions impel him toward strong drink. The insinuation was not deemed with indignation.

"O," said the fellow, "there's not much doing here, that's sure."

"Don't give you much trouble?"

"Bless you. They're a lot of lambs, they are. Gentlemen all, same as you and me. They've got the milk of human kindness in 'em, every one, they have."

"Ah," says Billy—and he took the cork out of the jug, the warder looking on with hopeful eyes.

"Petrol pipes, like you and me, get a bit thirsty," said Billy; "be all right presently. I'll eat a sandwich, and then see."

He ate the sandwich and the warder, striving to conceal his disappointment, ate two. The convict with the sad eyes worked upon a row of the hay while they ate, and every time he came up to the place where Billy sat he looked at him in that haunting way.

"For God's sake, give me a chance," the poor fellow seemed to say. Billy wished that he could, for, like most of his kind, he did not care a hang about anybody's past while his country was fighting for her life. It was quite hopeless for all that.

"Well," he remarked to the warder presently, "guess I'll be moving. Give me a hand on the old girl's waist, will you. I'll start the engine up while you sit back there and help me out with the juice. Keep your fingers on that float there and we shan't be long. You've never started up a hairyplane before, I suppose? Well, it's never too late to learn anyway—get up now and see what you can do."

The warder obeyed clumsily. He was very much interested, and this was a welcome interlude. After all, the excitements of guarding convicts who behaved like sheep were not many.

"Her won't explode, will her?" he asked. Billy was emphatic in his assurance that she would not.

"I'll just get up beside you a minute and see if it's all right," said he. "Pitch these overalls out—they're in your way. That's right, old lad. Now hold on steady and see what happens. Up she goes—how do you like it, Bluebeard——"

"Blast you!" cried the warder, "put me on the ground at once."

"O," said Billy cheerfully, "that's all right"—and, rising high in the air, he showed the astonished official the whole coast of old England and the blue sea which sparkled upon the sands at their feet.

. . . .

In an hour they were back again.

Bluebeard was speechless by this time. He had run through the gamut of the police blasphemies and come down to words which no decent man should utter.

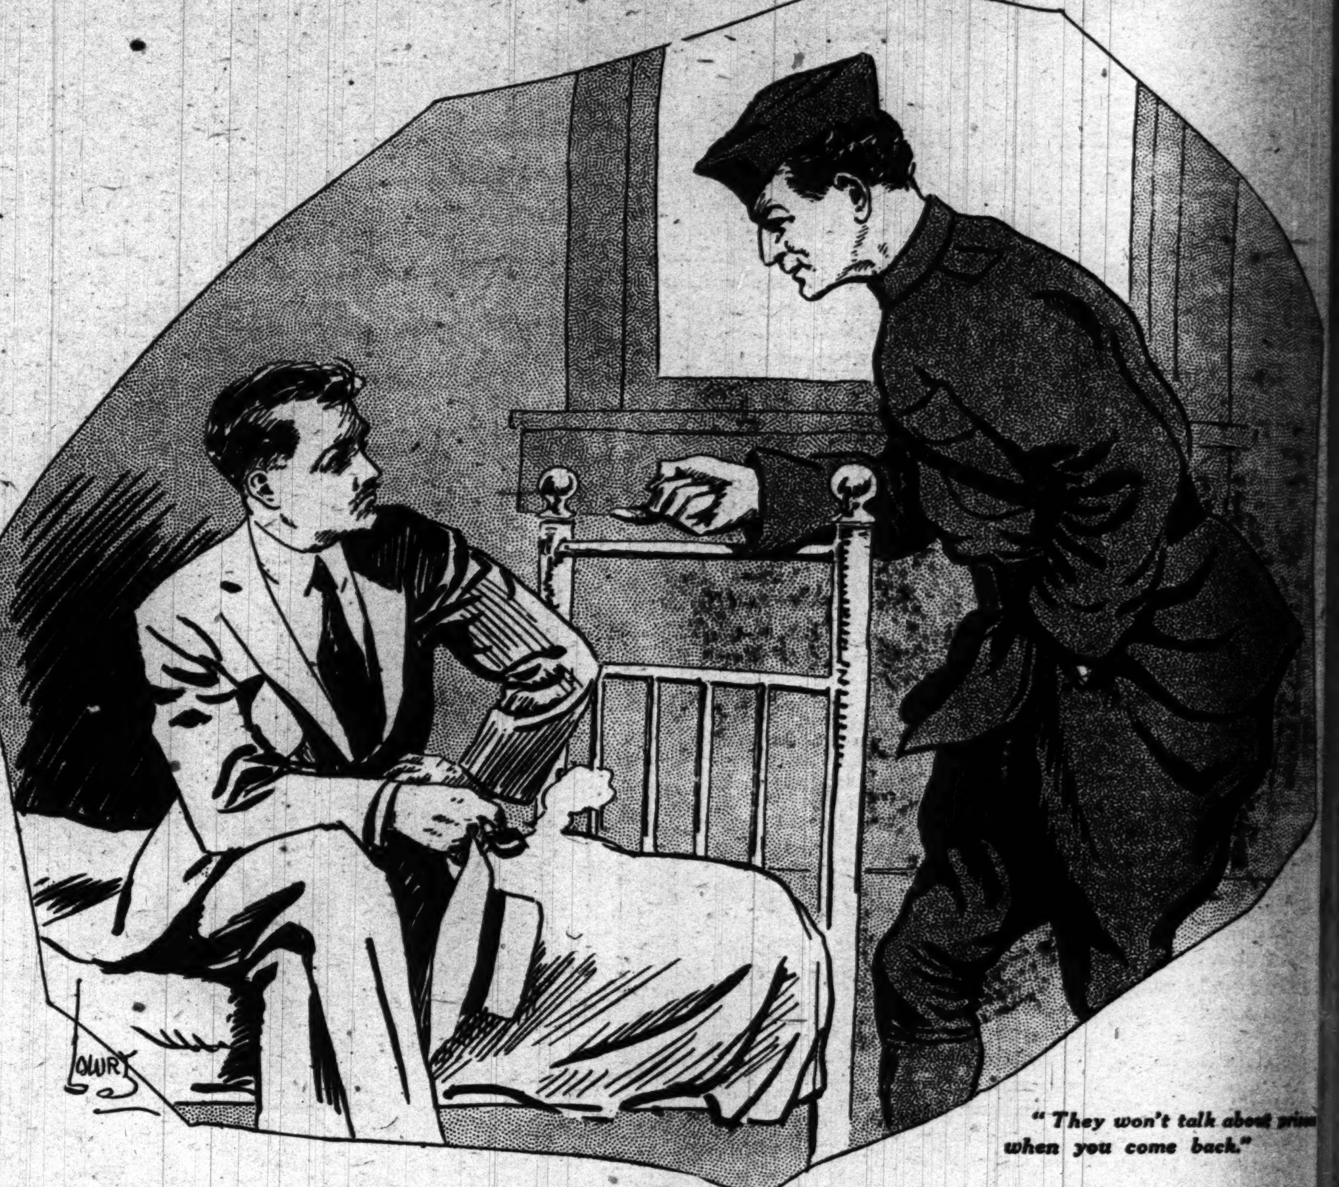
"You'll get five years for this," he said to Billy when he was on terra firma again. Billy didn't care a red cent.

"Right ho," cried he, "address Berlin, care of the blamed old kaiser. Don't you forget it—and if you're sending gifts, mine are Virginian——"

Bluebeard shook his fists at him and [illegible] away to count his flock. That was a sum in arithmetic for whose solution Billy did not wait. He was five hundred feet in the air before his red faced friend had got half way across the meadow, and when he heard the shrill sound of the whistle come floating up on the still air he laughed like a child. A moment after he was half serious.

"I wonder if the poor devil did it?" he asked himself. It really was an exciting thought. He had thrown his overalls overboard; he remembered that he hadn't seen them when they landed. Now there was this whistling, and then the sound of a gunshot. A cannon boomed from the prison near by and a bell was tolled dismally. Billy thrilled with the joy of it. "Poor devil," he exclaimed again—"and—and—I wonder if they'll catch him. My God, I hope they won't——"

He was speeding away in the direction of Salisbury plain by this time, and below him was the great tangle of the New forest. An hour's steady driving brought him to the camp, when he got his plane into the hangar and then cleaned himself. Not a word of his adventure passed to any man, and he had half forgotten it when he opened his daily paper next morning and read of the escape of a convict from the prison of [illegible] more. It was all true, then. The fellow had got clean away. Billy hardly knew



"They won't talk about prison when you come back."

by Max Pemberton

to be glad or frightened. What had he done? And would it prevent his killing Germans? He was all in a cold sweat at the thought.

The convict, so the paper said, was heir to a baronetcy, and had been sentenced to three years' penal servitude for forging a relative's signature. There had been some doubt as to whether the prisoner had or had not acted innocently, and many people thought he ought not to be in prison at all. He had been engaged to Lucy Fairfield, Lord Boromore's daughter, at the time of his trial, and this was, without question, the saddest case of the year. Now he had escaped, and the police of three counties were looking for him.

"And I wish they may get him," thought Billy, and added an "I don't think," which came from his very heart.

For all that, he went about that day, and for some days that followed, in the mood of a man who isn't overanxious to look at a policeman. Reinstructed in the law, he was not quite sure that something dreadful might not happen to him for what he had done. There were visions of men who came with chains, and judges in red robes, and a person who carried a black cap in his pocket. Billy had to fortify himself with a tall glass to lay the ghosts, and when he had tried this medicine in the evening of the fifth day what was his embarrassment to see the convict himself walk boldly into his hut and hold out his hand with the air of one who has no words to tell his story.

"Hallo," cried Billy, but his voice had a note of color quite foreign to it—"so it's you, old chap."

The convict sat down upon the edge of Billy's bed and wiped his forehead with a fine cambric handkerchief. He wore good clothes and boots and had been shaved. His manner was that of a man who fears nothing and is not ashamed of what he has done.

"I'm Sidney Parthon," he said. "Expect you guessed it. Well, I've seen her, and here I am."

His eyes shone at the thought—his mind was away to another and more wonderful scene. He had seen the woman he loved, and he had learned that she loved him still. Billy was not so dense that he did not understand that.

"Say," he remarked, "she's a good sort, that girl—what are you going to do about it—"

"I am going back to prison," Parthon rejoined—"on my way now. You did me a splendid turn, and I don't want to get you into any trouble. I shall give myself up, and that will be the end of it. Now that I have seen her it will be easier. Man, she was wonderful. I found her in the old rock gardens at twilight. She did not speak—she just held out her arms to me, and there it was. She never doubted my innocence—why should she? I can go back now to the place that will be a hell no longer. Don't you understand what you have done for me?"

Perhaps Billy hardly did. His own flirtations were of the quick and sudden order. A pretty girl was something to be kissed on sight—if she were willing—and he was no bigot in his love affairs. So this pretty romance left him unaffected. Much more important was it to keep Parthon out of jail for good.

"See here," he said, "what's the use of a fine chap like you in prison? Why not fight, old boy. Go and kill Huns. They won't talk about prison when you come back. Help us to do up the bally old kaiser and she'll be proud of you. It's the truth, she will. Don't you see it might mean much to you——"

Parthon shook his head sadly.

"They are on my heels now," he pleaded. "I missed them by inches at Salisbury. The whole plain will be alive with them in an hour's time. I mustn't be found with you on any account. You mustn't trouble your head about me——"

Billy laughed.

"I don't care the top of a petrol can about them," said he. "Look here, you stop jawing copybook and come back to common sense. To begin with, your clothes are no good. I've got a suit of yellow canvas in the bag there that is much more in your line. Get into 'em and ask no questions. Tonight I fly to France, and who knows who might go with me. Quick about it, old man, and get your hands greasy. There's work to be done up at the shed, and you're the expert from London that's helping me to do it. Don't you see, it's the chance of your life——"

Sidney Parthon obeyed him as a man in a dream. Dim perceptions had come to him. He could rewin his honor in France. Lucy would be justified in her faith. Better dead than such as he was. If only it could be.

"No, no," he said, "the police will be already in the camp. I shall get you into trouble. I mustn't do it——"

Billy answered by literally pushing him into the oilskins and then giving him an immense whisky and soda.

"We'll go and see the boss and have a talk to him," said he; "don't say another word, old man—I can stand a lot of trouble when the push comes. Just you keep your spunk up and look wise. Know anything about motors, by the way? Can you play the part if I put you in it?"

"I have driven cars," said Parthon, "since the year 1896. I was one of the first in this country to go in for it—you may count on that. I shan't let you down."

He was all eagerness now, his eyes aflame with a great hope and wild thought in his head. The past might be wiped out on the bloody fields of France. He would return with honor or never return at all. Billy thought so, too, but even he felt rather queer when they got down to the hangar and passed as they went a couple of men who looked suspiciously like policemen.

"Hold on and say nothing," he whispered to his new friend. "Look as though you belonged to the place——" and he hurried him to the shed where the great plane was housed. Then his thoughts worked like lightning. He knew that the moments were precious.

"In you go into the car," he cried—"tuck in your legs while I make your bed. That's it, my lad—we'll cheat 'em yet"—and he had the man covered with tarpaulin and all made snug before you could have counted ten.

Billy enjoyed quite a pleasant little talk with the policemen later on. They stood within a stone's throw of their prey, but their wits were not equal to so splendid an occasion. Most emphatically Billy assured them that what had happened at Pentmore was the purest accident for which he had not ceased to grieve night and day. The "old blighter of a warder" had hung on to the machine just when he ought to have let go—"and I dare not come down with the engine like that——"

They made elaborate notes and questioned him closely about the prisoner who had escaped. Did he know him? Was there any truth in the suggestion that it was a put up job? Billy looked as indignant as though they had accused him of trying to murder his own grandmother.

"Know him? Take me for a blinking archduke? Why, I never heard the fellow's name until I saw it in the newspaper. How should I know him? You're pulling my leg, that's what you're doing—of course, I don't know him. As well ask me if I'm in the habit of dining with the bishop of Bognor. Not much, old man—you take it straight."

The detective did not appear to relish the familiarity—but he made a note of it and promised to return in the morning.

"You will have to satisfy the police," he said, and Billy protested that the proceeding would be a joy to him.

"Right oh," he exclaimed. "I'll go to Buckingham palace if you like," and he looked as though he meant every word of of it. Parthon, however, listening beneath the tarpaulin, shivered with an undefinable dread of the men and the prison, such as he had never known before. How sweet this liberty and hope of honor had become! For him heaven lay in the trenches where men died.

The police went off ruefully at last, and Billy followed them to see his "boss." What transpired at that historic interview will never be known. We do not seek to pry into an encounter so momentous—but it was odd that Billy emerged from the hut with exceedingly bright eyes and a cigaret at which he puffed with unusual satisfaction.

"Going to France at dawn, boys," he cries. "Wish me luck."

And at dawn he went with a passenger in the observer's seat behind him. The police were then beating the wilder thickets of Salisbury plain for the convict who was known to be hiding there.

"God bless you, old fellow," cried Billy, looking down upon them—and then to Parthon—"Buck up, old sport, and say goodby, Blighty."

. . . .

A certain military cross awarded for great gallantry in an aerial battle above Picardy goes, we see, to a certain William Smith, who is described as quite a recent recruit to the air service. How many know his true name or his sad story?

But a woman in Blighty knows it, and is proud, and waits patiently the day of his deliverance.

THE INDIAN SAVES THE TURKS LIFE

BY WM. DONAHEY.

THE woods in which the Teenie Weenies had made their camp were wild and rough. The tiny creek ran along through deeply shaded places and huge rocks, big as muskmelons, lined the banks.

There was one big rock on which the Lady of Fashion loved to sit, and almost every afternoon the little lady could be found in her favorite place.

One afternoon several of the Teenie Weenies who were lying on the soft moss near the big rocks were brought to their feet by loud calls for help.

"That sounds like the Lady of Fashion, that's what it does!" said Paddy Pinn.

"It certainly is, the Lady of Fashion!" cried the Turk. "Come on, boys, and let's see what's the trouble."

The Teenie Weenie men ran along the bank of the creek towards the big rocks, and presently they saw the Lady of Fashion clinging to the tallest rock with a look of horror on her tiny face.

"What's the matter?" asked the Turk.

The poor little lady was too frightened to speak, but she pointed down among the rocks with a trembling hand.

"Whatever it is, it's down in there behind the rocks," whispered the Cowboy.

"Maybe it's a s-s-snake," ventured the Dunce with very round eyes.

The little men crawled very quietly over the big stones and presently they saw a huge monster staring at the Lady of Fashion.

"I-i-i-is it a c-c-c-crockodile?" whispered the astonished Dunce.

"No, it's a lizard. That's what it is," answered Paddy Pinn.

The lizard was slowly crawling up towards the rock on which the Lady of Fashion stood.

"We've got to do something and do it quick," said the Turk. "One of you fellows go around in front of the lizard and attract his attention so he will raise his head a little and I'll lasso him," whispered the Cowboy.

The Turk slipped down among the rocks while the Cowboy carefully coiled his lariat and tied one end tightly to an old stick. Soon the Turk appeared directly in front of the lizard, and when the monster raised his head to look at him the Cowboy threw his lasso. The lasso failed to fall over the lizard's head and with a bellow of rage he charged at the poor Turk.

In trying to get out of the way the Turk fell down among the rocks and before he could get to his feet the monster stood over him, but at that very minute something happened.

None of the little people had seen the Teenie Weenie Indian sneaking up behind the rocks, and when the lizard leaped toward the Turk the little redskin pounced onto the monster's back and with his tiny knife he soon killed it.

The monster measured thirty-two (Teenie Weenie) feet and when it was skinned and the hide was tanned the little folks had enough leather to keep them in shoes for a year.

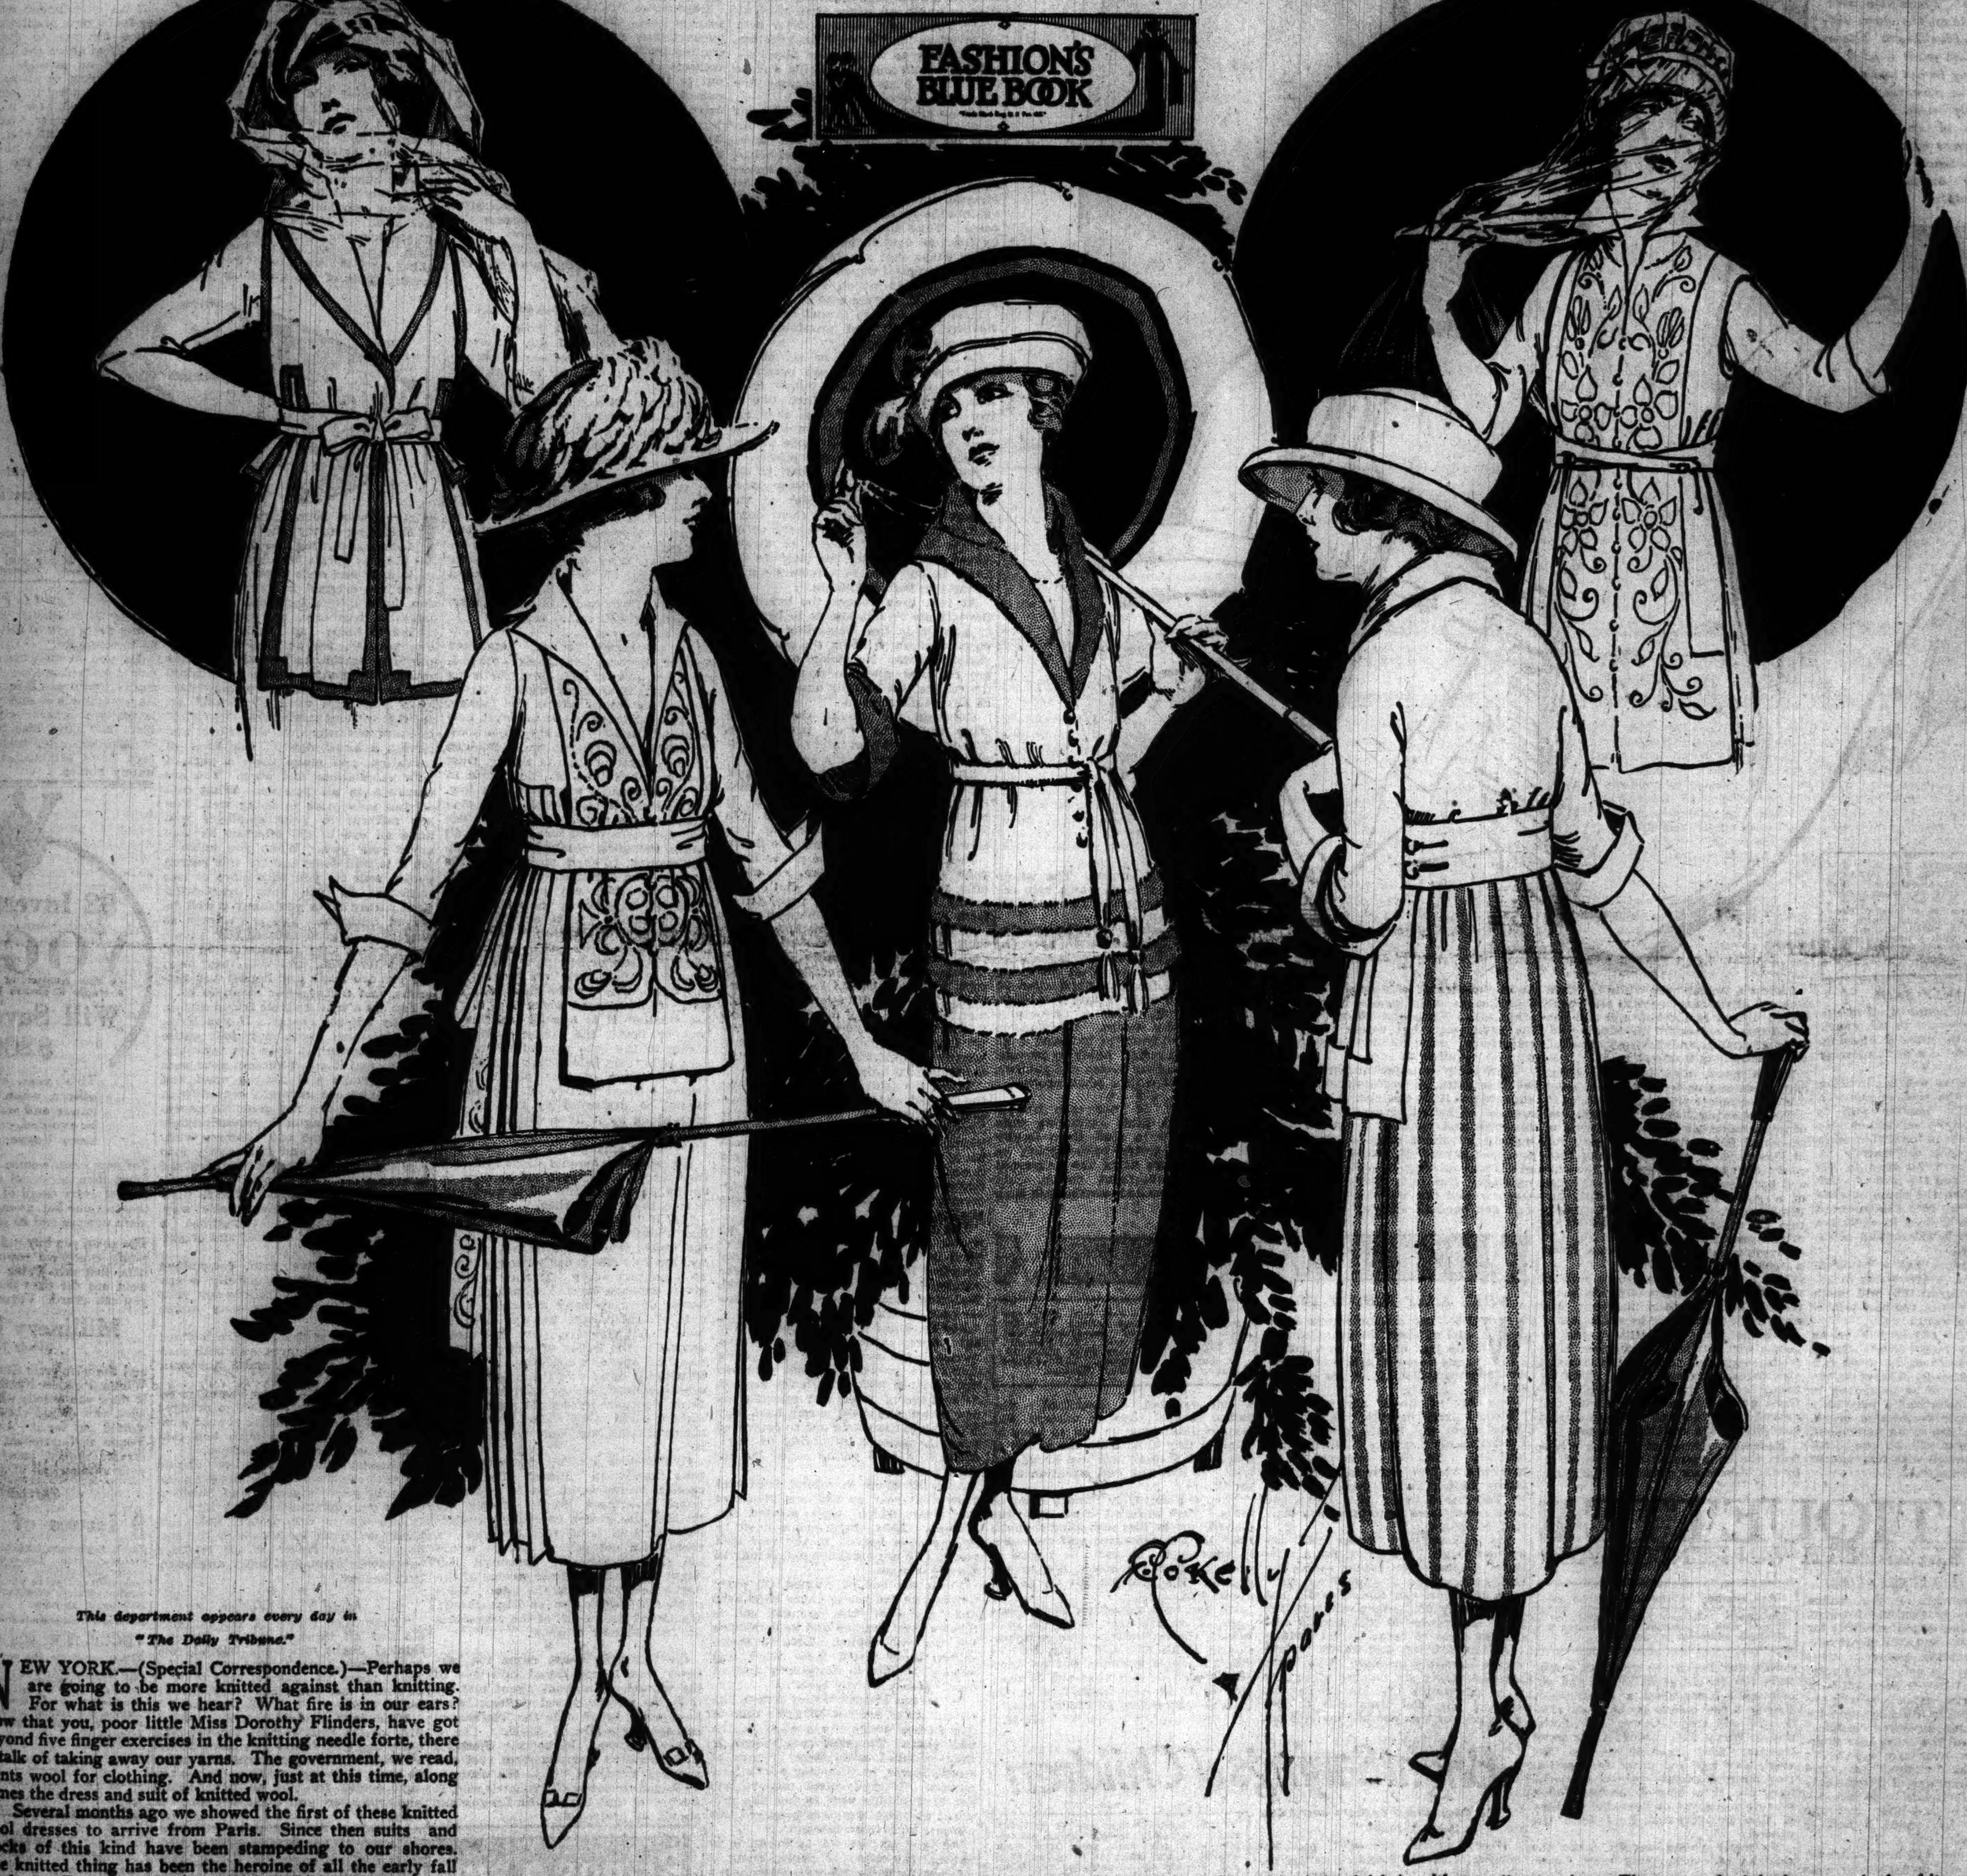
For September—the Knitted Dress



This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—Perhaps we are going to be more knitted against than knitting. For what is this we hear? What fire is in our ears? Now that you, poor little Miss Dorothy Flinders, have got beyond five finger exercises in the knitting needle forte, there is talk of taking away our yarns. The government, we read, wants wool for clothing. And now, just at this time, along comes the dress and suit of knitted wool.

Several months ago we showed the first of these knitted wool dresses to arrive from Paris. Since then suits and frocks of this kind have been stampeding to our shores. The knitted thing has been the heroine of all the early fall displays. They have been practicing this costume at the French resorts all summer. At Biarritz and Deauville and Trouville—in spite of the war still gay and populous—we are told that the knitted dress has to some extent superseded the jersey. And it is straight from Paris that we have received the pictures of this smart new material shown above.

In the center of the page is a one piece frock of light gray knitted wool trimmed with knitted Angora of a darker shade. There is a sailor collar and a bold, arrogant hem of this deeper gray. Also cuffs and two bands boom more Angora. For the rest, the simplicity of line of this little frock needs no press agent.

Speaking of Angora, it is one of the favored fall trimmings. It spices fall coats of velours de laine. It sets off suits. And for the knitted frock it is the chosen playmate. For instance, one of the most appealing of the suits which we have seen done in the new fabric was of blue and the coat which slipped on over the head was trimmed with gray Angora.

Shakespeare found out many years ago that it was difficult to get a trimming for gold or the lily. Many designers have experienced the same difficulty in the knitted dress. The fact of it is that it trims itself. As a result, we find the skirts of these dresses generally plain. Yet there is a way to diversify the knitted dress. It is to have it striped. And that is just what has been done to the effective dress at the right of the page. Here a chemise frock of knitted wool in alternate blue and gray is worn under a coatee of white velours de laine. Mark, too, this coatee! Instead of having the length in the back, it tunes up in the front, where we find quite an apron effect.

Velours de laine has been used all spring and summer by the Paris milliner. Coming in softest tints, it often has the Japanese idea of being decorated without decoration. For instance, the hat of soft blue velours de laine worn by the figure at the right hasn't a symptom of outside influence. And the other hat of the same fabric shown by the central figure tempers its rose only by two gray quill tips. For the September vacation the knitted frock and the velours de laine hat make an ideal combination. Both are inflected in the most charming of colors and both represent the latest notes from that pied piper of fashion—Paris.

Just one word more about the knitted dress. Some of these are in wool of a light weight. Others are knitted silk. Still others alternate stripes of silk and wool. Rodier, the great French fabric designer who is the Edison of the business, has been experimenting in the knitted fabric with particularly fortunate results.

For the last few seasons we have been so completely jerseyized that somebody had to nudge us to remind us that there ever was such a material as cheviot. Paris has recalled cheviot, however, and this material in all the pastel tints has been tremendously popular. At the left is one of the new cheviot dresses—this in soft rose—and with it is worn an outside waistcoat—mark this touch!—of a paler rose than the dress itself. This, as well as the girdle with its long sash ends, is finished with a cotton embroidery of outline design.

Sing ho, the waistcoat! It used to be a gentleman's recreation. It is now a woman's profession. What Beau Brummel or D'Orsay or Dickens ever doted on 'em as we women folks do today! If it becomes much more established in life, we'll be saying, "And with her waistcoat she was wearing a coat!" The poor little coat is getting to be just a postscript.

At the upper right and left you will find the new waistcoat blouse. They are really charming bits, too! Made the same length as the coat, the waistcoat blouse for fall achieves its destiny through some sheer material such as mull or madras. The one at the left, for example, is white mull bound in blue bands. The other at the right is rose color madras on which appears the now popular outline design—this carried out in heavy cotton of self color.

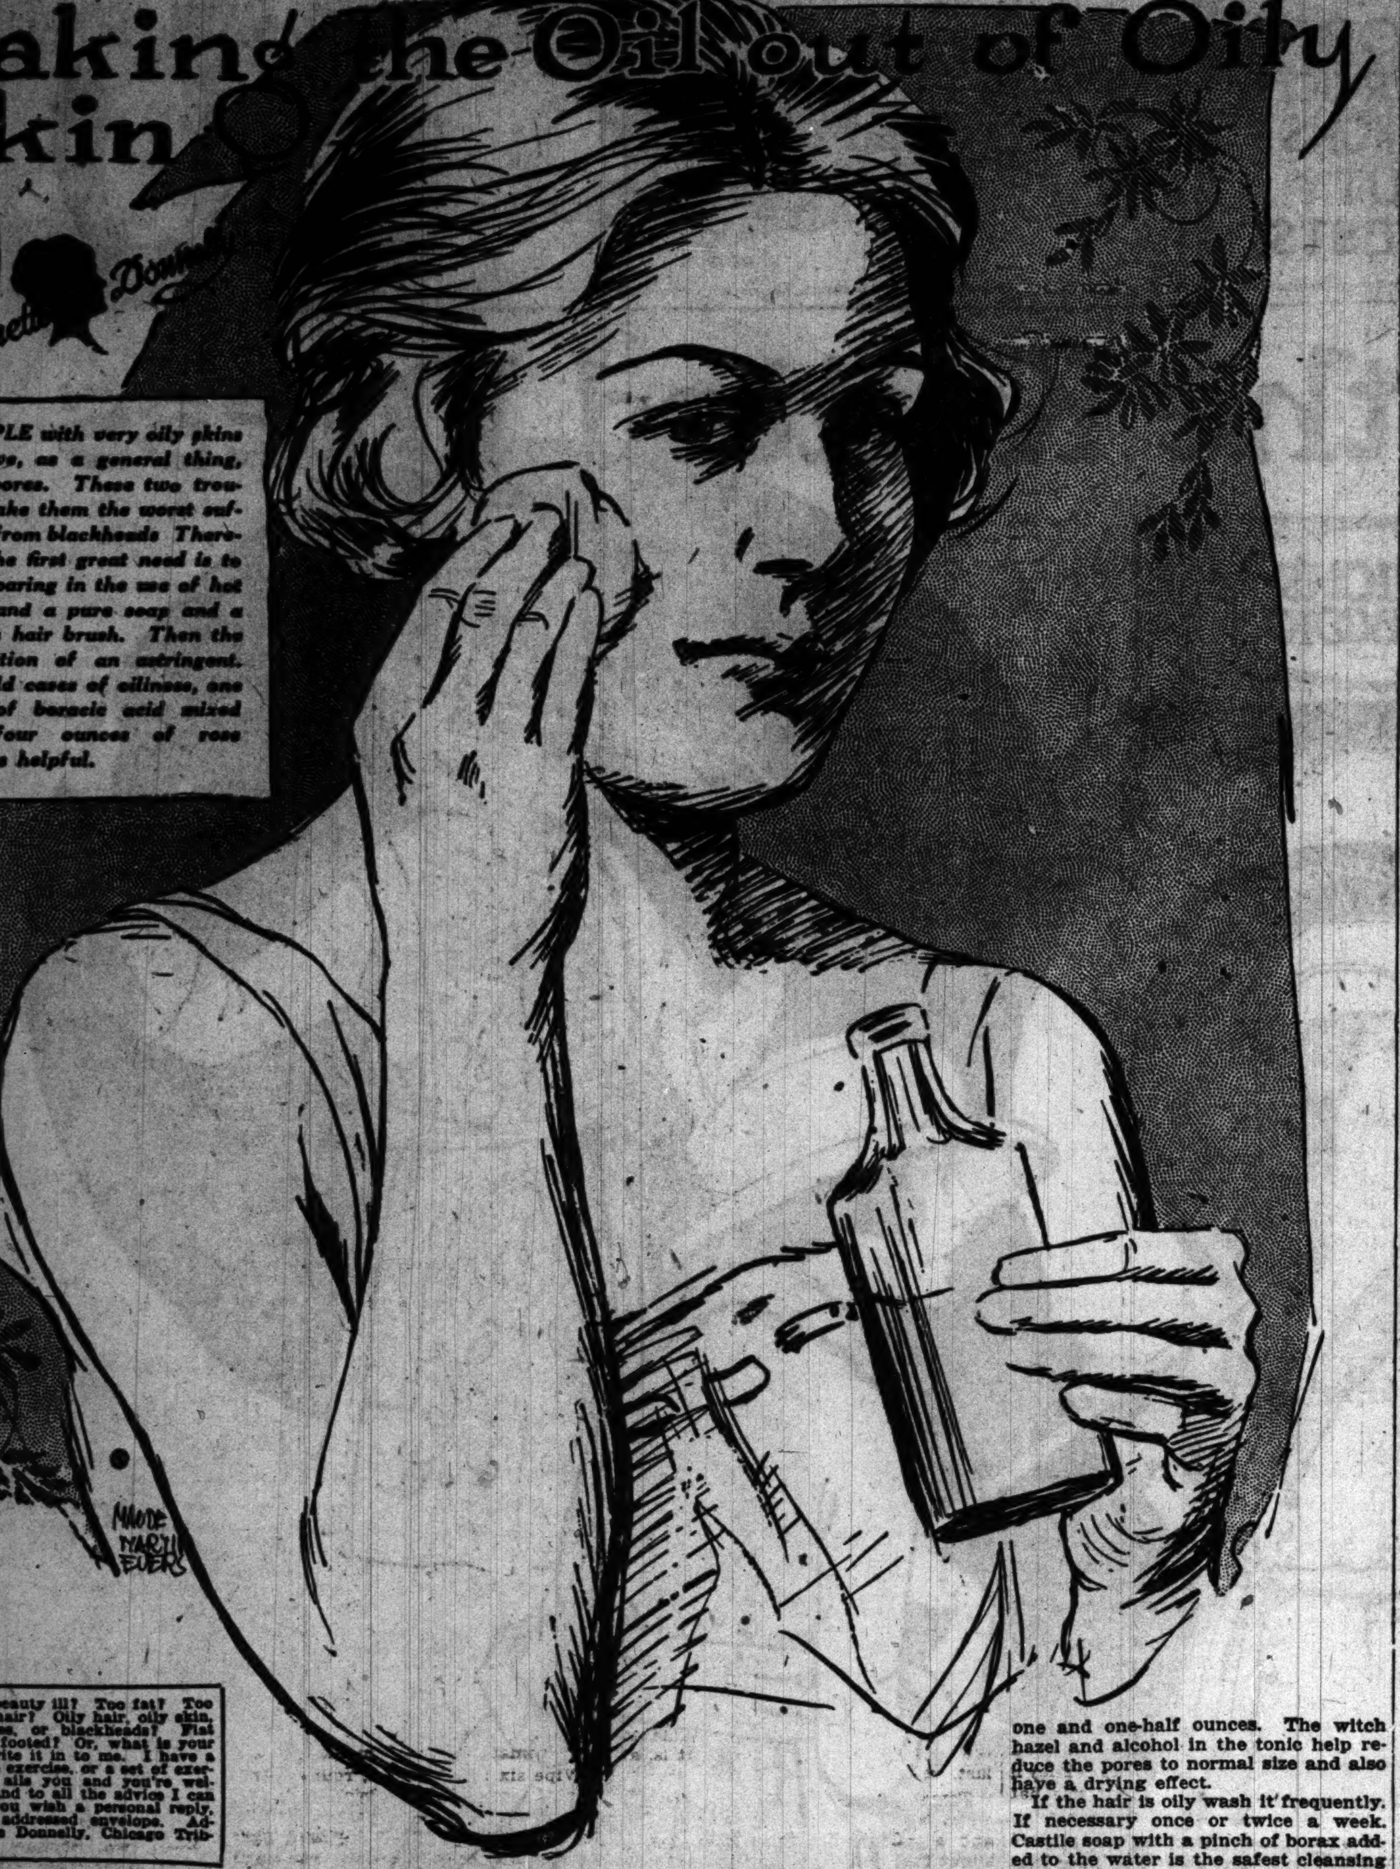
Both of these figures are wearing the tulle turbans with the tulle veils which may be kept up for resort wear in America althrough September. Speaking of tulle veils, they write us from Paris that cotton has been king this season. Even at the most fashionable resorts, they have been wearing our national planthem. Of course, however, since everything must go through the crucible of French taste, they have found a way to elaborate our simple tissues. One is by embroidering moons and crescents upon such materials as cotton voiles. Mousselines de soies are another material treated in this same way and some of the smart frocks of this fabric sketched at the French watering places look more as if they had been made by an astronomer than by a dressmaker.

These frocks embroidered or hand painted with skiey designs have hardly been launched in America. Next season, however, who knows? We must remember that it is always some little time after a mode has been launched in Paris that it finally takes in our own country.

Taking the Oil out of Oily Skin

By Antoinette Donnelly

PEOPLE with very oily skins have, as a general thing, large pores. These two troubles make them the worst sufferers from blackheads. Therefore, the first great need is to be unsparing in the use of hot water and a pure soap and a camel's hair brush. Then the application of an astringent. For mild cases of oiliness, one dram of boracic acid mixed with four ounces of rose water is helpful.



What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Or, what is your beauty ill? Write it in to me. I have a tonic, a diet, an exercise, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, Chicago Tribune.

DRYING OILY SKIN.

A CERTAIN amount of oil in the skin is necessary to the youth of it, and therefore a blessing. Beyond that it is not a blessing but an affliction.

And it takes the hot weather to bring this affliction to the proportions of a real trouble. The powder puff is pressed into constant service or else the shine shines out in tones that one's best friend could ne'er call merrily. A shiny nose is like a fat man in the way it does not earn the love of womankind. And when the shine extends beyond the nose up into the forehead and the scalp, as it does in excessive oiliness, the breach widens and ostracism is threatened.

But every ailment has a panacea, and so I offer you a few words of advice and an astringent that will make life happier for you in the cool weather as well as the warm.

People with very oily skin have, as a general thing, large pores. These two troubles make them the worst sufferers from blackheads. Therefore, the first great need is to be unsparing in the use of hot water and a pure soap and a camel's hair complexion brush. Then the application of an astringent.

For mild cases of oiliness, one dram of boracic acid mixed with four ounces of rose water is helpful.

I know a woman who wipes her face a couple of times a day with absorbent cotton dipped in alcohol, and she has found this a successful remedy, indeed. It is cleansing and drying. Alcohol, too, is bleaching to the skin.

Witch hazel, also, is an excellent astringent and no well regulated toilet table is complete without a bottle of it.

The following formula you will find of great value for excessive oiliness of the skin: Fill a pint bottle almost full of Epsom salts, one teaspoon of camphor, five drops of glycerin, quinine and borax each a pinch about the size of a pea. Fill the bottle with distilled water. Shake up well. Apply this at night with absorbent cotton after washing the face thoroughly and let remain on all night. Several times a week it may be applied.

Not only the face must be washed more frequently where oily skin is the trouble but the daily morning and night bath must never be neglected.

The diet must be regulated, too, by people with oily skin tendencies. Rich foods, as gravies, pastries, bonbons and chocolates, pork and bacon, would be better left off the menu entirely, and fresh green vegetables and fruit and cooked vegetables and plain meats and bran breads are the things to eat.

Excessive oiliness of the hair comes from the exaggerated secretion of fat by the sebaceous glands of the scalp. As in the case of oiliness of the face, disturbances of the general health may affect this. These disturbances are of the same sort that cause acne and sometimes constitutional treatment may be required to cure.

With scalp massage manipulations, which require no professional knowledge, since it is the simple performance of beginning at each side of the forehead and working backward and upward in circles until the crown of the head is reached, use this tonic for oily hair, rubbing it well in as you massage: Resorcin, forty grains; water, one and one-half ounces; alcohol, one and one-half ounces; witch hazel, one and one-half ounces. The witch hazel and alcohol in the tonic help reduce the pores to normal size and also have a drying effect.

If the hair is oily wash it frequently. If necessary once or twice a week. Castile soap with a pinch of borax added to the water is the safest cleansing measure. The frequent application of alcohol to the scalp is useful in combating dandruff, which is generally present in oily scalps. It dissolves some of the oil from the hair and dries both hair and scalp. Apply by parting the hair in various places and rubbing on the alcohol with a small sponge.

ANNETTE: If your ears trouble you like that after swimming take the precaution to stuff them lightly with greased cotton before going in. There is no use using the ungreased cotton. Use absorbent cotton, into which a little melted vaseline has been poured.

ETIQUETTE

By ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply, inclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

TROUSSEAU NECESSARIES.

AS a consequence of the undue popularity of that old favorite, the wedding march, requests for suggestions and lists of the necessaries for a modern trousseau come in pellmell. Perhaps as complete a list as I can gather together here will be of some help to those brides-to-be who are puzzling their brains, already tired with sock and sweater directions, surgical dressings, and all the other war interests of the hour, over such apparently minor details as "undies," hats, and the necessary numbers of linens—only today she is a fortunate bride who can think in terms of real linen and who does not have to confine herself to cottons and their like!

For clothes she will need a traveling suit (which will do for winter wear as well as fall), a hat to match, walking shoes—oxfords are smart and will suffice for winter months with spats—a handsome blouse, and several white ones, a fur scarf; a serge dress, plain enough for the house and yet good enough for the street; a long coat or cape; a dark silk dress for afternoon and a light one for informal dinners; several house dresses of gingham or some other wash material; one or two white skirts and a bright sweater and "sport" hat; an evening dress (probably the wedding gown will serve that purpose); an evening wrap; a light hat; light and dark slippers; "sport" shoes; six changes of underwear—nightgowns, combinations, shirts, stockings—with one or two extra pretty ones for best; two petticoats; two pairs of corsets; a light negligee and a warmer kimono; bedroom slippers; two pairs of white gloves and one pair for the street; collars and cuffs for her dresses and suit coat; two dozen handkerchiefs (one dozen plain and the other a little nicer for best). Her wedding outfit contains her gown and a veil, slippers and stockings, and a set of dainty underwear.

In her linen chest she will need at least three pairs of sheets and pillow cases, with another pair, a little handsomer, for her guest room; a dozen plain towels; six guest towels and six handsome large ones; a dozen wash clothes; a few covers for bureaus, sideboards, and trays; twelve dish cloths and as many dish towels; six or more dusters; four tablecloths—two for every day and the other for parties; two dozen napkins—twelve for ordinary use; three sets of luncheon linen—centerpiece and doilies—one of these a little prettier and finer than the others.

So many young women make the mistake of overstocking their "hope chests." It is far more fun to have just enough, or even a wee bit too little, so that engagement and wedding gifts may fill some of the vacant places, and the first partnership shopping—which, all brides agree, seems the most important and thrilling—may satisfy other minor wants.

E. M. F.: Many Americans insist that the correct way to use a fork is to hold it in the right hand, except when cutting one's meat, but smart folks follow the British custom of retaining it in the left hand even after the meat is cut. Spoons, on the contrary, arouse no such discussion; they are consistently held in the right hand except when the person in question is, in the parlance of the baseball fans, a "southpaw."

X. X. X.: You are quite justified in thinking that a man who will leave his feminine companion alone in the street car and go to the front platform to have a smoke is either exceptionally rude, ignorant of the care and respect due a woman, or thoughtless. He who is guilty of such an act runs the risk of having his invitations refused and his company scorned by well bred, dignified girls.

REAL LOVE STORIES

WHAT BILLY SUNDAY DID.

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

WHEN my cousin was a little girl of about 14 years of age she just hated to be a minister's daughter. She said people expected too much of her on that account.

One day at dinner she remarked, "Well, I have definitely settled one thing about my future, and that is I won't marry a minister." Her brother laughed. "Lucky minister," remarked a visiting uncle teasingly. Her father half seriously remarked that he had heard other girls make the same remark and sometimes they married drunkards.

Years passed and Cousin Edith remained single. "Waiting for a minister," jokingly her father said. She still protested that she would not marry a minister. In fact, she did not care for any of the men who admired her. She preferred girl friends and showed signs of being an old maid.

At last she fell desperately in love with a handsome stranger. They were married within six months after they were introduced. Within another six months she had discovered to her great sorrow that she had married not a minister but a drunkard. She passed several years in misery. She even realized what it was to have to shield a tiny child from the wrath of a drunken father. She was proud and tried to hide the real situation from us all.

Then one day Billy Sunday came to town. Her husband came into the place where he was preaching to make fun. He left converted and thoroughly converted. In fact, he began to want to give his entire life to the church. His wife did not try to dissuade him.

He has been preaching three years now. They are very happy in their home. His reformation was complete. Cousin Edith had said truly, for she didn't marry a minister, but we know she is glad at last that she is married to a minister instead of to the man he was before he became one.

Bright Sayings of Children

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"The Tribune" will pay $1 in thrift stamps for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunt Bee, "Tribune," Chicago.

Enoch, of the age of 7, was discussing with his grandfather the exciting details of an imaginary trip of adventure, including all hazards of land and sea and air. They had just summarily dispatched a lion which might spring upon them unawares from the jungle, when grandfather suddenly asked: "Enoch, what about Jean?" (his little playmate). "You can't take her on such a dangerous journey." "O," said Enoch, complacently, "Jean—I'd kiss her and leave her at home."

M. S.

Edna's aunt taught her the prayer, "Now I lay me down to sleep, I pray the Lord my soul to keep." This was, of course, on retiring. But one morning when Edna, in a spirit of devotion, commenced to repeat the same prayer, her aunt pointed out the unfitness of the wording. Edna at once saw the point, and proceeded to correct it by saying, "Now I stand me up awake."

Junior was fond of the neckties belonging to his big brother and, bringing me a bright colored one, asked me to tie it on for him. He was wearing a low collarless middy blouse, so I told him I couldn't tie it on and he yelled out, "Well, I got a neck, haven't I?"

The owner of a bakery found it necessary to leave her store for a short time. In her absence I went into the bakery and found her small son in charge. I wanted a pie, so I asked the little fellow what kind of pies they had. His answer was, "We have covered, uncovered, and cross barred ones."

WEEKLY PLANTING BULLETIN.

Sow or plant now in the garden: Early breakfast radishes, spinach, strawberry runner plants from old bed of pot grown.

PRUNING BRAMBLE FRUITS.

THE brambles include blackberries, raspberries, dewberries, and loganberries. In the average home garden these are permitted to grow in unrestricted thickets, wasting their strength on canes that have already borne fruit and will never bear again, canes that are spent and useless, serving only to weaken the plant, deprive it of sun and air, develop disease and insect pests, and decrease the yield of ever poorer berries.

All brambles grow fruit next year on the new wood of this year—on one year old canes. Hence all old canes, together with their lateral branches, should be cut off at the bottom immediately after through fruiting, and destroyed forthwith by fire to guard against the spread of possible plant diseases. Thus the nutriment gathered by the root system goes to a few selected canes that are yet to bear, and larger berries of superior quality will result. Bushes which run much to wood do so at the expense of the fruit.

It is time now to attend to this if healthy growth and profitable production are an object.

On blackberries five or six of the most vigorous suckers are permitted to grow, all others being pulled up as fast as they appear. When two to two and one-half feet high they are pinched back a few inches to cause them to branch out with side shoots, creating lower and stockier bushes.

Before the ground is frozen in November carefully dig or plow away sufficient soil on two sides of the plants to permit turning them down flat on the ground and cover the entire bushes with four inches of straw, leaves, or other litter, for they are not hardy in our climate. Raise them in spring just before budding.

At that time, reduce the length of the laterals or side shoots to between 12 and 20 inches, depending on the position of the fruit on the particular variety grown. No stakes or trellises are required when so managed, and the results will be fully equal to those of any other method.

Cultivate the ground shallow and often until the fruit turns color. Water thoroughly at intervals of a few days during warm, dry spells.

The fruit is not ripe because black, but should be left on the bushes until it drops off at the slightest touch. It is well, therefore, to spread a thin layer of clean straw before that time, as washing the fruit injures the flavor.

Red raspberries may be either European or native American, of which only the latter is hardy. Both commonly have erect canes, propagating from suckers, like blackberries.

Of the many cultural methods, either with or without trellises of one or two wires, the simplest and least troublesome is the so-called hill culture, with a stake for each bush, and clean, level cultivation. By this method, the bearing canes are loosely tied to the stake and the suckers grow up from the roots outside of these, greatly simplifying the picking and subsequent pruning.

When the fruit is picked, cut off at the ground all canes that have borne and destroy them at once by fire. Three to five of the most vigorous young suckers are left, the excess being removed with the spent old canes. Before freezing they are reduced in length by one-third to increase the yield and improve the quality.

The native variety will require no winter protection, but the European must be laid down after the manner described for blackberries, and covered completely with 4 to 5 inches of soil. Watering during dry spells is necessary till the fruit is ripe.

For black and purple raspberries the hill system, as described for red raspberries, is the best culture. The young plants are grown from the recurved tips of canes which touch the ground. After bearing fruit and starting its new plants, the spent parent bush may give way to the young and be destroyed when the latter is in bearing, or be reduced to 3 to 5 young canes for another season.

As with other brambles, fruit will grow next year on the new plants of this year which were started last autumn. Thus ample space must be left between bushes in the row that young, still unproductive plants may be always coming.

From the end of August till early October, as the young canes bend over and approach the ground, soil is thrown over the tips and kept moist—not wet—till rooted. Left to themselves, these would grow weak and spindly, unable to support a load of fruit. Hence a little care.

When the ground is first frozen, the parent canes are cut off some four to five inches above the ground at the new plant. The new root system is then mulched with four inches of straw, leaves, or litter for winter protection. If well rotted manure will not be available next spring, the proposed new site should be prepared this autumn with fresh manure.

As soon as the soil is workable in spring, the mass of young roots is thoroughly drenched with water, carefully lifted, and reset in the prepared location, with roots firmly extended downward and the little green bud, at the extreme end of the parent cane tip, pointing upward. The cut off cane ends will serve as a handle. Cover lightly with mellow soil, the bud two inches below the surface. Press the soil firmly against the roots, but let it remain loose over the bud.

When the young shoot comes up and begins to sprawl, train up off the ground by tying to an upright stake.

Pinch back the side branches when they reach a length of eight to ten inches, to develop the central cane for a robust upright bush. When two and one-half feet high, the latter is pinched back and the laterals or side branches are permitted to develop. When these grow too long and slender, they in turn are clipped back. These young bushes will fruit in the following year when really two and one-half years old. New plants can again be started and the old destroyed, but some growers get as many as eight or ten crops from a planting.

Yellow raspberries are hardy native varieties. Their treatment is like that of either the red or the black, depending on their descent.

Dewberries are treated much like blackberries, though requiring even better winter protection. They are of trailing habit and should be trained to trellises of two or three wires. Prune out to four to six fruiting canes and cut out at the bottom all canes that have borne. Propagation is by tip layering as for black raspberries. Young plants should be headed in or shortened back to four to five feet the first season. Reduce the length of long shoots and laterals in early summer to prevent sprawling. As for all brambles, plenty of moisture is a necessity.

Loganberries are a cross between the blackberry and the raspberry. Their cultural and pruning requirements are roughly identical with those of dewberries.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Q.—[1] How shall I prepare the ground from which I am removing early potatoes for everbearing strawberries? [2] Is it better to plant them in the fall or spring? [3] My spring sown asparagus is three to four inches tall now and sturdy, but infested with a fancy looking little bug. Various sprays had no effect. What shall I do? [4] Shall I transplant asparagus this fall? [5] How prepare the ground? [6] What can be done to simplify the raising of cabbage, cauliflower, kohlrabi, etc.? I have used slug shot as well as a teaspoonful of arsenate of lead to a gallon of water, but the bugs remain. [7] Why don't more people raise celery? It is simple compared with cabbage.—Mrs. F. S. C.

A.—[1] Turn under at once a liberal supply of well rotted manure.

[2] Right now.

[3] Asparagus beetles, handsome slender beetles, variously colored, about one-quarter inch long. Both the beetles and their small grublike larvae feed on the tender shoots and foliage, and are particularly apt to infest new asparagus beds. There are two broods, the adults hibernating under rubbish till about cutting time in spring. Dust freshly slaked lime on the plants in the early morning when wet with dew. In the small home garden, hand pick them or give poultry the run of the bed. In extensive culture, cut down all plants, including seedlings and volunteer growth, in early spring, that the eggs may be deposited on new shoots, which are then cut and destroyed every few days before the eggs hatch. Other practices are, to cut down the seed stems after the crop is harvested, and again once or twice during the cutting season, or leaving a row or two around the field as a lure for the beetles, where they may be killed with the spray recommended under No. 5. In hot weather it is a good practice to beat or brush the larvae from the plants to the bare ground where the heat kills them before they can regain the protection of the plants. The twelve spotted variety of the beetle cannot be destroyed by lime in the grub stage as it lives within the minute berries.

[4] Next spring.

[5] Manure heavily this fall and turn it under. The rest will be done in spring, as soon as the soil is workable. Watch the column then.

[6] If "bugs" are aphis or plant lice, about the size of a pin head, on the under side of the leaves, poisons will have no effect; use tobacco extract as a contact spray. If they are the green cabbage worms which eat the leaves down to mere skeletons, arsenate of lead is best, but the strength used is not effective. Use five tablespoons to the gallon of water, adding one-third ounce of dissolved rosin soap to make it adhere to the foliage. Arsenate of lead may be used in powder form, one part by weight mixed with sixteen parts of air slaked lime, using a cheese cloth bag from which to dust it.

(7) Celery is a relish, while the cabbage family are "fillers." The green cabbage worm would not be serious if home gardeners would simply go through the garden carefully on alternate days to hand pick and destroy them. An old pair of gloves would aid the squeamish. Thorough riddance of small and large worms of the first brood will lessen the later. With methodical work the cabbage family are among the easiest of the vegetables for the amateur to grow.

Q.—Will you please name the barberry that is considered injurious to the wheat? A nursery agent told me it is the purple leaved variety, but I have since heard it is the Thunbergii or Japanese.—Mrs. K. B. H.

A.—Japanese barberry (Berberis Thunbergii) is immune from rust and entirely harmless. It is the common or larger varieties (B. vulgaris and B. purpurea) that harbor the fungus and should be destroyed.

AN APPLICANT.

THE use of a little discretion and forethought is necessary when applying for a position. Whether it is her first experience of the kind or the fifth or sixth, the applicant must remember that the impression she creates in the first interview counts enormously toward getting and retaining the position for which she has applied, and that a first impression is sometimes affected by the merest trifle. The interviewer has little actual knowledge, usually, on which to base his judgment of the fitness of the applicant, so he has to depend on her appearance, that is, the way she is dressed, and her manner of conducting herself throughout the interview.

An employer told me the other day of a girl who had applied to him for a position of responsibility. She made an appointment for an interview and when she arrived she was accompanied by her mother. The girl impressed him favorably, and on questioning her decided that she had the necessary qualifications. He would have hired her if she had been alone, but she lost her chance at a good position because her mother insisted on taking part in the interview by answering some of the questions put to her daughter before the girl had a chance to reply, and by volunteering information regarding the girl's qualifications.

This man, who has a great many girls in his employ and who interviews all the applicants himself, also told me that he is influenced in his judgment of an employé (or prospective one) by the clothes she wears. He is particular to have the girls in his establishment always sensibly dressed and strenuously objects to the extreme fashions to which many of them are inclined.

If an experienced worker is applying for a new position it is a natural desire for her to display as much knowledge about the job and the work involved as possible. That is well, but in doing so there is great danger of assuming to know more about the work and how it is to be done than the employer, which is not likely to make a hit with him; nor is it necessary to convince him that the applicant possesses the ability for the job.

TALMA S.: Most firms expect their employés to give them at least a week's notice when leaving, but under the circumstances I think you would be justified in leaving your present employers without notice.

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are Inquisitive.

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped, addressed envelope.

IF you were born during the week beginning today the sign of the zodiac governing the date of your birth is Virgo, which sign begins on Aug. 22 and ends Sept. 21.

You are original in speech and action, have a well balanced mind, are domestic, motherly, and strongly attached to home and family, but this does not keep you at home if there is anything outside to investigate, since you are inquisitive above everything! You are accurate in design and detail, know what you want to do, and go about it without much fuss. You want to know the why and wherefore, and having a knowledge of the laws of causation, you make them a part of your calculations and work. You are thorough in all you do. What you do you take pride in doing well. You are faithful to your employer and have an eye to his interests as well as to your own. When you finish a job it is well done; and for this reason people wait for you with more or less patience. In fact, your overflowing good nature saves you many a well deserved criticism. You are always so outrageously good natured that people laugh before they finish scolding you. People like you, and well they may, for you are frank and honest and generous, and truthful—or mean to be.

You are a true, reliable friend and an equally reliable enemy. If you have, or think you have, any just cause against another, it does not take him long to find it out, although your acts and language will not be open and frank. You are generally content with your lot and are not given to knocking your head against impossibilities. You change home and business without much effort, and fall readily into new routine. You are sometimes apt to take a distorted view of things and perhaps individuals and criticize their motives in a blind, uncharitable way. Your disposition is sometimes a strange mixture of sadness and brightness.

You are positive, firm, determined and your own way generally seems best to you. Your definitions suit your purpose, however, they may strike others.

The women of this sign are inclined to be hero worshippers, and both men and women make splendid husbands and wives.

A marriage with Pisces has often resulted in harmony, and Virgo married to one of its own sign has proved wonderfully happy, when each has conquered domineering tendencies.

February and November should prove the best months for the advancement of your interests, and Wednesday is your fortunate day of days.

Your colors are amber, gold and black, and your birthstone is the sardonyx. Your flower is the bristling cornflower, symbol of unity and bountiful harvest.

Mind Your Mother.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 15 years old and all through school. Do you think I ought to have a fellow? My parents say I can't have one until I am 18 years old. Lots of boys want to flirt with me, but I don't pay any atten to them. BLUE EYES."

Mind your mother, Blue Eyes, dear! She knows what is best for you and she's the best friend you have in the world and has your happiness more at heart than any one else. When the time comes for you to have beaux she will allow you to have them, I'm sure.

Right to Flirt?

Dear Miss Blake: Do you think it polite for a lady to flirt? Give [illegible] as to etiquette."

Do you mean with strangers or do you mean a coquette? The former, naturally, requires no reasons other than its commonness and vulgarity. The latter is a dangerous pastime because flirts are girls who line the shelves of leftovers after their less fickle sisters have established themselves in happy homes.

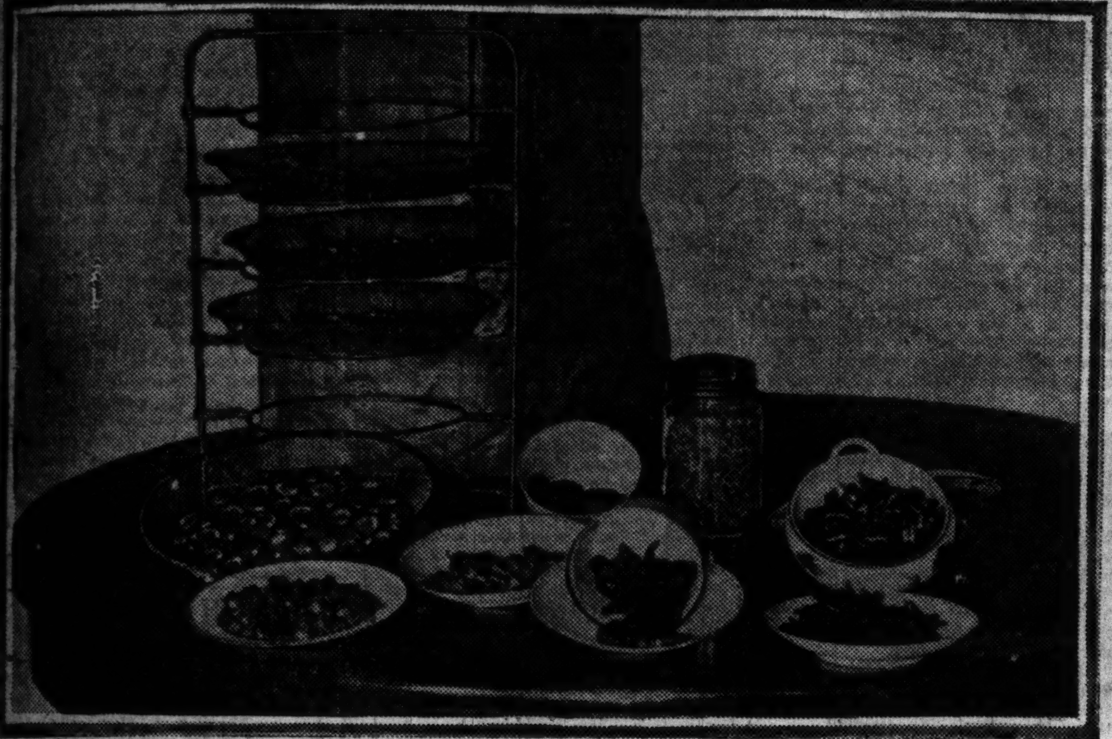
CONSERVATION BY DRYING.

DRY but not dry up might be a good slogan for the work which we call today dehydrating. When to stop and let air do the rest, or when to let air do it all, instead of applying artificial heat for the drying, is certainly one of the problematic things in this highly important method of food conservation.

The Arab in his desert dries the fig, but he does not dry it up. Fig growers in America have perhaps despised to learn from so primitive a person, for the ripe fig with us is but one of the most highly perishable fruits. The date is another product dried but not dried up, and the raisin as well. When these two latter are dried up they are all but wasted.

Commercial drying stops at the point generally where the products are leathery. After that comes what is called conditioning, which is a recognition of the moisture still in the product, and is the business of distributing it, those pieces which are dryest taking from those which are not so dry. After that comes the packing, which is as much to preserve the moisture remaining in the product as anything else.



A pie rack for drying vegetables.

To dry and not dry up or to preserve what moisture remains in the product after a certain amount of processing, is a great problem. The drying up is easier and at the end more sudden than we sometimes imagine. Thus food value, flavor, and cooking qualities are lost. Dried to the point where a reasonable degree of moisture remains, there is no loss of food value, the product is easily restored to cooking condition, and it is possible to get something of highly desirable flavor.

In the drying device described below, which was well covered with a thin cloth to keep out the dust, I dried carrots to the conditioning point in less than three hours on an open, sunny balcony on a hot day. The wire plate of thinly sliced carrots nearest the hot cement floor dried almost too fast.

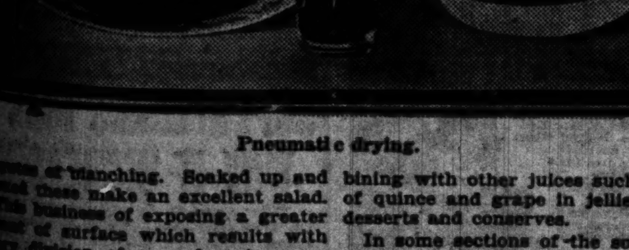
People who believe most sincerely in drying, and believe that anybody can learn to dry, are likely to say something like this: "Some of the points in drying cannot be explained. They can be learned only by doing the work yourself. But do not be confused or discouraged by these facts, for the process is simple."

The simpler we make the process, within reason, the more we will wonder that the art of our grandmothers in drying seasonings, apples, pumpkins, tomatoes, and peaches, and in storing some things by means of air, has been lost.

Because I believe there is great advantage in trying new things out in small ways, I adapted something easily procurable last summer to this drying business. It was a small pie rack with mesh plates, much like the screen bottoms used in drying racks. With a disc of iron over one burner of the gas stove and the gas turned to the lowest point, I found that even this amount of heat was too much for drying if plates were nearer than a foot from it. I did not even buy asbestos for a funnel around it, but folded over a few inches of a large sheet of brown paper, to make a somewhat firm rim, and then pinned it around the rack, gathering it partly at the top, as one would a bag.

With this device, 1 cent's worth of gas would do all the work necessary for drying some products, if they were in small enough pieces or thin enough slices. Two bunches of carrots dried at a cost of not more than 3 cents.

The more we increase the surface of the thing to be dried the more quickly will the moisture in it depart. In drying string beans, which if not dried right or too much have a tendency to wrinkle when soaked up and cooked, we need to remember this and cut them in small pieces after the six minutes of blanching. Soaked up and cooked these make an excellent salad.



Pneumatic drying.

This business of exposing a greater amount of surface which results with every division of a product is something to remember. One-eighth inch slices of carrot dry rapidly even in plain warm air, because these slices are mainly surface. One of the newer methods of drying apples has as its basis this idea.

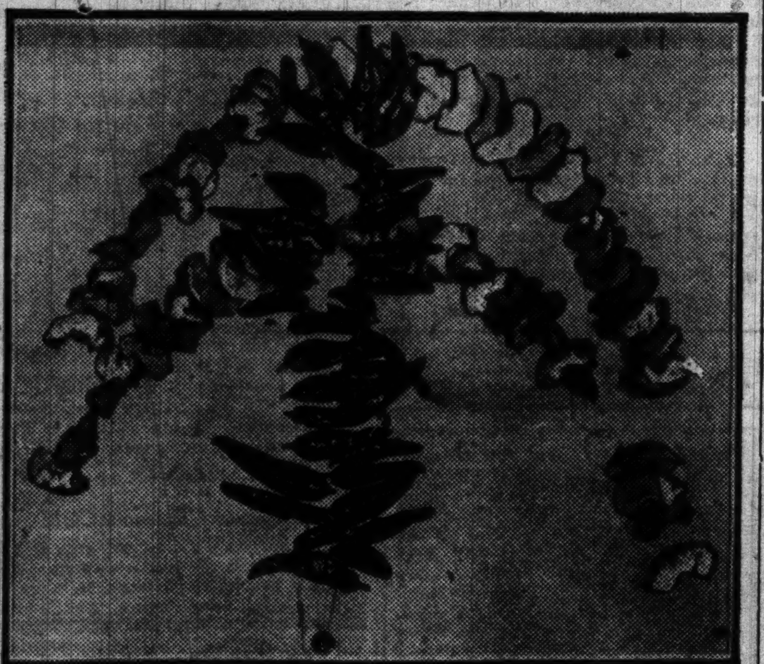
Last year the pie frame was described more as a suggestion than anything else, and Mrs. J. H. Wilkerson of [illegible], Ill., took up the idea. She has kindly written out for me the results of her experiments, which she has demonstrated at food shows. Her drier also has been on exhibition at the food bureau in Chicago. She used the twelve plate pie rack, but this year finding these were no longer procurable she made one for a food show of wire hardware cloth—a square mesh heavy wire netting. She says about this:

This is square cornered and has shelves made of the same. It was some little job to make, as I am no mechanic, but would be easy enough for many people. I used tinner's shears and a pair of pliers. It cost $1.20, asbestos paper and all. I wanted to show something that could be made at home for a small sum.

I dried in it strawberries, huckleberries, spinach, beets, potatoes, rhubarb, asparagus, red raspberries, and apples. They made a nice appearance, but as our librarian kept the exhibit to use elsewhere, I did not have opportunity to cook any of them except the spinach, and I thought it would be hard to distinguish that from the fresh in taste.

I have also dried Swiss chard in quantity. That is one of the things easy to dry in the oven. And I think I told you about drying eggs after beating them, then when dried putting them through the food chopper. I think it was suggested in one of your articles. I bought them fresh and cheaper in the country and that was the only way I could bring them home. I used them in dark cakes and other cooking.

Since I was brought up to turn the apple parer and string, peeled and quartered pieces on strings, which were hung out of doors to dry, I think that this method, though so primitive, might be resorted to in certain cases today. They tell us that the Michigan apple crop is only one-tenth its usual size. In a drive by several orchards in this vicinity we strained our eyes almost in vain before we could see any fruit anywhere. Therefore every windfall, even, ought to be precious this year, and not one apple in orchard or market should go to waste. With light cloths to cover them a great quantity of apples may be strung and hung in the open to dry. Amateur drying of apples by artificial heat is likely to be only partially successful, because the outside of the pieces becomes like a skin to prevent the inner moisture from escaping, and there may be a sugary or sticky skin which seals the moisture all the more surely. Of course the stickiness is due to the sugar in the fruit.



Tomato paste almost dry, dehydrated tomato juice and pulp with seeds from two pounds of tomatoes.

In drying apples at home, therefore, it is not best to put them in the oven unless cut as thin as possible. In this sort of conservation we must not forget that the peeling and the cores are the part that has the most pectin or the jellying quality. By washing the apples before they are pared and then by cooking the skins and cores, we get an apple juice which may be bottled and kept for jelly making, or for combining with other juices such as that of quince and grape in jellies and in desserts and conserves.

In some sections of the south they are proud of a conserve of apple that is kept white by using sulphur. In commercial drying sulphur is used to bleach the apples. Some of us who believe we are dietitians sincerely object to this. A bulletin put out by the agricultural experiment station of the University of Illinois (circular No. 312), March, 1918, with the title, "Apple Flakes," has this to say:

The present sulphur bleached commercially dried apple has fallen so short in retention of natural flavor, color, cell structure, and adequate keeping quality that it has not even warranted consideration as an army food. On account of the thick slicing, sulphur bleaching, and high moisture content dried apples, as offered to the public in their present form, are a leathery product, the outer layers of cells having dried first, making it impossible to lower the original percentage of moisture in the inner layer of cells without destroying the chemical and physiologist construction of the outer cells. The ready spoiling of the sulphur bleached apple is doubtless due to fermentation or chemical rearrangement within the cells of the inner layers of the dried fruit, a result of insufficient dehydration accompanied by an increase of temperature.

All this would seem to show that plain air is a good medium for drying apples, and the old fashioned reddish results had good flavor according, as the apple dried had good flavor—you cannot go back of the original material for such a thing as flavor.

In introducing this little treatise on drying apples in flakes, the author says:

Where Europe needs fruit the most today is in the trenches. It is in the trenches that life is the most strenuous, where a balance of ration is most needed, as only highly concentrated foods are available in most instances. Men in the trenches are begging for fruit, not as a luxury but as a source of fruit sugar, fruit esters, and acids, to aid in digestion and give a balanced ration.

Concentrated foods, both for foreign and home use, is really one of the food slogans of today. The better we learn how to prepare these for home use the better will the product for foreign use be likely to be. There are great problems to solve, and one of the greatest of these is the transportation of foods. Drying is one of the greatest ways of saving transportation.

It looks as though we should, perhaps, have a smaller tomato crop this fall than usual. Tomatoes are the equal of fruit in a balanced ration. There is one mistake, however, that we may make in drying this true fruit. It is the pulp that the Italians dry for their pastes. How much of the juice, if any, they waste I do not know, but it is the juice of the tomato and not the pulp that is the most precious. This we must conserve, and we can practically dry it. At any rate, we can, by boiling it down, or by the process of evaporation, reduce it to a thick, sugary substance which keeps like a preserve and contains, measure for measure, probably, of sugar, whereas the pulp alone must be dried and dried before it reaches a state at which mold will not quickly attack it.

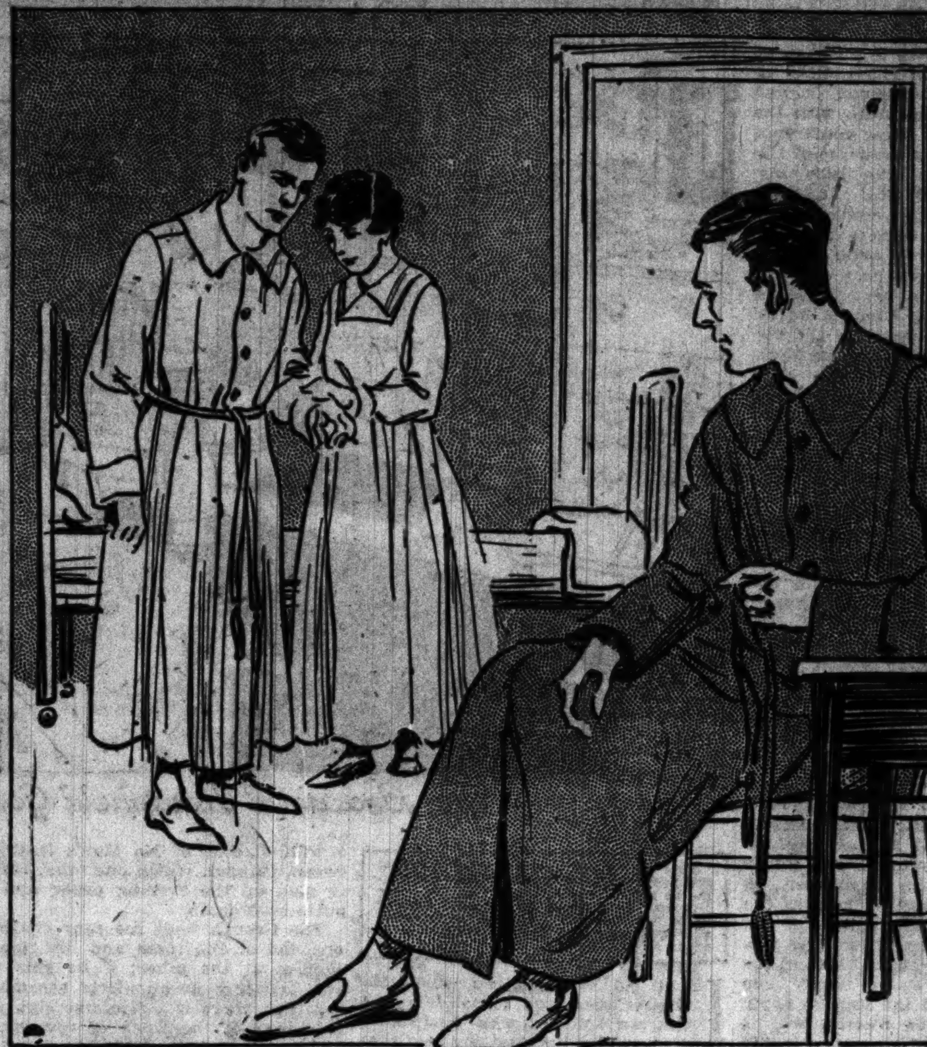
If pulp and juice are reduced together, we get a product with keeping qualities less good than that of the juice alone. If we cook the tomato before separating it into juice and pulp, with green sweet peppers and onion, we get a juice of superlatively fine seasoning powers, and one that mold will not attack, when it is sufficiently reduced.

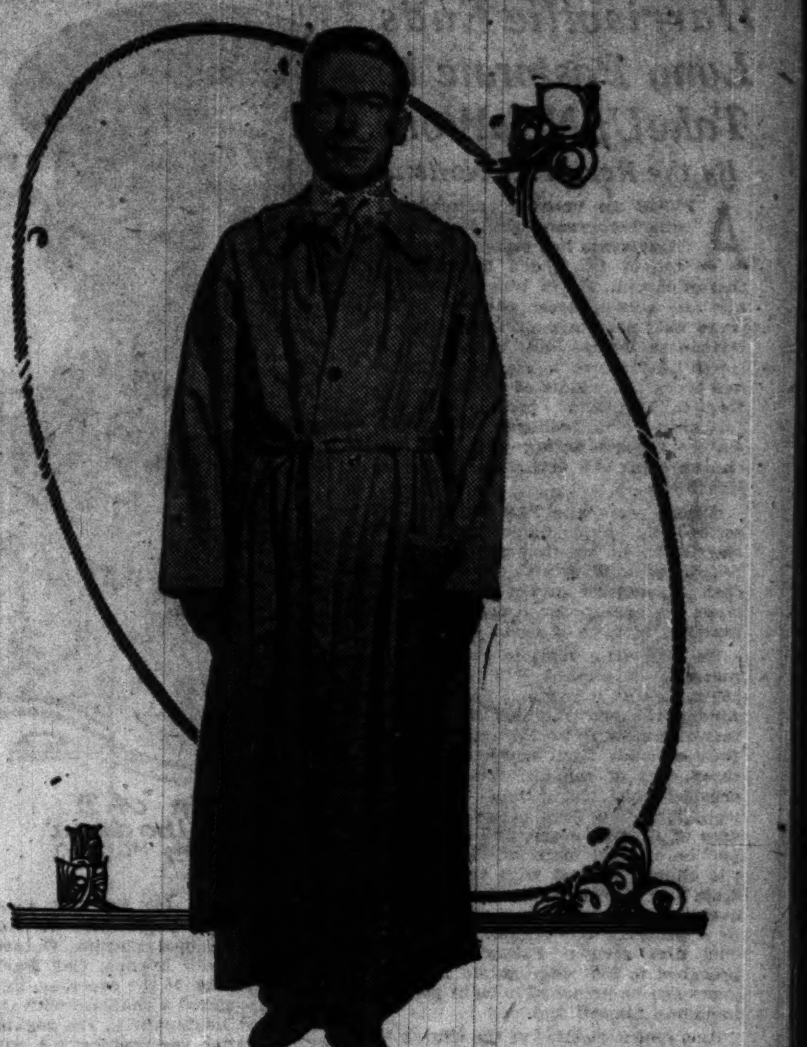
To me at any rate it is this juice that it seems most worth while to dehydrate. Commercially the seed has been found to contain a valuable oil. In sieving stewed tomatoes to remove the seeds, there is often left enough pulp with the seeds to flavor a stew or a soup. The commercial canner in putting up tomatoes does not consider that the tomato is at the best keeping stage unless the glutinous envelope around the seed has been cooked away.

No end of people are inventing drying devices. Literature on the subject is almost daily increasing. There is no excuse for anybody who wants to do the work not finding guides and advice. I have collected so much on the subject that it takes a great deal of will power even to take out the files and go through them.

Farmers' Bulletin 841 is on dehydration and those bulletins put out by the agricultural experiment station of the Pacific coast are most valuable on this subject of drying.

PATRIOTIC and PRACTICAL NEEDLEWORK by Clotilde





ROBE FOR CONVALESCENTS.

What with working for the Liberty loan (and our fourth one is looming near), thrift and war saving stamps campaigns, a drive for the Red Cross, one for junk, and our bandaging and knitting, most of our time is checked off. But if we look closely enough we will find the spare bits now and again that we quite unconsciously had debited to rest. You mothers, with boys over there, and you with boys over here, imagine that your own lad is sitting in the robe pictured above and devote the hour or half hour of rest into making one of these garments.

The convalescent robe is what we would call a very comfy bath or lounging robe, were it worn at home. It is warm and enveloping, with two handy pockets, just the place for a letter from home or a cigaret or two. This particular one is dark gray (and they would rather you used the darker colors) made of soft flanelette loosely belted and high collared. It takes 6⅝ yards of material, 27 inches wide, ⅝ inches of twilled tape (gray, black or color to match), 66 inches long, 2 buttons (gray or color to match), ⅞ inches in diameter, 1 hook and eye (number 3 white or black) and sewing thread number 60 (black or color to match).

The pattern may be obtained by sending ten cents in stamps in an addressed and stamped envelope to the American fund for the French wounded, 60 East Washington street, Chicago, where the completed garment may be sent also.

Better Housekeeping

By Mary Bronson Hartt

THE IDEAL LAUNDRY.

THE basement laundry has come in for some criticism of late. Much has been said about the advantage of having washing and ironing done on the kitchen level, with the drying yard down a few steps instead of up a flight and through a bulkhead.

Verily, the housekeeper knoweth her own bitterness! If there's a maid in the house and a laundress comes in once a week a good stout floor is not too much to have between them—be they friends or foes. If the maid consents to do the washing there are arguments on both sides. But where machinery cleans the clothes and the mistress tends the machine there is no doubt of the convenience of a laundry off the kitchen.

Even at some sacrifice of lawn space behind the house the building on of a small laundry wing would be a good investment. Maybe the roof of the wing might be turned into a sleeping porch if the house doesn't already afford that luxury.

In many households whoever does the washing, maid or mistress, does at least a portion of the ironing. That means that at least a part of the ironing is done in the kitchen (unless the laundry is on the ground floor). It is unthinkable that either maid or mistress should attempt to watch cooking going on in the oven or answer the doorbell from a post over an ironing board in the basement.

It will be convenient, however, to treat all laundry processes as if they were always carried on in one room.

Abundant light, air, and a cross draft are fundamental necessities to neutralize the steamy heat of a laundry. The tubs should be lighted, not, as is usual, by windows directly facing the worker but from one side.

The laundry, like the bathroom, must have a wall finish that isn't hurt by steam, a floor that can't be hurt by water. Oil paint in a cream shade to reflect the light is a natural choice for the walls.

The floor of a basement laundry is usually of concrete. If a floor drain is provided, properly trapped to seal out sewer gas, the floor can be informally washed with the hose after each wash day, all spilled suds being thus promptly cleared off instead of drying in a film to catch and hold dirt.

Concrete is too unsympathetic a surface for the laundress to stand on at her work. The driest and cleanest mat to give her is a rack of pine boards—slats nailed on cross pieces to raise them an inch or so from the concrete. If the little platform is made solid drill it full of holes to let spilled water through. It should be light enough to offer no temptation to leave it in place when the rest of the floor is washed, sheltering damp and old soap.

Before the ironing table this same rack might be used, or here, where no water slops about, a washable rug laid over a thick pad of old newspapers (changed each week) is warm and restful to the feet.

Theoretically the laundry tubs should be snow white enameled steel or vitreous ware, without crack or seam to hold dirt. But consider the ways of laundresses—the illicit soda they instill into wash water when we aren't looking, the pails they like to set under the faucets left dripping red with iron stains on the white. There is no reason why snow white tubs should suffer in the legitimate process of washing clothes, unless indeed a hand vacuum dasher is used. All the same, most of us come down with a sigh for the beautiful white vision to the gray practicality and serviceableness of soapstone.

A washing machine? In the name of economy, yes. Economy, even though the machine you buy be a first class electric washer. The question isn't one of first cost. The operating price is negligible.

Since serious students of household economy believe that the injury to underclothes and cotton dresses involved in ridding them of dirt is many times more ruinous than the wear and tear of use to cover us, it is easy to see that a good washing machine, which neither tangles the clothes nor subjects them to hard rubbing, begins to pay for itself by lengthening the life of the household linen.

A resourceful woman will do wonders with the curling tongs in place of pliers; but really the pliers have a wider sphere of usefulness. They'll straighten out the bent point of a hat pin, or a crooked nail, or grip a gas tip, or give you a purchase on a wire clothes hook that goes in so hard into the hook rail. The other day the sprinkler of the watering can got stepped on so it no longer fitted the spout. Pliers straightened the bent-in side. Pliers tighten the nuts that hold the handles on bureau drawers or the screw of a meat grinder, saving your hands. Their long suit is the bending of wire.

The best kind of screw driver for a woman to handle is one with a "ratchet" movement. The blade can move in but one direction. It stands still, though the handle moves, when you twist your wrist back for a new turn of the screw; so that the blade never loses its engagement with the nick in the head of the screw.

A more elaborate tool has an attachment which holds the screws. This is invaluable for driving a screw in a tight place where there is not room for a pair of fingers plus a screw driver. Still another has a magazine in the handle which holds varieties of blades to fit every sort of screw. One of these blades should have a V shaped notch cut in the center of the working edge to take hold of battered old screws that won't budge for an ordinary driver.

From some worn old screw driver get the hardware man to make you an invaluable tool to pull down the bolts that hold the closed half of the double front door. Have him heat the point and bend it over at right angles. That will reach up and claw down the bolt without breaking anybody's finger nails.

If one were doing much tacking, putting up mosquito netting for example, a magazine tack hammer which holds tacks in its inside and feeds them automatically to the hammer would be a distinct asset.

Combination tools—pipe wrench and wire cutter in one, or nut wrench and pipe wrench in one, or staple puller, wire cutter, and pincers—may be had in a great variety at any big hardware store.

An unusual implement, but one you wouldn't do without once you had used it, is a long handled steel box opener, somewhat like an exaggerated chisel. With the leverage it affords the tightest nailed dry goods box parts with its lid with less effort than it usually takes to start the first screeching wire nail.

They say an awl is to a woman what a bit brace is to a man. There's a sneer behind the words. All the same, stick to your awl. A blow on the handle with the hammer makes a hole in the hardest wood into which you can start a screw or a clothes hook and does it with much less strain on your hands than a gimlet.

A woman rarely wants a plane. A miter box she does want if she does any cabinetmaking. Also a T square.

Angle irons—just right angles of iron with two screw holes in each side—are useful to steady the wabbly leg of an old chair or table. If half the iron is screwed fast to the chair bottom and half to the leg it has to become rigid. Strong copper wire is good to splice a split tool handle, and even fine florist's wire occasionally does one a good turn in repairing jobs.

Metal shears are wonderfully handy to have about the house. With them you can cut a tin patch to cover a mouse hole, or an extra bottom for a cake tin when the gas stove has a trick of burning things on the bottom, or cut out a tin circle to set over the simmering burner to hold a graniteware cup.

LEARN A LITTLE AND SAVE A LITTLE EVERY DAY

By Elizabeth O. Hiller

MADE WITH TOMATOES.

"THE triumph of the tomato has given hungry people a new lease of pleasure." Those were sad, drear days when the gourmet thought to feast and this beautifully gay colored fruit found no place upon his table. The ancient chef knew nothing of it. Like so many other good things, it first saw the light in this happy western continent. It has now become as indispensable to the cuisine as salt or butter. It is, at last, valued at its true worth.

Tomatoes are valued chiefly for the water which they contain (94 per cent) and a mild acid. They have but a slight fuel value, yielding but 105 calories to the pound. They are of pleasing flavor, attractive to the eye, and convertible into an infinite variety of delectable dishes, a few for which recipes are given here:

Tomato Salad with Chives.

Remove the skins from the required number of small, smooth tomatoes. Chill them thoroughly, cut in quarters without separating entirely at the stem ends. Arrange them in individual nests of crisp lettuce heart leaves. Cover with mayonnaise and sprinkle with finely cut, not chopped, chives.

Stuffed with Green Peppers.

Wipe and cut a slice from the stem ends of six medium sized tomatoes. With a teaspoon remove seeds and soft portion, sprinkle inside with salt, invert on a plate, and let stand one-half hour. Cook one-third cup of finely chopped green pepper in three tablespoons of butter five minutes, without browning, add one cup of soft bread crumbs, one-half cup of the tomato pulp, one teaspoon of grated onion, one-fourth teaspoon of salt, and one-eighth teaspoon of pepper. Fill tomatoes with mixture, cover tops with buttered crumbs, and bake in a buttered earthen baking dish fifteen minutes in a hot oven. Serve with roast pork, beef, or veal or arrange around a hot veal loaf.

Tomatoes in Cream Sauce.

Wipe six firm, smooth, round tomatoes of medium size. Prick each several times with a coarse darning needle. Arrange in an earthern baking dish and bake in a slow oven until soft. Remove the skins carefully. Set tomatoes in a hot shallow serving dish and cover them with cream sauce, made as follows:

Melt two tablespoons of butter in a saucepan. Cook in it five minutes one slice of onion, without browning. Remove onion and add three tablespoons of flour or two tablespoons of cornstarch, mixed with one-half teaspoon of salt and one-eighth teaspoon of pepper. Stir until well blended, then pour on gradually, while stirring constantly, one cup of thin hot cream. Serve with roast veal, fried chicken, etc.

Stuffed with Chicken Livers.

Wipe eight firm, ripe tomatoes, remove a slice from the stem ends, scoop out seeds and soft portion, sprinkle inside with salt, invert, and set aside in a cool place. Finely chop one medium sized onion, cook three minutes, without browning, in one tablespoon of butter, add six fresh mushroom caps peeled and finely chopped and one-half pound of chicken livers (any minced cooked meat, if the livers are not available), season with salt and pepper, stirring constantly. Continue cooking three or four minutes, add the pulp removed from tomatoes and one-half cup of bread crumbs and one teaspoon finely chopped parsley. Cook slowly three minutes, then set aside to cool. Fill tomatoes with mixture, cover with buttered bread crumbs, and bake in a well greased agate pan or earthern baking dish until tomatoes are soft, about twenty-five minutes.

Tomato and Onion Pie.

Peel two medium sized Spanish onions, cover them with boiling water, and let stand two hours; drain and dry, cut them in thin slices crosswise, and brown delicately in three tablespoons of butter or substitute. Peel and slice six medium sized tomatoes and arrange them in alternate layers in a well oiled earthen baking dish, sprinkle each layer with salt, pepper, and a layer of soft buttered bread crumbs. Let the last layer be a thick layer of buttered and seasoned crumbs to form the top crust of the pie. Bake slowly one hour in a moderate oven. Serve with roast pork, goose, or with baked fish.

Tomato and Cucumber Salad.

Select small, smooth, round tomatoes. Select cucumbers of about the same diameter as tomatoes. Peel and slice both; arrange them in stacks, alternating the slices until three of each have been used in each stack. Place them in nests of crisp head lettuce leaves; pipe mayonnaise around the base of each stack and finish each with a rose of mayonnaise set on top. Sprinkle mayonnaise with finely chopped chives or mild red pepper.

Tomato and Cottage Cheese Salad.

Peel six medium size, smooth tomatoes, cut a slice from the stem ends, and scoop out the seeds and soft portion. Sprinkle with salt, invert on a plate, and chill for an hour in the refrigerator. Moisten one and one-half cups of cottage cheese with cream, season with salt, a few grains cayenne, and one tablespoon of finely chopped chives. Fill tomatoes with mixture, piling it moundlike above tomato. Pipe mayonnaise around the base of tomato, surround tomato with well bleached feathery chicory leaves. Sprinkle with paprika and serve. Equal parts of domestic Roquefort and cottage cheese may be used in this salad with pleasing results.

Many calls come for wheel chairs and are readily responded to. May we not hope that this appeal from our soldier will meet with like success?

They Are Hungry.

"I wish to report what I consider a most needy case, Mr. C., a man ill with cancer, and who the doctor says, has but a few weeks to live. His family has no clothing and no food, and is behind in the rent. Their need is great and pressing. Mr. C. is a painter and decorator, but is of course unable to work. There are six children, the oldest 10 and the youngest 7 months. Mrs. C. is not physically able even if she had the time to leave these babies and go out to work, so you see what a really desperate case it is.

Collies for All.

"Some time ago a thoroughbred collie was offered through your column. You stated that there would be a great many who would like to have the dog. If you will send me the names of the disappointed ones, I will see that those who have a suitable place to keep a dog are given an opportunity to secure a thoroughbred pedigreed and registered collie without charge. The dogs I offer are from imported exhibition stock. They are from collie kennels whose owners have gone to war. People can help these soldiers more by giving good homes to these dogs than by sending them food or clothing.

"X. Y. Z."

This is a splendid offer. Those who were disappointed the last time have the chance now to own a fine collie.

Harrisville Ends Long Pastorate to Take Up New Work

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

AFTER an unusual pastorate of nineteen years the Rev. Lars Harrisville has resigned as pastor of St. Paul's English Lutheran church, North Washtenaw avenue and Hirsch street, in order to become field secretary of the Lutheran Deaconess home and hospital, 1138 North Leavitt street. He will begin his new work the middle of October. The Rev. O. Ingoldstad, professor in the Lutheran Bible college, will immediately become acting pastor of the church after the departure of Pastor Harrisville.

Eleven years ago THE TRIBUNE described the unique methods of Pastor Harrisville in erecting a church and parsonage building with a minimum of cash expenditure and a maximum of labor by asking for contributions of material instead of cash.

He received seventy-two carloads of material in carload lots, more than 900 firms and individuals contributing. Among the contributions were 65,000 feet of lumber from Chicago firms and four carloads from southern Illinois, three cars of cement, seven cars of crushed stone, thirty tons of steel and iron, forty-five kegs of nails, sixteen cars of Bedford stone, and a like proportion of other material. The men of the church worked with their pastor from 8 to 11 o'clock on every available evening. The result was the erection of a property now valued at $80,000. The first sermon Pastor Harrisville preached to his congregation nineteen years ago he preached to eight persons including himself and wife.

At a recent meeting of the church he was unanimously invited to remain longer as pastor, but he declined on the plea he could do a larger and more useful work in raising an endowment for the hospital and increasing the number of deaconesses. There are 2,000 congregations of the United Lutheran synod supporting the home and hospital.

Pastor Harrisville was born in Chicago. His only other pastorate was in Sioux City, Iowa, where he worked for ten years before beginning his last pastorate at St. Paul's church, Chicago.

The Albany Park Presbyterian church is now holding its services in the hall, 3315 Lawrence avenue. The Rev. Albert S. Nickless, the pastor, will preach today his first after-vacation sermon.

The Y. M. C. A., in issuing its call for 1,000 women to go over seas to work among the expeditionary forces, presents a stern appeal when it says, "They must be willing to wash dishes and scrub as well as stand long hours selling chocolate, cigaretes, and biscuits."

The general conference of the United Evangelical church will be held in York, Pa., the first week in October. The general Sunday school and Keystone League of Christian Endeavor convention which usually precedes the meeting of the general conference will not be held owing to war conditions.

Chaplain A. D. Thibodeau

Dr. Thibodeau, for the last three years pastor of the Cuyler Avenue Methodist Episcopal church, Ontario street and Cuyler avenue, Oak Park, left Chicago Aug. 16 for overseas, having been appointed a chaplain with the rank of first lieutenant in the regular army. A letter received by his wife indicates he now is on the ocean or just landed in France.

Dr. Thibodeau was graduated at Northwestern university and Garrett Biblical institute, Evanston, and before coming to Chicago was pastor at Pierre, S. D., where he had the governor of the state as one of his church members. His first pastorate in Chicago was at the Sheridan Road church, going from there to Cuyler Avenue, Oak Park. He received the degree of D. D. from two different colleges, one of them the Dakota Wesleyan.

The Cuyler Avenue church will be served until the meeting of the Rock River conference in October by the Rev. W. J. Libberton, D. D., a retired minister and a veteran of the civil war. A new pastor will then be appointed by Bishop W. A. Quayle.

Next Sunday at the 11 o'clock high mass the new St. Clement's church, at Orchard street and Deming place, of which the Rev. Mgr. F. A. Rempe, V. G., is pastor, will be dedicated. His Grace the Most Rev. George W. Mundelein will officiate at the dedication, and the sermon will be preached by the Rt. Rev. E. M. Dunne, bishop of Peoria. After the dedication confirmation will be administered to the children and adults of the parish. On Sunday, Sept. 15, St. Clement's service flag, containing 135 blue stars and two gold ones, will be dedicated. St. Clement's church is of Byzantine style and will be one of the architectural ornaments of Chicago.

The Rev. R. N. Miller, pastor of St. Stephen's Methodist Episcopal church, One Hundred and Thirteenth and State streets, has been elected to the chair of sociology and applied Christianity in Cornell college, Mount Vernon, Ia., and will terminate his pastorate with the meeting of the Rock river conference Oct. 2. Dr. Miller is a graduate of Illinois Wesleyan university, Bloomington, and Garrett Biblical institute, Evanston, and the University of Chicago. He holds the degrees of bachelor of science, master of arts, bachelor of sacred theology, and doctor of philosophy. He has led in the payment of a church debt of $10,000 during the last two years. He had charge of the survey made by the Wabash Avenue Methodist Episcopal church of the First ward and was assisted by thirty workers, the survey resulting in an exposure of vice conditions and political misrule which at the time was widely commented on in the press.

The Rev. Howard C. Ackerman, professor of Old Testament literature, Nashotah House, Wisconsin, will preach today in the St. Paul's by the Lake Protestant Episcopal church. Next Sunday the Rev. Hugh M. McWhorter of St. Andrew's church, Downer's Grove, will preach. The Rev. Henry Neal Hyde, the rector, is visiting his former home in Syracuse, N. Y. The church school will open Sept. 15 on the occasion of the return of the rector.

The Rev. William A. Brown, pastor of the Auburn Park Congregational church, has enlisted in the naval reserves, but expects to fill the pulpit of his church during September. A patriotic meeting will be held in the church Sunday evening, Sept. 22, which will be addressed by Miss Ada Ward, who will speak on "Life in the Trenches." She spent nearly two years in work with the English army in France. A trustee meeting will be held tomorrow evening marking the beginning of another church year.

The Chicago archdiocese has given ten priests to the army chaplaincy, and others are in preparation. The priests who have received their commissions already are: The Rev. James E. O'Brien, formerly assistant at Presentation church; the Rev. L. Frawley, formerly assistant at the Church of St. Thomas the Apostle; the Rev. B. Tarskey, formerly assistant at Visitation church; the Rev. Edward Dankowski, formerly assistant at St. Edmund's church, Oak Park; the Rev. M. Nealis, formerly assistant at St. Charles Borromeo church; the Rev. Frank Murphy, formerly assistant at St. Agnes' church; the Rev. John Campbell, formerly assistant at St. Joachim's church; the Rev. Burke, formerly of St. Ambrose church, has been commissioned a lieutenant in the United States navy.

Heeney, assistant at St. Mary's church, Joliet; the Rev. J. B. Lauermann, assistant at St. Philomena's church; the Rev. M. Cummings, assistant at Corpus Christi church; the Rev. Leo Hartke, assistant at Precious Blood church, and the Rev. Edward McNally, assistant at St. Anne's church.

My Most Embarrassing Moment.

Real Rude.

While I was riding in a street car two milk wagons happened to collide on the tracks. The milk, which was in cans, spilled into the street. A stout woman who was in the car stepped off to witness the affair. I followed suit and remarked, "O, what a waste!" She turned and, glaring, said, "Sir, mind your own business." I. S.

In Her Sleep.

My sister and I, who sleep together, have formed a habit of always falling asleep holding each other's hand. The other evening, after a very strenuous day at the office I fell asleep in the elevated, and woke to find everybody laughing at me, as I was tightly grasping the hand of the man sitting next to me, a perfect stranger. His uncomfortable attitude was almost enough to make even me, in my embarrassment, laugh out loud, but I did not. I left the train at the next stop, although I was miles from my home station. J. H. T.

Sister Poked Him.

My most embarrassing moment occured when I was about twenty years of age. At that time we had several young men working for us during the busy season of harvesting. One fellow was very attentive to me.

After refusing him several dates in which he was very persistent, I became disgusted and told my sister that I thought him the softest thing I had ever seen.

My little sister, about four years of age, hearing the conversation, was rather puzzled, and when he came in for dinner she went up to him and poked him with her finger and looked at me and said, "Why, he isn't soft."

Was I embarrassed? J. F.

Spilled the Smokes.

One day while motoring my husband's coat was hanging on the robe rail beneath mine, and as a matter of convenience he unknown to me placed a package of cigarets in my pocket instead of his own. The next day while riding on a crowded elevated train, in removing my gloves from my pocket, a package of cigarets came with them and spilled on the car floor. My embarrassment was exceedingly great. "Two in the Attic."

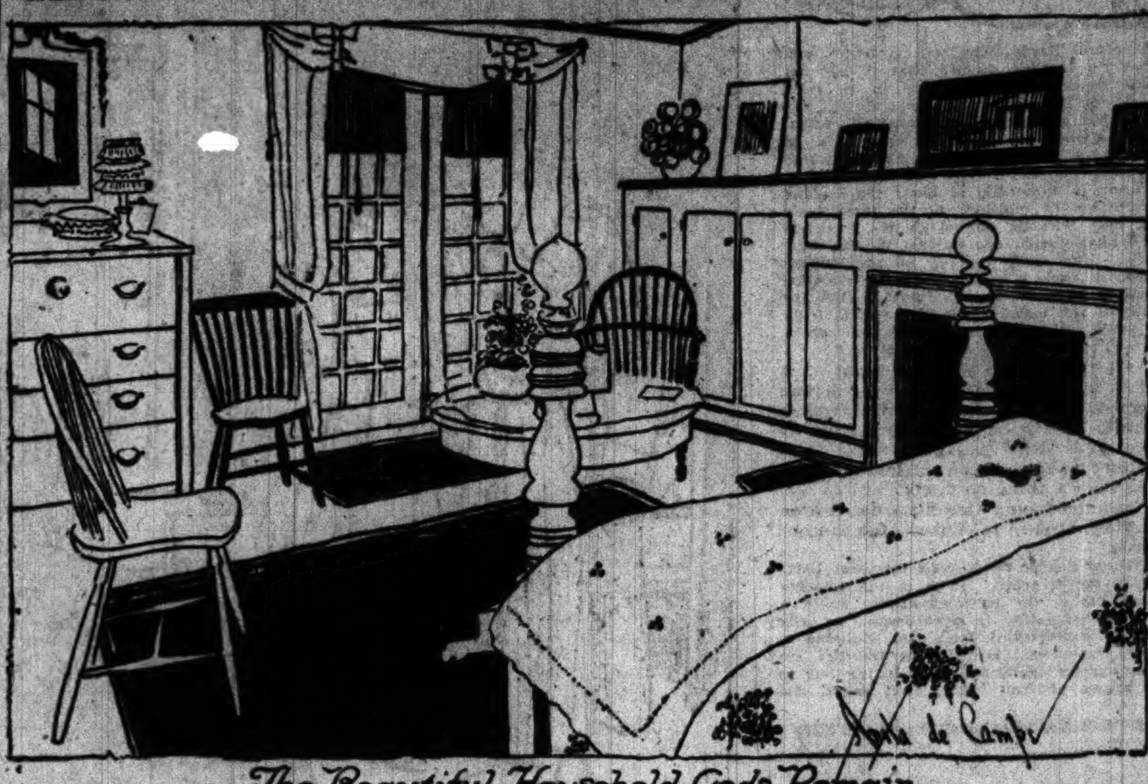
My little boy and I went to the theater the other evening. I intended to buy two tickets for the balcony, and, not thinking what I said, I asked for two tickets for the attic. Seeing every one around me laughing, I felt embarrassed, you can be sure. A woman came up to me and said, "You must be housecleaning." MRS. A. P.

The HOME HARMONIOUS

by Anita de Campi



Anita de Campi

The Beautiful Household-Gods Remain

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

IN an old New England village the chatter pies love to tell about a Spartan spinster who was so exceedingly and excessively neat that she scrubbed out the honorable stove pipe every Monday. And this was long before the nation was seized with prophylactic, antiseptic, sanitary housekeeping! It was also in the good old microbic days, when one layer of wall paper was pasted over another, creating in the region between the coziest of tenements for germs and germesses.

There is no doubt that the requirements of the home include cleanliness, but we must allow that the ease and comfort of human existence are considerably dampened by constant dusting, scrubbing, and rearrangement of furnishings. The male occupant is one of habits that are firmly staple, and has innate horror of house cleaning is backed up by logic. It disturbs him physically, spiritually, and mentally, and if any man resided in that shining house of the Spartan spinster we feel sure that he was always being chased by the demon broom or that he found his progress through life impeded by scrub pails and brushes.

A home, like a pretty woman, should wear an expression of repose. No matter how charming the draperies, how mirrorlike the mahogany, how beautiful the fall of lights and shadows, if there glares out that "house in order" look, one is not comfortable. Chairs must stay put. Books are to have only their outer titles read. The ash tray appears as stationary as the bath tub. If you dare to enter you don't dare move! There is no invitation; there is much verboten.

No living room is attractive that does not beckon you from every nook and corner to enjoy its comforts. Wherever the light is best, that is the place and spot for the big easy chair. If it isn't placed there it will be dragged there by the comfort seeking guest and the rugs pulled along the route. Books should not always be tucked away; their bright colored covers add to the cheer of the surroundings. Lamps, no matter how ornamental, do not fulfill their mission unless they are conveniently located and cast their yellow glow upon the book you are reading.

There are many women gifted with the art of knowing what to wear, and women of real culture, too, who are unable to impart this so necessary appearance of ease to their homes. They simply can't catch it, although the idea is not at all elusive, as it is based on the simplest rules of convenience. If they arrange the living room, it is to place a chair here, a table there, with a wide stretch of No Man's land between, through which one must travel to pick up the evening paper and to put it back again.

The Grouch finds his easy chair at one end of the room and his cigaret taboret at the other; if he gets the two and himself all nicely assembled together, there is a feminine sigh signifying that the work of restoration will be exhausting. The Grouch is only teaching the Grouch's wife how to arrange the furniture. It must be a sad business being a husband.

If one needs nothing more than space, four walls and furniture, then the gaunt, bleak boarding house parlor supplies the need. The demand is for more than that; there must be ideas and ideals.

A blossoming plant, placed in the sunlight on the window sill, contributes a glowing tenderness that the choicest piece of art cannot surpass. A canary, which expresses a real philosophy because he either sings or keeps silent, furnishes a certain solace to a world-weary heart. The "noble house dog" that tracks in the mud and perhaps contributes a flea now and then as his donation to the household equipment, forms a picture of friendliness and watchfulness as he stretches before the hearth. A woman's sewing basket lying upon the library table is no blemish, but an ornament, significant of the beautiful art of needlecraft and the utilization of leisure moments. Let the living room be a place in which one lives, works, and rests, not a stiffly arranged show place of house furnishings. The planning of it, like unto every other human effort, requires a thought or three or seven.

After all a woman's home is a part of her own composition. If she inclines toward cheap jewelry the chances are that her house will be filled with useless, meaningless ornaments, vases, candlesticks, and general bric-a-brac placed here and there with no regard for their surroundings. She shuffles the antique with the Michigan kind, and suffers not a soul pang. If she inclines toward the fluff-stuffs in dress she is likely to select perishable spindle legged chairs and to decorate the mantle piece with paper flowers. If she is lazy and luxuriant, you will observe a surplus of sofa pillows as well as dust. The prude expresses her prudability by selecting high backed chairs, prim little sofa effects, and everything else that brings to mind the old fashioned notion that nobody can be good who is in the least bit comfortbale.

In the matter of color values women are becoming more educated. The world's great designers and the originators of new stage effects have put forth a far reaching propaganda that is rapidly establishing itself. Emily Burbank says that color is the most marked expression of the spirit of the times. Heretofore we have been almost afraid of gay tones, a fear that is a natural inheritance handed down to us from our puritanical foremothers.

But when Bakst came along and translated his stupendous ideas in the presentation of the Russian ballet we found that our bogies were really fairies in disguise. And the result was that more than one woman brightened a dull, cheerless living room by placing a big rose colored armchair before the fireplace, or transformed a characterless dining room by draping the windows in fabrics of sunny yellow.

Coming to the matter of economy in house furnishings, no woman need be told that cheap rugs, hangings, and furniture are the most expensive. A woman who has been a money flinger all her life looked about her lovely home one day and said, "I wish I had bought more mahogany furniture. It is all I have to show for my squanderings. The gowns, flowers, the merry evenings; they are gone. But these beautiful household gods remain and pay me daily dividends."

It is so. A fine piece of furniture, of good lines, carved from the royalest trees of the great forests, becomes a thing beloved and treasured.

Answers to Inquiries.

N. F.: Keep two tones of pale buff throughout your rather dark rooms. This color will also go well with your oak wood work. Yes, by all means, remove grill between the dining room and living room. If the painting is large instead of hanging it in a gilt frame set it directly to the wall under a narrow wood molding. If you get wicker chairs for your living room select brown wicker ones and upholster them in linenized cretonne in colors repeating all of the other colors used in the room. Fortunately open bookcases are in fashion, so that you can accommodate your father's great number of books by having shelves built in at a small cost. Hall trees are not used; instead use only a mirror with a narrow table below it and one or two chairs against the wall. Do not use wall paper borders.

MRS. E. A. S.: You have hit upon the best tint for your wall paper. The blue rug, too, should look well. But I have my doubts about the old rose draperies. Unless they have a slightly bluish cast I fear they will not go well with the other things in the room.

J. M. C.: If you can find a remnant of Japanese brocade use this for your piano scarf, trimming it simply with a tassel at each corner. Use light buff color in your kitchen with cream colored paint. Am sending you marked samples of suitable and attractive wall paper.

CAMP STORIES CONTEST.

Your son, your brother, your husband, or your sweetheart in the service undoubtedly has told you some amusing incident that has occurred in his camp. Undoubtedly, too, there are ever so many stories originating in camp that are still untold. This contest is especially open to the soldier himself if he has a good camp story to tell. It is open also to every one who has been told a good camp story of actual happening. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Camp Stories Editor, Chicago Tribune.

He's from Missouri.

Company B was composed of nearly all rookies. One day the noncitizens were called out to make application to take out their naturalization papers. One of the boys was rather backward and was called forward the last one.

One of the officers asked him, "What is your name?"

"Charles Davis, sir."

"Do you wish to take out naturalization papers?"

"Yes, sir."

"Where were you born?"

"In Missouri, sir." D. M. G.

Wet and Muddy.

One day while the soldiers were hiking on a country road which was water in some places and mud in other places one of the soldiers said, "I'll be darned if I'm not getting tired of being a duck one minute and a mud turtle the next." E. T.

Ready to Celebrate.

I had a brother in training in Camp Taylor for several months. While there, when a bunch of rookies came in, one was assigned to his barracks with a number of instructions, one of which was that he had to be up for reveille at 5:30. His watch was thirty minutes fast, so the next morning at thirty minutes before getting up time he woke all the boys yelling "Hurry, fellers, it's time for jubilee." N. M.

Nobody Gets By.

My friend, who is an officer, told me this one: "There was a new and young lad on sentry duty, so I thought I would play a trick on him. It was dark when I approached the camp, and the sentry asked, 'Who goes there?' I answered, 'Nobody.' He, becoming excited at this answer, replied, 'Pass on.'" M. E. M.

After Deep Thought.

A young man had been put on sentry duty for the first time and was stationed near the barracks. It was not long before an officer came along. The young man suddenly forgot the challenge, "Who goes there?" and after a moment of deep thought, thinking he had remembered, called out loudly, "Look what's here!" D. B. D.

Scared to Death.

A friend of mine who is at Camp Jackson, South Carolina, wrote home and said that he was on guard duty one night and he halted a Negro passing through the camp. The Negro was scared to death and said, "O, mister, mister, don't shoot! I'll join the army tomorrow." E. E.

Suspicious of Him.

There seems to be no end to the number and kinds of questions asked of officers. The commander of a company of a Negro outfit at Camp Zachary Taylor, was called on the telephone recently by a Negress who inquired: "Ah wants t' know, am mah husban' allowed t' git lettahs from odder wimmin at dat camp?" J. O. F.

Standing Up.

Sergt. Mulcahey was a veteran who, on being asked just what it felt like to go "over the top," replied, "Sure, I felt as if ivery hair on my head was a band of music and all of them playin' 'Home, Sweet Home.'" F. T.

Unavoidably Detained.

I had two bids to a frat dance that promised to be good and sent one out to my brother at Camp Grant. The Saturday of the dance arrived without a word from Tom. The following Monday I received this postal:

"Dear Jack: I was very sorry that I couldn't go to the dance. I'll bet you had a good time. Hope I'll see you next week. As ever, TOM.

"P. S.—I was in the guard house Saturday night." D. V.

Plenty of Color.

Several soldiers were standing on a street corner talking when a "loudly" dressed girl passed. One of them turned to his comrades and said: "Here, boys, salute the colors; there goes plenty of 'em." C. K.

WHAT ARE YOU DOING TO WIN THE WAR?

AN AMERICAN GIRL IN FRANCE.

MISS FELICITE OGLESBY, daughter of the late former governor, Richard J. Oglesby, who is serving the American fund for French wounded in France, has written interestingly of her work to her mother, Mrs. Richard J. Oglesby of Elkhart. Following are some extracts from three letters:

Mr. Gwinn sent for me toady and said they hoped I would go to Clermont-Ferrand in Auvergne to start a depot to receive and distribute supplies to different hospitals in a radius of 40,000 beds. I expect to go within a week to stay for some time, as I was told to buy a stove as soon as I arrived. I hear the place is lovely. I imagine the hospitals in the vicinity are for the badly wounded men who are evacuated from the hospitals near the front, also for the reformes who are no longer to be soldiers and are returned to civil life. We are to give clothes to them.

Yesterday, July 14, the national holiday, was rainy. I went to the Bois to see the parade start off. There were hundreds of chairs with planks across where one bought standing room for 3 francs apiece, so we had a good view. First came the French, then the Americans (we are always given the place of honor). Our men looked splendid, but I am sorry to say the British looked finer, especially the 'devils in petticoats,' as the Boche calls the Highlanders, who kept a better line.

There were few bands. Ours had a drum major. One French regiment sang its regimental song; three lines of marching men would sing, then lines behind would answer antiphonal, very effective. Always whenever the "Marseillaise" is played so is "The Star Spangled Banner," and occasionally another nation's anthem, but not always. At the fête on the 14th toward the end "God Save the King" and "La Brabaconne" were played. We rented the Theatre of the Ambassadeurs, served the wounded soldiers beer, lemonade, orangeade, and ham sandwiches.

This morning I was up before 6 to go with Miss Worthington to the Gare d'Toreg, where she works every day. Four hundred of our wounded were evacuated from Neuilly to go to Vichy. I knew some of the marines and went to find them, speed them; sick as they were, they were smiling and cheerful, even the ones who were suffering, except one who looked as though he would not last through the day. The worst cases were put on the top tier with one or two stretchers slid underneath. The men have no seats. They sit on the stretcher on the floor. If there is only one above his head there is height enough; otherwise he sits on the floor. Most of them play cards, their only amusement, but none of them criticises. One said, "We have learned patience over here."

I shall always regret not having been a nurse. There aren't enough, they all overwork, and the boys say they are wonderful to them. They say it is no use to kick in the army, so the hospital seems heavenly. We have had a splendid victory. I think the Boche soldiers are beginning to get enough. Our soldiers are fighting to win and end the war. Several told me the Boche cried out loud like children when they crossed the Marne.

Mme. Dumont, the wife of the editor of one of the newspapers here, came to see me; as usual, I was out. She has been in deep mourning since her nephew was killed a year ago, but now that our troops are here she has thrown her house open, receives on Saturdays, and is doing everything she can for our officers. The women go to our hospitals to take the soldiers flowers. They are doing all they can, but it is difficult now to help their own. In the beginning all the women adopted godsons, but now, as my landlady graphically explained, every house has its own wounded. A parcel of food that used to cost 4 or 5 francs now costs 10 or more, and things are scarce.

Big War Garden.

My brother and I rented a lot near our home and had it plowed. Then I planted it, with my brother's help when he came back from the office each day. All the vegetables are doing splendidly, and we hope to have enough vegetables to feed a family of six for the winter. Besides tending to my garden to help Uncle Sam I have also earned my first cross at the Red Cross rooms for working thirty-six hours and hope to get the second cross in a few weeks. I am saving thrift stamps and have three war savings stamps. ANN D.

A Soldier's Mother.

I am proud to say I am the mother of a boy who is now in France. Two days ago I received a message stating he had received an injury which will cause his foot to be amputated. Of course, I feel badly, but something within me seems to make me want to do my all now.

I spend three hours each week at Red Cross work, which consists of making surgical dressings, etc., and hope my son will wear one bandage his mother prepared.

I am president of a knitting club, spending five hours there every Saturday afternoon. I am raising a garden. I sold $1,300 worth of Liberty bonds in the third drive. W. R.

Organized Children's Club.

I am only a high school girl, but I find that I can do much towards helping win the war. I work in a cafeteria during noon hours, and some-times make as high as 75 cents a dollar. This money is invested in thrift and war savings stamps.

I go to summer school in the evenings, this enabling me to school in three years. highest ambition, as I want to for the government when I school.

Out of my old dresses, hats, bons, I concoct new things them instead of buying new releasing labor that would making these garments.

In my own home I try using the substitutes, and wheatless, meatless, and menus. This releases mother war work.

Every afternoon I work at the Red Cross and make belts, surgical dressings, shot-bags, els. I also knit for the soldiers, ing socks, helmets, wristlets, sweaters.

I organized a club for small and they collect tin cans, per, and cold cream jars for Cross salvage. Seven quilts and wash-cloths have been knitted little ones for the soldiers. E. L.

AMONG US MORTALS
THE CIRCUS COMES TO TOWN

By W. E. Hill

We paid our prompt boy Friday, and Saturday morning he was drafted—"ain't that the limit?" Bessie, the acrobat, is sympathetic, but adds that it is just what you might expect from a prompt boy.

A hot day is no time to kid the fat lady freak and expect to get away with it.

The side show barker describes "most marvellous assemblage of extraordinary and remarkable monstrosities!"

Charley's cap has fallen through the seats, and Aunt Daisy, who believes a parasol is made to poke with, is trying to get the usher's attention. Charley is inwardly making a solemn vow never to go out with Aunt Daisy again.

"Now, Georgette, you stay right here by Mama, or I'll go right home and leave you!"

The queen of the ring goes back to the dressing tent.

News of the Shows and Showmen.

"THE COUNTRY COUSIN," the Booth Tarkington-Julian Sweet comedy, indorsed by President Wilson and former President Roosevelt (one vocally, and the other by letter), comes to the Blackstone for a limited engagement tonight. Miss Alexandra Carlisle, the transplanted and thoroughly Americanized English actress, who created the leading rôle in New York, is now starred in the piece.

The play itself represents an attempt on the part of the authors to contrast the more wholesome and the saner ideals of conduct which prevailed in this country a score of years ago with those which prevailed in the larger cities just prior to America's entrance into the war. A young American girl, a citizeness of a small middle western city, is the exampler of the older ideals, and is pitted in the play against a group of so-called "smart society" people in a summer resort along the Atlantic coast. The piece is "The Ohio Lady" vastly tinkered with and revamped until it now scarcely resembles that failure.

Miss Carlisle was last seen in Chicago as leading woman for E. H. Sothern. The supporting company which is headed by Alfred Lunt, includes Julia Stuart, Genevieve Tobin, Jack Crosby, Grace Hampton, Albert Tavernier, Helen Holcomb, Nini Herbert, Ralph Newman, Louis Ancker, George Seybolt, and Phil Heege.

Miss Ina Claire will be seen for the first time as a star in a straight dramatic rôle in Chicago when "Polly with a Past" opens tomorrow night at Powers' for a limited engagement. Mr. David Belasco took Miss Claire from the musical comedy stage because of an extraordinarily clever impersonation she gave of Miss Frances Starr in the 1915 Ziegfeld "Follies." He deduced that if she could so keenly imitate the facial expressions, the gestures, and the interpretative cadences of Miss Starr, Miss Jane Cowl, Miss Billie Burke, and Miss Ethel Barrymore—which she did in the "Follies"—she must be a pretty good actress herself.

When "Polly with a Past" was produced in New York it was an instant hit, and it ran for 327 consecutive performances. Associated with Miss Claire in the cast are Cyril Scott, H. Reeves-Smith, Herbert Yost, Thomas Reynolds, George Stuart Christie, Miss Louise Galloway, Miss Adah Sherman, Miss Betty Linley, Miss Inez [illegible], Francis Verdi, and Lloyd Neal.

"Polly with a Past" is concerned with the adventures of Polly Shannon, a minister's daughter from East Gilead, O., who starts for Paris and never gets there. She is induced to impersonate a fictitious vampire for the sake of winning for a friend the love of an unresponsive woman. As the enchantress she visits his home, running there the gantlet of snubs from the women and enduring the advances of the men until finally the truth is disclosed. Miss Claire is given many opportunities for her ability at impersonation, not the least effective of which is her simulation of deep purple wickedness. The authors of the play are George Middleton and Guy Bolton.

William Hodge opened at the Studebaker last night in "A Cure for Curables," dramatized by Earl Derr Biggers and Lawrence Whitman from a story by Corra Harris. Instead of the drawling Southerner of "The Man from Home," Mr. Hodge is seen as a young Kentucky physician who is heir to a sanitarium for those opulent enough to afford cases of "nerves" and other stigmata of the exemplars of conspicuous leisure.

A clause in the will states that the young physician must effect ten cures within thirty days or the property will revert to other hands. A handicap against this fleet ministration ensues when the patients threaten to walk out in a body on the insistence of the new doctor that a requisite number of doses of prunes will cure each of them. Of Mr. Hodge's handling of the situation is made the comedy of the evening.

Fred Stone in Charles Dillingham's production of the musical extravaganza "Jack o' Lantern" opened last night at the Colonial for an indefinite engagement. In many respects "Jack o' Lantern" is of the same type as "The Wizard of Oz," "The Red Mill," "The Lady of the Slipper," and "Chin-Chin," in the success of which the partnership of the late William Montgomery and Mr. Stone were indelibly associated. The extravaganza is in two acts and seven scenes, in which Mr. Stone "goes it on his own" without his former foil and has much scope for his capability as an entertainer and as an athlete. There are 100 in the cast, including a group of ice skaters from St. Moritz, the six Brown brothers and their saxophone band, Miss Aleen Crater, Miss Helen Falconer, Miss Violet Zell, Miss Helen Leist, Miss Teresa Valerio, Miss Margaret Irving, Bunny Wendell, Miss Lydia Scott, the Hoy family, Oscar Ragland, Roy Hoyer, Charles Mast, Nat Nazarro, and Miss Alice Earl.

Another opening for tonight is "Seven Days' Leave," the military and naval drama which so pleased Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels in Washington that he saw it twice and gave it his indorsement as an inspiration to patriotism. This entertainment of spies, plots, and counterplots comes to the Garrick after successes in Canada, Australia, London, South Africa, New Zealand, and New York. It has to do with the theft by German spies of a British officer's plans for a submarine detector. At the climax the officer's sweetheart and a German female spy plunge into the sea in a race for a buoy from which the Huness means to signal a nearby U-boat. The submersible is blown to bits by the shells of an American cruiser before the eyes of the spectators. Numerous sailors and soldiers appear in the scenes, and the whole show is in keeping with the Drury Lane melodrama traditions—thrills, intrigues, love, comedy, and more thrills.

The author of "Seven Days Leave" is William Howard, himself an English actor of melodramas. Among those in the cast are: Miss Jean Stuart, Miss Suzanne Jackson, Edwin Forsberg, William J. Kelly, Bryce Kennedy, Miss Florence Eldridge, Miss Alice Belmore, Miss Pauline Hutchins, J. Irving White, H. Cooper Cliffe, Sidney Bracey, Frank Hollins, Reginald Carrington, Russell Johnstone, Frank Bixby, Benjamin A. Haggin, Everett Shim, Charles Latham, Davis Hutchins, Miss Doris Cliffe, and Miss Margie Bolland.

"Three Faces East" is already a success of solid proportions in New York and it seems to have every chance to duplicate the record of "A Tailor-Made Man" at the Cohan and Harris by remaining from August to August. In the meantime a company is being organized for Chicago, with Henry Vogel in the leading rôle. Vogel, it may or may not be remembered, won general approval as the German general in "Arms and the Girl" two or three seasons ago.

Winchell Smith and John L. Golden's new comedy "Lightnin'," written by Winchell Smith and Frank Bacon, had its premier in New York, last Monday night. Of it Mr. Burns Mantle, critic for the Evening Mail, says: "'Lightnin' at the Gaiety is a worthy successor to 'Turn to the Right.' It is another clean, humorous, human and wholesome comedy, without so much as a suggestion of war themes and provides Frank Bacon with a good actor's triumph—a fine thing for the theater and a fine thing for the actor."

"It may be said," writes Mr. Jay Kaufman from New York, "without fear of successful or unsuccessful contradiction that business in the New York theaters is all that could be expected—and perhaps a trifle more. This condition is due to two main facts—first, the presence in town of several huge successes and a variety of smaller successes; second, tendency of the weather to refrain from being over oppressive. One more success of the sensational variety was added to the roster during the last week, when "Lightnin'" came to town. It is no great secret that the various tryouts of this play did not inspire its entrepreneurs with wild confidence, and that as late as 10 o'clock on the night of the opening the piece was regarded by the management as at least a quasi-failure. John L. Golden, as a matter of fact, made elaborate plans on Tuesday morning to distribute free tickets for the second performance and it was not until he had made all arrangements that he learned that the lower house was already sold out.

"The receipts of the opening week were in excess of the amount taken during the first week of 'Turn To the Right'—cited because it was produced under similar circumstances at the same theater—and indications now are that the play will be one of the great moneymakers of the season.

"The managers are predicting dire things for the theater when the fourth Liberty loan gets under way on Sept. 28, and even direr ones when the 20 per cent war tax is imposed. In the meantime, however, all concerned are doing well and there is even a possibility that the theater will be able to worry along through another season."

Herewith the new openings for next week in New York: Tom Wise will come to the Criterion with "Mr. Barnum"; Stuart Walker will install his "Jonathan Makes a Wish" in the Princess; "The Unknown Purple" will be seen at the Lyric; John [illegible] will start his repertory season at the Belmont; "The Maid of the Mountains" will reveal its wonders at the Casino, and the new Central theater will be opened with "Forever After," the Alice Brady opus. Five of these six events are at present scheduled for next Monday night, as is the managerial custom, but it is probably that three of them will think better of it when they find that the others are standing adamant.

Miss Alma Tell has in the current New York production of "Eyes of Youth" the rôe excellently acted by Miss Illington at the Princess in Chicago. Miss Tell first commanded notice in "The Squab Farm."

Rumor has it that the Messrs. Lee and Jake Shubert do not speak to each other and that the Messrs. Mark Klaw and Abraham Erlanger are similarly at a disadvantage in conducting their joint enterprises.

A figure in "A Cure for Curables," it is whispered, represents Charles M. Schwab more or less disguisedly. The part modeled upon the ironmaster will be played by Brigham Royce.

"The Blue Pearl," a mystery play by Anne Crawford Flexner, comes to the Garrick in October. The play was so well received in New York that another company is being organized for Chicago.

Granville Barker's latest venture is an adaptation of a poetical play by Sacha Guitry, son of the great French actor. It will undoubtely be produced on London during the present season and probably will be seen in this country.

The new Hatton comedy, "The Walk-Offs," is on its way to the Morosco and still there comes no explanation of the meaning of the title. The play probably will be seen in New York soon with Fania Marinoff in one of the leading rôles.

Raymond Hitchcock will resume work in Boston Monday with a considerably altered version of "Hitchy Koo." Leon Errol, as previously stated, will be among those missing, and so will Irene Bordoni. The latter is said to have been corralled by John D. Williams, who contemplates a dip into musical comedy.

Arnold Daly has three plays under consideration and will presently be seen in one of them.

The Messrs. Shubert announce that hereafter the Garrick theater will be known as the Shubert-Garrick and the Princess theater as the Shubert-Princess. This step is taken in order to identify these two places of amusement with the name of the producing firm of which the Messrs. Lee and J. J. Shubert are the heads. The further fact that there are some moving picture houses bearing the names of Garrick and Princess is another reason for thus distinguishing these two particular theaters.

Included in the many changes in the Klaw & Erlanger theaters are plans for new executive offices for Harry J. Powers and staff, operating the Illinois, Colonial, Blackstone, and Powers' theaters. This will also be the general office in the west for Klaw & Erlanger, Charles Frohman, Inc., David Belasco, Charles Dillingham, F. Ziegfeld Jr., and George C. Tyler.

Miss Florence Courtney, one of the Courtney sisters, purveyors of vocal ragtime at the Palace, is a war bride. Her husband, a captain in the American aviation service, is at the front. They met only recently, while he was in training at Lake Bluff.

Vaudeville Notes.

Miss Fritzi Scheff is to be a headliner in vaudeville this season and is soon to appear in Chicago.

Vaudeville patrons may now reminisce. Harry Jolson, brother of the noted Al, and himself a blackface comedian, is at the Palace this week. Years and years ago it was Jolson and Jolson, when the team was one of the headliners at the newly opened American Music hall. Still later the act was one of the hits at the Olympic when that theater was one of the big vaudeville houses. The component parts of the team drifted apart, but the brothers Jolson are now reunited in that Al is looking after the management and booking of his brother's act.

Miss Phyllis Neilson-Terry is returning to vaudeville. She will offer a scene from "Hamlet."

Miss Beth Lydy in "The Rainbow Girl."

Exposition Great Living Picture of Modern Warfare

"ALL set! Let's go!"

Amid the thunder of cannon, the crashing music of an enormous band, and the flutter of flags the curtain will rise tomorrow morning on the most remarkable living picture of war ever presented to a nation, the United States Government War exposition.

Rising as if by magic from the drab, uneven surface of Grant park, the exposition buildings, the booths for exhibits, the fighting tops at the entrance, the Shrine of Patriotism, the miniature Statue of Liberty, have all been erected and are ready.

Living up to its well known record for speed in doing things, Chicago has accomplished in three weeks that which usually demands six months for completion. Miles of trenches have been dug in No Man's land, with embrasures, listening posts, and ammunition dumps. This section, embracing eleven acres, is an exact reproduction of a famous French battlefield, done by the officers and men who planned and constructed the allied side in France and then captured the Hun side.

Stretching from Van Buren street to Harrison street are more than thirty solid carloads of trophies won in hard fought battles by American, Belgian, French, British, Canadian, and Italian soldiers and sailors.

Lest there be any possible uncertainty regarding the purpose and scope of the project, it may be said again that the exposition is a government activity of the United States, under the auspices of the committee on public information, with the active coöperation of Great Britain, France, Canada, Belgium and Italy. Its purpose is to inform the people, to bring the war home to them, to visualize the actuality of war to them, and to strengthen their resolve to support and sustain their boys—our boys—to the finish that will see Pershing dictating unconditional surrender at Potsdam.

Eminent soldiers and sailors, and dignitaries from each of the nations concerned, will be here as honored guests of the exposition. The most notable of these will be the Duke of Devonshire, governor general of Canada, accompanied by his staff and several cabinet ministers.

Gen. Paul Vignal, head of the French high commission in the United States, will be accompanied by Edouard de Billy, deputy high commissioner, and his staff.

Maj. Leon Osterrieth and staff will be the especial guests representing Belgium, together with representatives from the Belgian high commission to the United States.

Great Britain is sending a distinguished group of diplomats, soldiers, and sailors, every one of whom has won his spurs in hard fought battles.

CAMPANINI'S NEW TENORS

Alessandro Dolci John O'Sullivan

The Messrs. Dolci and Sullivan are new names high on Mr. Campanini's roster for the new season. The former, it seems from the management's bulletin, is to sing important romantic and lyric parts in the Italian répertoire, with an occasional invasion of the dramatic or robust field, also. He is young, and is come into notice in Italy since the war shut off our operatic intimacies with that country.

Mr. Sullivan comes from the Paris Opéra, where, further quoting the management, he took Muratore's place. He is to sing in both French and Italian pieces, with Samson, Otello, and Arnold in "William Tell" scheduled as among his parts in the Auditorium season.

MATTERS OF MUSIC

By Frederick Donaghey.

CARUSO wishes to sing in Chicago before his season in the Metropolitan Opera; and it is probable that he will be accommodated. He has not been here since the Chicago Opera was in the first fitful nights of clear articulation, and was made by Dippel, then the impresario, to seem regular by the importation for a few performances of the great tenor, Farrar, and Scotti. Soon he will have been twenty-five years on the stage, and for fifteen of them not only the principal tenor of the Metropolitan, but also the best-seller among all the male singers heard in the United States.

He is no longer sharing programs with Carolina White, although he started his singing season with her; those concerned in his welfare decided, after hearing her contributions to one of his bills, that she sounds better as his [illegible] in the films. If he come, he will, with urging, sing Cohan's "Over There."

The Metropolitan may add to its répertoire, for Caruso and Muzio, "La Forza del Destino," which has been kept in the storeroom for years because of its libretto: musically, it is not at all the least of Verdi. Alvaro is a great rôle for the tenor in the traditional manner of Italian opera: and that it "lies" for Caruso's range and tone is known to those who have heard the records he has made with excerpts from the piece. The part was, within the memory of many who were opera-goers in the 'eighties, high among the achievements of the great Italo Campanini, brother of the Auditorium's director.

Another revival planned to amplify the Metropolitan's de-Wagnered activities is of Von Weber's "Oberon." German opera? Y-e-s: in a way; and it is to be done with English text. "Oberon" was, if my data are right, an English opera in the beginning: the famous James Robinson Planché wrote the libretto, and the première, in 1826, was in London, with Von Weber conducting. One of the great overtures is that of "Oberon," as the clientèle of the Chicago Symphony should know through Mr. Stock's frequent and lovely use of it; and the opera further survives in the big aria for Rezia, "Ocean, Thou Mighty Monster," long a fixed item in the catalogue of sopranos addicted to the grand manner. Artur Bodansky, who remains one of the Metropolitan's conductors, has, for the revival, set the dialogue in recitative; and the revision of the libretto cuts it to seven scenes.

Galli-Curci is to open her season on Sunday night with a recital in Ocean Grove, N. J. She goes next month with Campanini for his three weeks' pre-Chicago tour, comes to the Auditorium for six weeks, and rejoins him for the New York and Boston engagements. All else of her season is concert and recital—a field in which, in [illegible] months, she is become the [illegible] successful singer.

[illegible], whose three one-act operas are to be heard this season in the United States, is doing a new piece with the French Revolution as background. Meanwhile, the international [illegible] of wartime have run against the American production of his "The Swallow," long ready.

Victor Herbert, who had repute as a cellist long before he wrote his first operetta, "Prince Ananias," recently [illegible], for a Red Cross concert, his vacation. Also, he served as George Hamlin's accompanist while the ex-[illegible] gave two songs with text by Herbert's celebrated grandfather, Samuel Lover.

RAVINIA'S delightful season ends tomorrow night with a repetition of "Butterfly" by the cast which has twice in recent weeks done so well for Puccini's beloved piece: Muzio and Braslau, who team perfectly as Cio-Cio-San and Suzuki, with Kingston and Marr. No other performance of the opera in years has had, in this neighborhood, such good casting in the four parts. Extras listed for the final performance are Mr. Marr's singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner" before the opera, and, after the first act, Mr. Rothier's effective use of the Marseillaise. The opera will be in three acts; and the 10:55 train for town will be held, if necessary, till 11:05.

"Faust" will be sung tonight by Miss Mason (for the first time this year as Marguerite), Miss Braslau, the Messrs. Harrold, Rothier, and Marr. A concert will be given tomorrow afternoon, but not today: this afternoon's entertainment will be of sports by the soldiers and sailors, with a contest between two regimental bands from Great Lakes.

Twenty-one operas are represented in the summer's forty-nine performances in Ravinia; and this is, to anybody who knows the work involved, a remarkable record. Few of the twenty-one were given entire; but the cutting there represents a compromise with time and stage-resources rather than with work. I am without doubt that Miss Muzio would have preferred to sing all of "The Jewels," and Miss Braslau an unedited "Carmen." And it is unlikely that the summer-night clientèle would regard the Auditorium versions as fitting or seasonal in the special circumstances of Ravinia. Nobody misses the second and the last acts of "Lucia"—or, if he note the omission, he is unquestionably glad of it.

Miss Muzio, in the list, sang twelve parts; Miss Braslau, ten—and both return to the Metropolitan better and more useful artists for the experience. Miss Garrison, too: her brief stay put Lakmé and Rosina into her ready list. I missed both; and those who didn't say they were bully. Miss Mason's return in the final fortnight made for some exquisite singing—notably in "Carmen," wherein her third-act aria was a lovely item: not a lonely one, as Friday's type made it.

At two of last week's performances I sat with a pro-consul of the Metropolitan; and he was candid in telling that he had known his fellow-townsmen to pay six dollars a seat for performances not so good as what he saw and heard in Ravinia.

Miss Braslau's second chance as Carmen, Friday night, kept the promises made by her first: here is just the voice for the deathless music; and she knows a great deal about the rôle in its other aspects. She seems to be in possession of more than any other young contralto in opera today.

The Washington Star thinks that the "present situation of Dr. Muck illustrates the value of the rest in music."

PICTURES ZANE GRAY STORY.

BY MABEL M'ELLIOTT.

THIS week at the Rose begins "Riders of the Purple Sage," with William Farnum as the Lassiter of Zane Grey's story. It is a Fox production, directed by Frank Lloyd.

Lassiter, you remember, went among the Mormons in search of his sister, Millie Erne, who had been forcibly carried off by an old bishop of the church. He was never able to find any trace of her, or of the man who took her, but remained a terror to the countryside, as he wandered about on his endless quest.

Mr. Farnum is one of the most likable western heroes we have. A crusader in spurs and sombrero, he is most happily adapted to play the high, white avenger.

The picture finishes with Lassiter, Jane, and little Fay resigning themselves to existence in the sealed valley. How they are to obtain food and sustenance the subtitles do not tell us, but there is to be a sequel to the story.

At least a full reel out of the generous seven is devoted to glimpses of riders up hill, down dale, across the sage brush country. It is a lovely country indeed, but too much scenery is a dangerous thing, when one is focusing all the mighty forces of one's intellect on the story itself. So be sure to have your nimblest wits about you when you go to see it.

There is an excellent supporting company. Marc Robbins is the sanctimonious old sinner, Dyer, who rules his polygamous flock with an iron hand, and Charles Clary, disguised in a powerful beard, has been dowered with the thankless role of Oldring.

Mary Merch, a mild and madonna-like person, plays Jane Witherstein, in love with Lassiter. Katherine Adams is the masked rider, who, unmasked, displays lovely features and quantities of curling locks.

"America's Answer," the second of the government war pictures put out by the committee of public information, will be shown in Chicago at Orchestra hall for a limited engagement, beginning Sept. 9. This picture, like the first of the series, "Pershing's Crusaders," was made by United States signal corps photographers, by direction of Gen. John J. Pershing. It is purely a governmental enterprise and no individual has any profit interest in the production.

The outstanding object of showing these pictures to the public is to show to them just how the great sums of money which have been raised by taxation, Liberty loans, and thrift stamps have ben spent, and the great work that has been accomplished by Americans in France.

Among other things it shows the three mile dock, built on swamp land by American soldiers and now being used to expedite the landing of the troops and of the stupendous volume of supplies regularly coming across the seas from the United States. In addition to this it shows many of the other works accomplished "over there," pictures of happenings that could be secured only by the government.

The work of the signal corps of photographers is not confined to the taking of pictures for exhibition. Thousands of feet of film recording the events of the war are photographed for the archives of the United States and will be preserved for the benefit of posterity.

It is proposed by the committee of public information to put out one of these films for exhibition from time to time and "America's Answer" is the second of the series.

WAR AIMS, PEACE TERMS, AND STEEL.

Modern civilization and modern warfare are alike dependent on coal and steel. Any belligerent nation that was deprived of these essentials would quickly succumb; she could not make guns or ships or aeroplanes and her means of transportation would be reduced to the most primitive devices. A militaristic nation, a nation which seeks to maintain a place in the sun by the use of force, will naturally seek to obtain control of the sources of coal and iron and of the other materials necessary to make steel, such as limestone and manganese.

Few persons realize the extent to which Germany has brought under her domination the coal and iron fields of Europe. Mr. Samuel A. Benner, vice president of the Federal Export corporation, who is credited with expert knowledge of the world's steel supply, has recently published an article in the Magazine of Wall Street which vividly illustrates the commanding position Germany now occupies with respect to the steel production of Europe and the world.

With the conquest of Belgium, northern France, Poland, and southern European Russia, Germany has obtained control of nearly all the coal supply of continental Europe and 68 per cent of its steel capacity, the latter being capable of indefinite expansion. The total steel capacity under the control of the central powers on July 1 is given as 34,500,000 tons a year, which represents 33.8 per cent of the world's total production. Before the war the annual production of the central powers was only 22,300,000 tons.

Mr. Benner's comment on this situation is pertinent:—

"Among the expressions in the public press of the central empires that have been escaping from time to time to the outside world we often see reference made to the supreme importance of raw materials and that no basis of peace can be acceptable to the central empires unless full provision is made for their control absolutely of such raw materials. We can be sure that the paramount importance of coal, iron ore, limestone, and manganese is thoroughly appreciated by the enemy peoples, especially those of the two central empires. After four years of costly war they have succeeded in obtaining possession of the coal and manganese of continental Europe and of the nearest deposits thereto of iron ore and limestone. It is the height of fatuity to think that our enemies will now surrender these hard won spoils without further and long sustained efforts to retain them."

It is obvious that if Germany is allowed to keep her conquests she will possess the essential materials with which to make her military machine more and more formidable, while at the same time the rest of Europe, deprived of immediate access to coal and possessing a much smaller steel capacity, would be placed at Germany's mercy. Modern wars are wars of steel, and modern militarism, in order to sustain itself, must have steel in abundance.

We are engaged in a war to crush militarism, and in pursuing this object it is just as important to force Germany to give up conquered territories for the reason that they afford great resources of coal and iron as for any other reason.

It is not necessary to dwell upon the importance of these essentials in times of peace. But the great advantage that would accrue to commercial Germany if she could maintain her present control of the steel capacity of Europe is obvious.

STREET SOLICITATION FOR WAR FUNDS.

Every day of every week at most seems to bring a new form of street solicitation, and apparently there is no end in sight. Before the war this multiplication of "drives" and "campaigns" would have caused acute annoyance. We recall the time when the city council had to legislate in the matter of tag days.

In the present emergency when funds are needed for so many war purposes street solicitation has been found effective because it affords little chance for the shirker to escape. He finally succumbs in sheer self-defense.

The question may be raised, however, as to whether street solicitation is not being somewhat overdone. When every sort of war charity or war activity is permitted to collect money on the streets it is clear that the more important ones will suffer by the very multiplicity of the demands. Some of these charities are content with even the smallest coin and the standard of contribution is thus proportionately lowered. There is also developing a kind of indifference to all appeals made on the street.

The State Council of Defense might well consider placing greater restrictions on the use of the streets for soliciting funds.

SEDITION AND THE MAN NEXT DOOR.

Coyly the ostrich pokes its nose into the sand and wiggles a negligent pin feather in celebration of its security. Thus the propagandist. Blandly he wags the smallest American flag he can buy and under the skirt of his coat is a bomb of seditious flapdoodle which all save him may see and understand.

The disclosures by the postoffice officials who have softly investigated 2,000,000 obstructive, seditious and incriminating letters might suggest to the most stupid that the man next door has, in a manner of speaking, his eye peeled most of the time. It should be apparent that while the head is in the sand there is offered for immediate and violent castigation a surface both prominent and attractive to the public boot. Pacifism thrives only indifferently in our present temperature, sedition is becoming such a bore that it is apt to anger us before long, and radicalism doesn't even amuse us any more.

America always has been tolerant of the intellectual trickster in about the same degree as a doting mother considers that a certain amount of mud is good for her son so long as he takes a shower afterwards. But the I. W. W., the pacifist, and the obtuse thinking contingent react to soap as intelligently as a fish to the Sahara. They don't want to be nice. They will be crafty. They will whisper sedition. They will foment trouble—all for themselves. It isn't much trouble to the patriot, for with more than a year of experience he has learned to observe. He is the man next door. And if the anti-American ostrich will take his head out of the sand for a moment he will see what a laugh he has encouraged.

THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

When a British or French statesman speaks of the proposed league of nations he does so with a frank or furtive suggestion of mental reservation which indicates more politeness towards the idea than belief in it.

It is not morally possible in these times for even a European statesman to say exactly what his knowledge of human experience and his ideas of human prospects would lead him to say of the extreme hopes from which the league of nations comes as an alluring scheme.

Europe is on its guard against the altruism which builds such façades upon temples of air for the housing of the league of nations, and if the United States were, then the rearrangement of methods for the treatment of human problems might proceed without the fear that some credulous nation will be hurt.

That credulous nation will be the United States. Its idealistic belief in perfectibility will mislead it. If it is not on its guard it will put its faith in a machine. It is a mechanistic nation. It believes that a machine can be built to do anything. Machines can be built to do many things, but no machine ever fully and completely regulated human ambitions, emotions, aspirations, and appetites.

We have implicit belief that to do a thing it is necessary first to appoint a committee. The league of nations is a committee. In American conception the nations of the world having the problem of maintaining peace and citizens of a ward having a problem of collecting garbage are on the same level of perplexity. They meet and appoint a committee. The committee will find a mechanism of performance. Everybody goes home knowing that the mechanism will work.

Lloyd George in a recent speech suggested that there are now two leagues of nations—one the British empire, the other the allies against Germany. The British premier bowed before the idea of the league of nations. Statesmen all do that these days before they suggest the reservations and conditions. In the reservations and conditions are found their real thought—that is not found in the formal indorsement which they give the idea.

There is also another league which Lloyd George did not mention—the league of central Europe. The world is virtually in two leagues now—the league against and the league for Germany—and it is in the worst war it ever knew.

The reservations and conditions are what need insistence in American thought. We pass so readily over them and so firmly grasp the main hope, the hope that a mechanism can be found which will absolve us from any further consideration of the essentials upon which national security, progress, dignity, and peace are founded. These essentials are and will remain our own national wisdom, determination, and courage, and our arrangements which can make these attributes effective and respected.

Lloyd George would not have the security of the British empire depend upon anything but the wisdom and strength of the British empire. It is not forbidden that the British empire, wise and strong, should enter any agreement which trustworthy nations wish to make for the stability of human conditions, but it does so with its strength, not in its weakness.

That is the idea to prevail in the United States. Our subscription to international agreement should be the subscription of a strong and not of a weak nation.

SNUBBING ART.

Free of charge, the Art institute has offered to the churches, public charities, and public schools of Cook county the use of its 19,000 magnificent lantern slides and as many superb photographs of works of art; yet there is only a languid response, especially on the part of the teachers. Why? Because they are unaware that the opportunity exists? More often the failure results from a widespread conviction that in wartime art can wait, and so it can, though at cost of serious difficulties after the war.

After the war will come an unexampled struggle for commercial advantage, and, as a considerable proportion of the world's manufactured products depend for their salability upon design, upon tastefulness, upon artistic excellence, and as such qualities spring from precisely the cultural influence the Art institute is trying to bring to bear through its loan of photographs and lantern slides the teachers should respond eagerly. Far from being indifferent to art interests in wartime, they should be keener than ever in wartime.

Moreover, the slides and photographs are not given out in definitely prearranged sets. They are not intended primarily to drag art in by the ears where it does not naturally and all but necessarily belong. Their principal aim is to illustrate the courses already being pursued. The æsthetic influence comes in secondarily, quite without obtrusiveness. A class, for example, has been studying Greek mythology. For the asking the teacher can obtain illustrations from the works of Pheidias, Scopas, and Praxiteles.

We should say to that teacher: "Wake up!" There is a large war raging, to be sure, but there will be a particularly large "war after the war," and it will last a long time, and now the chance is at hand to develop the elements of success in it. Meanwhile, when the general tendency of things is toward a more or less perceptible coarsening of life, especial need is apparent for promoting whatever tends toward its refinement.

LARGER FARMS.

[From the Prairie Farmer.]

Gen. Crowder is confronted with the heavy task of providing men for an enormous army. He does not intend to leave many hired men of draft age on the farm. He intends to leave only the number of farm managers that is actually necessary. It is quite likely that he may decide that the man who is managing a forty acre farm or even an eighty is not making full use of his ability, and that part of such men can be of more service in the army.

It looks as if it would be necessary to combine part of these small farms, at least for the duration of the war. Any good farm manager can handle at least 160 acres, with the assistance of some unskilled help, and this is the attitude the provost marshal general seems likely to take. This is something we must keep in mind in making our plans for next year.

LITERARY WAR WASTE

BY FRANK MOORE COLBY.

Mr. Colby is the author of "Imaginary Obligations" and "Constrained Attitudes" and is the editor in chief of the International Encyclopedia.

SEVERAL good British writers are apologizing because for one reason or another they cannot keep all their literary work on a war footing. Mr. Archibald Marshall, for example, author of a number of agreeable novels in the spirit of Anthony Trollope, thinks it necessary to notice the complaint of certain critics that his pleasant story about life in an English country house is an "anachronism"—presumably because no shells drop on it. He tries to reason with these monomaniacs, arguing that interest in quiet things is not obsolete even in war time and that a novelist may legitimately go on doing the sort of thing that he thinks he can do the best. It would seem to a sane person fairly obvious.

Reasonable people nowadays are not blaming novelists because their writings are not concerned immediately with war. On the contrary, they are rather saddened by the too palpable effects of the war on the work of many of their gifted contemporaries. From the point of view of man power it may be desirable to get a novelist into the war, but from the point of view of literary advantage it has been found after these four years' experience that it is often undesirable to get the war into a novelist. Of course, a regiment of novelists marching to the front, each determined to bring down a German, might be a cheering spectacle, but the sight of those novelists all marching home, each determined to bring out at least one war novel and possibly two, would be on the whole depressing.

For it is clear to any one who has looked into the matter at all closely that one of the disasters of the war is the fancied necessity of writing about it on the part of persons who are manifestly designed by nature for something else. On reading an article by Mr. Kipling, for example, it is impossible to escape the conclusion that the loss to letters is far more serious than the damage it did to the enemy's cause. Fill an author with a titanic theme and you do not make him titanic; you often merely burst him; and one can scarcely turn the pages of a serious magazine nowadays without stumbling over the ruins of what was once a man of letters. The fact that they have perished nobly does not console me for their having gone to pieces, nor do I think it unfair to raise the question whether they have perished needfully.

CONSIDER, for example, the case of Mr. G. K. Chesterton, who, I believe, has written against the Germans about once a week ever since the war began. Now, Mr. Chesterton's feeling toward the Germans is precisely my own and that of almost every one I know, and I need not say that any havoc he may have wrought among the Germans is welcome to me. I do not wish to see the Germans escape from Mr. Chesterton. But I should like to see Mr. Chesterton escape from the Germans if it is compatible with the public interest, and I raise the question whether, if he did so from time to time, many of them would after all really get away.

For naturally enough in writing constantly upon so monotonous a subject as the moral defects of this morally primitive people Mr. Chesterton has fallen into a sort of rudimentary routine. It is impossible to write against the German morals without being rudimentary, for you are addressing them, so to speak, from the threshold of civilized life. It is as if you were contemplating the original ape-man in circumstances so acute that even an anthropological interest in him was, for the moment, impossible.

The Germans are not a subject around which the imagination of a civilized man cares at the present time to play. As the daily news of pillage, rape, assassination, and mendacity arrive curiosity about them is soon sated and interest in them, though for the moment keen, is of so elementary a nature as hardly to admit of a varied literary expression. A rather coarse cartoon is a sufficiently delicate reply to the most subtle diplomatic language of a German statesman. In short, the entire situation from the moral point of view is, one may say, extremely crude.

So it happens that the monotonous succession of barbarities by which this morally backward people has made its presence felt each week has evoked from Mr. Chesterton each week a monotonous succession of ejaculatory moral sounds, which are no doubt suited to the nature of the subject, but which, I believe, could be just as competently rendered by a large number of persons, not one of whom could do certain valuable other things which Mr. Chesterton is capable of doing. And therein lies the waste. Of course Mr. Chesterton has acquired great facility. Waked up suddenly out of a sound sleep, he could begin instantly, "Another brutal aspect of the burning of babies alive is——" and finish the article almost mechanically. But I believe almost any one could be trained to find the brutal aspects of the burning of babies.

LET us suppose the Germans took another backward step—a step not difficult to imagine, and one that they might have taken ahead had the general staff thought it desirable. Suppose that proceeding logically from the kaiser's idea that "For me humanity is bounded by the Vosges," they actually regarded all people to the west of the Vosges, in common with other animals, as material for food and that cannibalism among them became as well established and as customary a thing as, say, the murder of a woman or a child.

The fact that the Germans eat their prisoners, let us say, receives among the allied nations all the attention that such a subject naturally would deserve. It is displayed everywhere on posters, noted in state messages, recorded in minute detail in the daily press, assumes its proportionate share in ordinary conversation—in short, takes firm hold of the common mind. In these circumstances it seems to me doubtful that any great amount of literary talent need be devoted merely to showing that the course of the Germans is objectionable.

The case against cannibalism need not be made out with any great skill and could be safely left to much more commonplace persons than Mr. Chesterton, Prof. Gilbert Murray, Maurice Donnay, M. Albert Capus, M. Pierre Loti, and many other essayists, novelists, playwrights, and scholars whose personalities at the present time are often not to be distinguished from any other portion of the newspaper. Sir Gilbert Parker need not send me and every one else in this office building a handsome, carefully prepared pamphlet answering the Hindenburg-Ludendorff defense of cannibalism on grounds of military necessity, and Mr. William Archer would not have to develop with any particular ability his reply to the philosophic contention of Prof. Oswald, Prof. Haeckel, and other leaders of German thought that the eating by Teutons of a non-Teutonic race was not be considered as cannibalism.

The argument of Count von Reventlow that cannibalism was the corollary of pan-Germanism, necessarily involved in the very conception of the Germanic absorption of inferior races, though admittedly logical, would probably not require an elaborate reply. And as more and more of our fellow citizens found their way to the German sideboard the less need there would be that the ablest men of letters of their time should devote their energies to the bald and iterative expression of anti-cannibal views. I do not mean that they should not write against cannibalism if they wished to. I merely mean that to judge by present analogies their longest essays might be less effective than the simple publication of a German bill of fare.

Mrs. Blunderby—Yes, he's awful restive. In fact, he's done nothing but rest since he graduated from college.—Boston Transcript.

THE CORNMEAL QUESTION.

THE corn crop of the United States is three times as large as the wheat crop. If we would eat one-third of the corn we could do without wheat entirely. In spite of the early frost and the poor quality of some of the corn in 1917 the year's yield was considerably above the average. The number of corn eating animals is less than it was in 1916. No corn is going into whisky and very little into beer. For all of these reasons more corn meal than usual is available for use as human food. Mr. Hoover has requested us to consume as little wheat as possible in 1918 and practically every one is responding to the request. Some are eating no wheat and others are living on less than they ever used before.

All of these reasons bring the corn meal question to the fore. It could easily supply the entire demand for a cereal food if it is found to be a wholesome food and the people take to it.

The corn grain consists of the outer or bran layer, the germ or sprouting part, and the endosperm or starchy part. Most of the starch is in the endosperm. Most of the fat is in the germ. The protein is found mostly in the germ and the endosperm. Most of the mineral is found in the bran, though the germ is fairly rich in it.

The germ from the standpoint of the plant is the essential part of the grain. It corresponds to the yellow in the egg. The endosperm, corresponding to the white of the egg, is the storehouse of food until it has thrown out roots to draw food from the soil and leaves to supply it from the air.

In a series of determinations made by Voegtlin and Myers it was found that whole corn grains had 3.62 per cent fat; corn grits, .48 per cent; corn meal, 1.41 per cent; corn germ, 23.79 per cent, and corn bran, 6.71 per cent. But in addition to the fat, proteid, and starch required, food to be wholesome must contain a good proportion of phosphoric acid and of two vitamines—a fat soluble substance necessary for growth and an anti-neuritic substance. Corn grains grown in different parts of the United States range in phosphoric acid from .57 per cent to .84 per cent, an average of .71 per cent. The analysis records fat soluble vitamines as "relatively high" and anti-neuritic vitamines as high in each case. Corn germ contained 2.81 per cent phosphoric acid and both vitamines "high." Corn bran had .786 per cent phosphoric acid and vitamines probably "high."

On the other hand, various varieties of corn meal had varying amounts of phosphoric acid, according to the amount of bran and germ contained. Corn grits (roller mill) from North Carolina only had 0.13 per cent phosphoric acid. Other figures from roller mill meals showed .17, .17, .18, .18, and .20 phosphoric acid, and vitamines recorded as "low" and "very low."

The phosphoric acid percentages in different runs from a Maryland roller mill show: Corn, whole grain, .80; corn germ, 2.57; corn bran, .69. Table meal, considerable bran and germ, .81. Table hominy, no bran or germ, .17; corn meal, no bran or germ, .16; corn flour, no bran or germ, .21.

In order to understand the meaning of this group of terms it is necessary to go back a little and learn something of the process of milling corn. Corn is sold on he basis of grades. The grading is determined according to the moisture content. Some of the grain, with some attention given to dirt, broken grains, immature grain, and other elements. In order to keep any length of time the corn grain must not contain more than 13 per cent moisture. If the grain as it reaches the elevators has more moisture than that it is kiln dried at a low temperature.

The country miller grinds the grain of his neighbors. He grinds the corn as it is brought to him. The custom is for the neighbor to measure a bushel of corn into the corn bin and then to receive a bushel of warm, freshly ground meal from the meal bin. The miller may even grind the neighbor's corn into meal and return him the meal made from his corn. The miller's charge is either the oven run on the meal or else a certain sum of money per bushel. Country ground meal is made by puttitng the grain through the stones without any other preliminary treatment. Therefore, country ground meal contains all of the germ bran and endosperm. It has the advantage of containing all of the chemical ingredients of the corn and the disadvantage of not keeping well.

The practice of what is known as the commercial corn millers is somewhat different. They buy graded corn as a rule. This, having been cleaned of any gross trash, is thrown into a vat and covered with water. The length of time in this vat and the temperature of the water varies with different millers. It is then scrubbed to remove the skin. This skin is the bran. Next the grain is dried to somewhere between 10 and 12 per cent moisture. Some of the millers dry at a low temperature around 120 for several hours, and others dry at a high temperature (about 205) for a shorter time. One object of the drying is to remove the excess of moisture and another is to kill molds and bacteria. The millers drying at high temperature claim, and I think correctly, that they pasteurize the grain and kill not only the bacteria and spores but also the ferments and sprouting principle in the germ. Next the grain is broken and the germ is removed. Some remove more of the germ and others less.

Then come the milling processes properly speaking. Roller mills are used and the meal is refined down somewhat after the methods of flour milling. The resulting products have certain trade names, but these have come to have a somewhat standardized meaning. Among these terms are standard cornmeal, bolted cornmeal, pearl meal, cream meal, hominy grits, and corn flour.

A third group of millers was sometimes known as the brewery millers. They went into business to grind meal for the breweries. These consumers wanted the maximum amount of starch, with a moderate amount of proteid, but with just as little fat and bran as possible. Meal containing much fat could not be made into beer. But the demand for meal for beer has practically ended. And the brewery millers are marketing their product as a meal for human consumption. Most of their product is known as corn flour, pearl meal, and hominy grits.

A fourth group temporarily in the business are the wheat millers who, cut short in their wheat grinding, are using some part of their plants for the grinding of corn. Right now the food administrator is trying to standardize corn meal. While the corn millers are working with the administrator they criticize the tentative standards adopted by the administrator on two counts. They say that some of the provisions as to fat and water in certain grades are not practicable. They also say that the government is being influenced too much by the advice of the old brewery millers.

And now, having spent a while on the technical and commercial end, let us come back to the physiological end. The starch in corn is the same in quantity as that in wheat or rye. The difference in quantity or proportion is of no consequence.

The proteins in corn are zein and maize glutelin. Osborn and Mendel showed that zein was not a complete protein and that animals fed on it exclusively did not thrive, but they also showed that maize glutelin was a complete protein capable of fully sustaining the bodily vigor of the test animals.

The general conclusion is that the corn proteids are practically, though not wholly, as good as those of wheat. But that is a matter of no great importance, as no person lives on bread alone. The diet is composed of bread, vegetables, fruit, meat, and milk, and whatever deficiency there may be in either the protein of wheat or corn is supplied by the other foods consumed at the same meal. In fact, the milk, butter, and eggs combined with flour in so many breads fully supply any deficiency.

In the light of these prevailing practices further discussion of the relative values of the proteids of wheat and corn are purely theoretical and without practical value. There is a difference, however, that is of practical importance. The wheat proteid is strong and holds gas in its meshes. Therefore it is possible to make a pound of wheat dough rise to a loaf of considerable size. The corn proteid has no physical strength. A pound of corn flour cannot be made to rise to a loaf of any size. The persons who know how to cook corn meal, therefore, do not try to imitate flour bread, but stick to the scone type of bread.

The fat of corn probably does not differ much from that of the wheat berry, though the constituents of fats have not been as closely studied as proteids have been. Southern corn contains nearly 9 per cent of fat. Northern corn contains about 4 per cent. Why it is that southern soils build up fats it is difficult to say, but the fact is that most vegetable oils—corn oil, cotton seed oil, and olive oil—are produced best by southern soils. Country corn meal contains all the oil of the corn grain. In the various milling processes various parts of the fat are removed, just as is the case with wheat flour. Wheat whole contains 2.74 per cent fat; patent flour has only 1.45. Whole northern corn contains 3.62 per cent fat, corn grits contain 0.48 per cent, and corn meal, 1.41 per cent.

Mixed in with the fat are the phosphoric acid and the vitamines. Since these important ingredients are also found in the bran, since the bran and fat are removed at the same time, we will discuss bran next and then come back to the question of the wholesomeness of corn meal from which these ingredients have been removed. The bran contains most of the mineral matter, the phosphoric acid, the vitamines, and the cellulose.

The millers say that the bran must be removed in order to remove the dirt, but especially to get rid of acids contained in it. If the germ is not removed practically wholly the flour will not keep long enough to stand export. To this some of the millers reply that most of the spoiling is due to lack of knowledge of the art by men new to the business. They claim that if the corn is pasteurized by heating to about 205 the germ is killed, the corn grain will no longer sprout, the ferments responsible for the production of acid will be destroyed, the bacteria and molds will be destroyed, and the meal will keep a long time, even though a good deal of the germ and bran and a moderately high amount of moisture are left us.

Scientists like Voegtlin and Myers of the United States public health service say that old fashioned country meal is a thoroughly good food, but that the highly milled products are not. They say "the highly milled products are without exception inferior in dietary value as regards growth to foods prepared from the whole grain." They found that white bread was not adequate to maintain normal growth in spite of the fact that it was prepared with some evaporated milk and yeast. Their opinion applies to wheat flour as well as corn flour. To this the millers reply that the growth principles can be gotten from milk, butter, lettuce, spinach, and vegetables generally, but that it is not feasible to market an easily spoiled product.

Sherman put a group of adults on corn bread. His study was extensive. He found that the eating of corn meal could be easily overdone, but that corn breads could replace wheat breads in the dietary with advantage. The general tenor of his article is that we should eat corn breads as preferred substitutes for wheat breads during this war and afterward. He suggests that we live on a dish in which at least one-third of all the calories are derived from corn. Corn meal, corn flakes, puffed corn, hominy, corn starch, corn oil, and corn sirup should all contribute to this diet list. Miss Monroe supplied him with a week's menu highly acceptable to housewives and consumers. A considerable part of this menu is made from corn meal. Lusk strongly indorses the use of corn meal.

This is the impression I get. First, consumers who can consume their supply within six weeks from the time it was milled should use old fashioned country make corn meal. It is more palatable, more nutritious, and has the growth principles.

Second, consumers who cannot get a fresh supply should use ordinary commercial meal. The more fat and bran contained the better.

Third, the millers could leave in more bran and fat than they do, have a better product, and one that would keep satisfactorily if they dried at higher temperatures.

DRINKING FOUNTAIN DISCONTINUED.

Chicago, Aug. 26.—[To the Friend of the People.]—The water fountain at Twelfth place and Jefferson street remains covered with a lid. It has not been open all summer. There is a school half a block away in the very heart of the Ghetto district, where a fountain is very necessary. Why is a drinking fountain denied the children? There is a pump at Twelfth and Jefferson streets, which would be an excellent place to put a porcelain pump too. A fountain in operation would be much appreciated by all the children in this district. H. C.

The fountain formerly located at this point was discontinued at the request of business men, who claimed that it was abused and diverted from its legitimate uses. Investigation develops the fact that its restoration is opposed by those doing business in that vicinity.

FORFEITS CITIZENSHIP.

Chicago, Aug. 26.—[To the Friend of People.]—If a naturalized citizen of the United States goes to a foreign country and remains there for five years does he forfeit his United States citizenship unless he reports at stated intervals to a diplomatic or consular representative of the United States? E. L. M.

The act of March 2, 1907, provides: The naturalization laws provide that when any naturalized citizen shall have resided for two years in the foreign state from which he came, or for five years in any other foreign state it shall be presumed that he has ceased to be an American citizen, and the place of his general abode shall be deemed his place of residence during said years; provided, however, that such presumption may be overcome on the presentation of satisfactory evidence to a diplomatic or consular officer of the United States.

BROADWAY PAVEMENT DELAYED.

Chicago, Aug. 28.—[To the Friend of the People.]—On Broadway, between Lawrence and Foster avenues, since the new curbing and water main were installed, the street is covered with loose dirt, which was left there after the paving bricks were put back in place. As the new paving is not to be put in immediately, cannot the city arrange to have this loose dirt swept up and hauled away at once? L. N.

This street is in the hands of paving contractor and work is delayed by the traction company. There is nothing that this bureau can do, as the street is at present out of our hands.

LEGALITY OF DIVORCE.

Chicago, Aug. 28.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A party divorced [illegible] outside of the state of Illinois was married in St. Louis two months before expiration of year. 1. Is marriage legal or must they have another ceremony performed? 2. If so, is license obtained in usual way? 3. Must he tell of the St. Louis marriage when applying for license? 4. There is a child by first marriage, which stepfather has taken absolute care of. What is the status of the child? G. T.

1. Probably legal, but we could advise to better advantage if you stated the state in which the divorce was secured and the ground.
2. Yes, and 3, no, if the marriage is valid.
4. We do not understand your question.

REQUEST FOR BACK RENT.

Chicago, Aug. 28.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Eleven months ago we moved from a flat. We were given five days' notice to get out, as the people who had bought the house wanted to move in. Our rent was paid up to the date of receiving notice, and as we had paid a plumber's bill during the winter the owner accepted payment. Now, after a lapse of eleven months, they have requested payment for the five days' rent. Can they collect this amount? H. [illegible]

The lapse of time would not be a defense but the other facts stated, if you can prove them, would.

Chicago, Aug. 28.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Is there a law in Chicago that protects goods that have been pawned? Where shall I complain about a pawnbroker who refuses to surrender my goods to me? F. [illegible]

1. Yes.
2. Try a policeman first. If that is ineffective, apply to the Legal Aid society, [illegible] Lake street.

HOMES FOR A NIGHT.

Chicago, Aug. 22.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I suggest a form of service to our enlisted men. There are, I am informed, over 40,000 boys at the Great Lakes station, most of whom are not residents of Chicago. These boys may have from twelve to thirty-six hours away from camp, and they look forward to their "leaves" with pleasurable anticipation. Yet despite all that is now being done by many private families in this direction it not infrequently happens that many of them are compelled to walk the streets until morning after they have left the dance, show, or home of their sweethearts. The Y. M. C. A. branches are often crowded, and many of the boys have not the money to pay for hotel accommodations. Even if they had they should not be permitted to do so. There are many homes where the spare room is rarely occupied, and what a compliment it would be to mothers of men in uniform everywhere if they knew their boys had assurance of a friendly welcome in some other mother's home!

Where the service flag is flown there is usually a bed which could be used by some soldier or sailor for a night, and what better tribute could one mother pay to another than to be for the time godmother to her son? Why not, then, adopt a distinctive emblem on the order of the service flag which could be displayed in the windows of homes willing to receive a boy for a night?

I am honored by having two sons in the service, and now that they are on foreign soil it is no small comfort to learn with what enthusiasm and friendliness they are being received by the mothers of France. I for one would gladly display a card in my window which would tell the jackie who calls on the girl next door that he may come and share our home for the night and receive a welcome and a good breakfast in the morning.

"HOW DRY IS A BONE!"

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 25.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—This question arose in the mind of a Louisville man who was contemplating a vacation trip to White Sulphur Springs and other points in West Virginia.

This gentleman is not what you would call bibulous or anything like that, but he likes his highball at eventide and his "nightcap" at bedtime.

He knew that West Virginia was a prohibition state, and he knew that the Reed "bone dry" law forbade the sending or taking of beverage liquor into a prohibition state.

Nevertheless, since hope springs eternal in the human breast, the Louisville man thought it might be a good idea to make inquiries in order to discover the amount of moisture in a bone.

So he sent some telegrams, and he received from the West Virginia tax commissioner a wire worded as follows:

"Persons allowed one quart within period of thirty days."

He figures that by taking his wife and three children and a quart for each of these and one for himself he can do ten days or two weeks of reasonably enjoyable fishing and golf.

In any case he knows now that a dry bone contains at least one quart of whisky.

THE RED STAR RELIEF.

Chicago, Aug. 28.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Permit me to thank you for calling attention to the important part the dumb beasts are playing in this war.

Miss Eleanor Jewett's spirited and informing column on art, always a delight—sending us off on many a pilgrimage to the shrines of art in general and to the Art institute in particular—was doubly delightful on Sunday, Aug. 18, with the skillful account of the splendid activities of the American Red Star Animal Relief—the first notice we have seen in our Chicago newspapers.

The Red Star Animal Relief, as Miss Jewett stated, was founded at the beginning of this frightful holocaust at Geneva, Switzerland, where the Red Cross originated, and with which organization it coöperated by sanction of the war department of the allied countries and our own government.

This worthy society—which is strong in the east and on the Pacific coast—is sadly in need of publicity in the great middle west, where to the masses it is practically unknown.

Would it be asking too much that one of your brilliant galaxy of cartoonists, Mr. McCutcheon, Mr. Orr, or Mr. Briggs, continue the good work by a telling cartoon which would do so much to help the cause?

We think of this a horseless war. On the contrary, over five million horses and mules have been employed by the allies, one and one-half million from America.

M. S. W.

ARE LEGISLATORS "ESSENTIAL"?

Chicago, Aug. 26.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Any group of leaders in [illegible] who will make laws to exempt themselves from the front trenches are not qualified to make laws to send our children to the trenches. The common people should rise in rebellion against such injustice.

Plenty of Thrills and Much to See at Big War Show

By Mme. X.

Of course you're going to the great war exposition which opens in Grant park tomorrow with one of the most imposing celebrations of Labor day ever gotten up in this country.

By the way, and begging labor's pardon for bringing it into a column supposedly devoted to the chronicling of lighter social matters, one of the proudest moments in the history of this country is the attitude of American labor towards the war. Its loyal support is one of our most impressive assets.

To return to the war exposition, fathered by the federal government, mothered by the State Council, and sponsored by our allies, it promises to be a most thrilling object lesson to instruct us noncombatants in the manner, methods, and machinery of modern warfare. Our army, navy, and workshops will all be on show, together with those of Great Britain, France, and Italy.

The Isla di Luzon, the Spanish gunboat which was sunk by Admiral Dewey in Manila bay and afterwards raised and brought here, will, with two other small warcraft, give mimic sea fights in the harbor just off Grant park. Trench warfare and bayonet charges will be features of each day's program. Soldiers and sailors will be bivouacked on the lake front. Airplanes will soar and swoop over the field; tanks will charge across it, and inside the big building every kind of fighting implement, every part of an army's equipment will be on exhibit, so that the people of this country can see what their money is going for and what modern warfare means.

Captured Trophies Shown.

Not the least interesting feature will be the battle trophies taken from the enemy—the guns, big and small; the trench knives, helmets, water bottles, uniforms, hand grenades, revolvers, and so on. All the forms of succor, too, will be shown—ambulances, field hospitals, stretchers, first aid outfits, and other equipments.

The Art institute will be an annex to the exposition. It will be open free during the entire two weeks. There one may see over six hundred paintings, etchings, and illustrations which have been done by eighty-five artists all during periods between active service on the battle line.

The French government has charge of the exhibit and sponsors it as a means of helping the artists of France. The pictures will all be on sale and the proceeds from their sale, which is in charge of Arthur T. Aldis, will go directly to the artists' families.

On Lafayette's birthday, Friday, which is official French day at the exposition, there will be a large reception at the Art institute. Mrs. Arthur Meeker is chairman of the reception committee and she has chosen some of the most loyal French devotees in the city to help her.

Take it altogether it is the most important and impressive exhibit of the kind ever undertaken, and Chicago is the only place where it will be assembled in toto. At the close of its stay here it will be split up and sent in detachments all over the country. So, every one within Chicago's wide radius—and Chicago is the hub of an enormous wheel—should make a point of visiting the war exposition.

It will make it much easier to visualize the accounts of the achievements of our men and those of our allies if we know what their implements and equipments look like. Besides, the orgy of sound—the blaring of brass bands, the boom of cannon, the rattle of machine guns, and the gigantic hum of airplanes—will minister to that love of excitement innate in us all.

Thousands See Sailors Drill.

It is this thirst for thrills that throngs all the roads leading to the Great Lakes Naval Training station every Wednesday, when the American public, 40,000 strong, swarms to the station to watch the great drill with which Capt. Moffett—one of the most extraordinary personalities of today—punctuates the big work being done there in turning raw recruits into an efficient fighting machine.

No matter how often one is a spectator of the scene, it never loses its impressiveness. The perfection of the rows of white clad, black belted sailors makes them at a little distance like paper sailors. The superb, enormous Sousa made band of nearly a thousand pieces is a never ending source of delight as, led by that extraordinary figure, its drummest drum major, it parades up and down the big drill ground.

Each Wednesday, after the drill, there's a numerous exodus to the open air amphitheater, three-quarters of a mile distant, where, in the bottom of a steep sided ravine, Capt. Moffett has had constructed the prettiest boxing stage you ever saw. A little lagoon, crossed by rustic bridges, surrounds the platform, while seats to the east, south, and west rise, tier on tier, to the brink of the ravine high above, accommodating—well, it looks like thousands of spectators.

Pull Off Lively Bouts.

The boxers are men at the station who have had what they consider sufficient training to qualify them for these public exhibitions. There's some pretty punching there on occasions, lively, spirited, and good humored.

From the point of view of a tyro, an utter outsider, we would like to suggest that the man who faces his opponent with a smile has an initial advantage of some importance. In fact, any enterprise, however strenuous, that is approached with a smile is half won.

These boxing matches at the station are turned to account later when the men are in active service. If a couple of men on board ship quarrel and come to fisticuffs, their officers separate them and later summon them to open combat, when, with gloves on and before their comrades, they are obliged to fight it out to a finish, according to the Marquis of Queensberry rules.

The prospect of this ordeal keeps down many a rising temper. It is called "the grudge fight" and is a regularly recognized institution.

Lovely North Shore Gardens.

It is with a pang that we bid farewell to summer. Turning on the threshold of September to look back over the last three months the vision arises of some of the lovely gardens which adorn the country near Chicago. The classic perfection of Mrs. Edward Ryerson's garden, with its dark background of cypresses, its fountains, pergolas, and balustrades, its exquisite color schemes and general atmosphere of mellow tranquillity lingers in the memory.

There's nothing on the north shore, however, more full of a sort of mournful romance, poetry, and beauty than Mrs. Harold McCormick's lovely estate. It's like an enchanted place. A deserted, disheveled road leads to it. There is no sign of life in the palatial service court, except for crooning doves in a nearby dovecote.

Penetrating to a quite royal looking plaza to the west of the house one is still further impressed with the silence, the absence of all human life, yet the graveled road is exquisitely swept and smooth; the grass is close clipped and velvety, there's not a fallen leaf to mar the immaculate order. Over the gardens to the south, with their brilliant flowers and mirroring pools, there broods a profound quiet. Even the goldfish hardly move among the water lilies. The house—the architect, Charles Platt's, masterpiece, a perfect example of Italian renaissance—stands as if spellbound, its blue-green shutters closed like tired eyelids.

If you walk down that matchless, broad, green, tree-bordered plaisance which stretches southward to the Greek temple tea house at the further end, you step softly and speak in whispers, obsessed with the feeling that the whole place is wrapped in a magic sleep from which a loud word might waken it, and who would take the responsibility of such awakening?

Many Shades of Green.

Of an especial charm is Mrs. Charles B. Pike's green garden, where a central pool reflects only different shades of green—cypress, cedars, arbor vitæ, fir balsams, etc. A most cool and lovely spot it is, and entirely Mrs. Pike's design.

A broad grassy terrace, bordered on three sides by white walls, balustrades, and statues, stretches from the house itself to the rim of the steep bluff which hangs over the lake. With rare tact Mrs. Pike has left the lake edge of this terrace free so that the green turf cuts across the water's varying blues. Standing on this brink, one sees far down below Mrs. Pike's beach garden, set in the sands and protected by a high brick wall.

What lovely color effects some of these gardens leave indelibly imprinted on the memory! Who that saw it in the late June will ever forget Mrs. Robert Dunham's masses of blue delphinium, marching around three sides of a grassy inclosure, while a foreground of heliotrope and adjuratum gave a touch of French artist would have welcomed?

Mrs. "Billy" Scott's garden, in Hubbard Woods, as it blazed out perfume and color in mid-July, is something for the mind to dwell on when come next winter's black fogs. Mrs. Hugh McBirney's Alhambresque terraces, with their long pools, crossing sprays, little rose trees, and close clipped hedges, all bathed in moonlight, is one of the summer's loveliest pictures, as is Mrs. Clyde Carr's green glade, where purple heliotrope is the only touch of contrasting color.

Verily, it is with a sigh we bid goodby to summer.

Help Entertain Soldiers.

The women of the One Hundred and Forty-ninth Field Artillery War Relief are giving their services to the hostess' committee at the Soldiers and Sailors' club in West Washington street. Under Mrs. William Wroe's leadership they plan to take charge of one Sunday a month there, when they will provide supper for 500 men and later in the evening a musical program ending with a first rate "movie." Mrs. Sabin of Battery F is giving her services to see that the supper is on hand and sufficient.

The club is in need of books, magazines, chinaware, sofa pillows, and comfortable chairs—especially the last named. Any one who can contribute some of these articles will meet an eager and grateful reception from the club managers.

The war has its humorous aspects. The chaplain of a French regiment, the Fourth infantry, I think it was, with which some American troops were brigaded, tried to get into conversation with our doughboys, but neither his English nor their French bridged the chasm. Suddenly, being an Alsatian, he bethought him of the outlawed German language, which proved an entirely adequate lingual medium.

Similarly a French officer who spoke no English came recently to Chicago, and, hunting for a hotel with a French name, chose the La Salle. Arrived there, he was dismayed to find that in spite of its Gallic name no one spoke French there. In vain he explained his requirements—he was the advance courier of a famous French general—until he tried German, when instantly every one, desk clerk, porter, bell boys, understood and served him.

It seems as if it were time to introduce a more complete study of the French language. It is the most beautiful, musical spoken language in the world today.

News and Comment of MOTORDOM Conducted by SHEPPARD BUTLER

3,000,000 Cars, and Nothing to Do 'til Tomorrow

DON'T DRIVE TODAY!

The United States fuel administration requests—but for the present does not order—that no gasoline propelled vehicles be used on Sundays until further notice in the states east of the Mississippi river, with the following exceptions:

1. Tractors and motor trucks employed in actual transportation of freight.

2. Vehicles of physicians used in performance of professional duties.

3. Ambulances, fire apparatus, police patrol wagons, undertakers' wagons, and conveyances used for funerals.

4. Railway equipment using gasoline.

5. Repair outfits employed by telephone and public service companies.

6. Motor vehicles on errands of necessity in rural communities where transportation by steam or electricity is not available.

OBSERVANCE of the fuel administration's request that there be no Sunday driving of automobiles beginning today should produce what in many ways will be our most impressive visualization of the fact that we are at war.

The great concentrations of soldiers at the camps are seen by comparatively few. Lightless nights and wheatless meals have become little considered habits. But the spectacle of city boulevards and country roads abruptly denuded of their customary tide of motor cars will be something to remember.

A recent estimate fixes 3,300,000 as the approximate number of automobiles in the states east of the Mississippi, the territory specified in the request. Most people own but one car, and the number of machines that are permitted to operate is inconsiderable; it probably would be fair to say that something like 3,000,000 individual owners are affected.

And since most people drive on Sunday and most people take at least three passengers with them, this means that 12,000,000 persons or more face today the patriotic duty of making a radical change in their Sunday habits.

Trying to estimate the amount of gasoline that will be saved is futile business. Fuel administration officials think it will be 8,000,000 gallons each Sunday. That would be about two and one-half gallons per car, which probably is near enough for a random guess. Many cars use less than a gallon and a half in making a thirty mile afternoon drive.

Chicago, judging from advance indications, will be a city of the dead today as far as motoring is concerned. Car owners hereabouts have accepted the no-driving request as a mandate; that some have made an ill-advised attempt to alter it makes no difference. With a few possible exceptions, Chicagoans simply won't drive.

If there are exceptions they will be watched, and presumably reported. The question of what shall be done about the gasoline supply has been put squarely up to the motorist. If he doesn't accept the patriotic duty outlined for him more drastic measures will be taken—probably the rationing of gasoline through the issuance of fuel cards.

On the other hand, if the request is cheerfully and universally complied with, there is every reason to suppose that it will be rescinded in due time. A Standard Oil official told THE TRIBUNE last week that "there's oceans of gas." And the fuel administration's talk is of building up a reserve, not of facing a shortage.

Meatless days and workless Mondays are no more. Driveless Sundays surely won't last forever. Meanwhile, the only thing to do is to leave the car in its garage and be cheerful about it.

Roadsters in Demand.

Roadsters have come into their own and the increasing demand for roadsters over touring cars is reported to be causing embarrassment to automobile dealers in various parts of the country. Many firms are buying them for their traveling salesman owing to the curtailment of railroad service.

The Experts Say?

ONE of the commonest mistakes in driving is the "riding" of the clutch, which perhaps a majority of operators indulge in. If the foot is kept constantly on the clutch pedal, even though lightly, the action causes rapid wear of the clutch thrust bearing, and clutch slipping. If the clutch is of the cone variety the facing is worn excessively, while in the disk clutch in oil the extra heat tends to thin the oil and permits grabbing. Drivers should keep off the clutch except when it is to be operated.

Every tire has embossed on the side a serial number. It is important that the car owner should have a record of this number in each case and such record should be made when the tire is bought. Not only is it desirable to have this record for adjustments with the company, but in case of theft possession of the serial record is often a valuable aid to the police. It is a fine habit to form, this recording the numbers of all tires bought.

When the engine runs jerkily the obvious cause is carburetor trouble. To locate the trouble prime the carburetor and watch for dripping. If there is no dripping, the trouble lies between the tank and the float valve. If there is free dripping, the trouble may be looked for between the float valve and the engine cylinder.

Many car owners are finding that oil cups may be substituted for the grease cups commonly used in many locations on the chassis, with eminently satisfactory results. The oil cup need be filled but once a month, perhaps, and it needs no turning down to perform its function. However, where the grease cup is mounted horizontally and an oil cup is to be substituted, some sort of connection will be needed to keep the oil cup straight.

It is possible to tell just how successful the operation of grinding valves has been by the following simple process: Mark the face of the valve all around lightly with a soft lead pencil. Then place the valve in position, turn it on its seat for a few minutes and remove it. If the entire pencil marking is removed, there is contact all around, but if anything is left, the point where the face and seat do not meet is readily apparent.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS by HIGH SPEED

Will you please publish in your question and answer column the best route from Chicago to Valparaiso, Ind., together with the mileage and condition of the roads? O. P. J. Chicago.

Go through South Chicago, edge of Hammond, East Chicago, Calumet, Grasselli, Hessville, Highland, Hobart, and Wheeler to Valparaiso, a distance of fifty-two miles. This route will be found much superior to the Lincoln highway route, which is in rough condition.

I am having a lot of trouble with my magneto and I am thinking of putting in another system instead of getting the magneto fixed up. What do you think? The mechanics fix it and it runs all right for a while and then it goes bad again in another place. I have had it four years now and I think it is all in. T. L., Chicago.

You might have the factory fix up the magneto for you, but if you insist upon installing a new system you can use another magneto, or get a battery system, which is cheaper. I presume you have a battery in the car for lighting.

NEWS OF THE CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS

WOMEN IN WARTIME.

Still the call comes for more magazines of the last three months' issues to be sent to the boys in training near Chicago. Besides the thousands at the Great Lakes, Rockford, and Camp Custer there are calls from the Soldiers and Sailors' club, from the municipal pier, and from the boats on the great lakes. The Collegiate Periodical league will take care of the shipping of magazines if they are left on the first floor of the Randolph street side of the public library. If you have fifty or more current ones telephone Central 5822 and they will be called for.

The Daughters of the British Empire will present in their booth at the United States government exposition in Grant park a series of tableaux demonstrating the rally of the various British countries to the need of the empire in its great battle for freedom and justice and the war relief work of the Daughters in their war relief shop, 1202 Stevens building.

The woman's aid hospitality group, under war camp community service, will give a dance and entertainment at the Art institute on Labor day for soldiers and sailors. Mrs. Leo Heller will be hostess. The hours are from 7:30 to 11:30.

The splendid recreation work for soldiers and sailors which has been carried on all summer at Ravinia park by the women of the Ravinia club in cooperation with the war camp community service is to be continued for the fall months. Next Saturday and Sunday evenings a show will be given at the opera pavilion by the Great Lakes Vaudeville company, the proceeds to go toward the food and equipment for the recreation work during the fall months. Tickets are on sale at the park for the show. The war recreation board of Illinois has voted an appropriation of $2,500 for the continuation of the work.

Jellies and jams are part of the farewell dinners given sailors on the eve of their departure from Great Lakes now that the Junior Jackies of Evanston have been allowed to be the donors, buying the fruits, sugar, and sirups with their pocket money and taking the supplies to the Evanston conservation kitchen in the domestic science school, where their mothers do the canning. These women, under the supervision of Miss Katherine Livingston, have done up 4,500 jars of fruits and vegetables, part of which will provide charitable institutions with their winter supply of preserves, and the rest has been sold.

The Khaki and Blue club will have a dance tomorrow evening. Box luncheons will be provided by women of the war camp community service to serve 2,000 men in uniform. Other hospitality centers in the loop will also be open to the fighting men tomorrow, and they may get their invitations as they do on Saturdays at the Soldiers' and Sailors' club, 207 West Washington street.

"The Daughters of War Camp Community Service" is the title of the newest group of war workers—the young girls who help in the entertainment of the uniformed men at various dances and parties. Every young woman over 18 engaged regularly in some branch of the community service is eligible for membership. She is required to take a pledge "to treat every young man in the uniform of the United States as a brother in the service, to honor him for his gift to his country, and not to lower his ideal of womanhood by frivolous or insincere conduct."

The Marquis Eaton Red Cross honor banner has been won by Mrs. Waldemar Veazie, chairman of the north half of the Thirty-second ward. Mrs. Veazie completed the canvass of housewives in her section of the city within the original time limit Aug. 15, going over the top with 180.33 percentage of quota. A second flag is to be presented by Mr. Eaton to the ward chairman turning in the largest number of signed pledges and for this honor Mrs. H. L. Hartenstein of the Twenty-fifth ward and Mrs. W. H. Wright of the Thirty-third ward are competing. The contest closes on Tuesday. The suburban drive has been extended to Sept. 15.

NATIONAL Paramount and Artcraft WEEK

It is just as important to project the right sort of pictures "over here" as to fire the right sort of cartridges "over there"

More than a year after the United States entered the War, America's motion picture industry finds itself stronger, more favored, more necessary than ever before.

The motion picture's mightiest task is to keep up the morale of the folks at home—it is the national amusement, filling an urgent human need.

The organization behind Paramount and Artcraft pictures is dedicated to two purposes—to help keep up the spirit of America and to perpetuate and refine the art of the motion picture.

Twenty million photo-play lovers and many thousands of theatres demand Paramount and Artcraft pictures every week because they are better pictures.

This week, you can go to any of the better theatres, anywhere, any day, or every day, and be sure of a good, clean, wholesome, heartening show all through, every minute. Drama, adventure, comedy, travel—the program will be made up of Paramount and Artcraft features, and very little else besides. Such programs as those set out below are typical.

After this week is over you will know it is Paramount and Artcraft that have made "better motion pictures" familiar to you:—"Foremost stars, superbly directed, in clean motion pictures."

WOMEN IN WARTIME.

Personally conducted "gallery tours" will be an interesting feature of the exhibition of the woman's committee at the war exposition opening tomorrow in Grant park. Mrs. B. F. Langworthy will be in charge of a number of guides supplied by the speaker's bureau of the woman's committee, State Council of Defense, who will take guests on a sightseeing trip to the various booths where the women's activities will be demonstrated. Women who will assist are Mrs. W. S. Hefferan, Mrs. Russell Opdyke, Mrs. Ellwood Mattson, Mrs. Edward Fleming, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, and Mrs. Edward H. Taylor.

Chicago and Illinois are preparing to make a gift to France of a hospital as a permanent commemoration of Chicago gratitude. Everybody will be asked to give $1, or even a dime, towards building a hospital for crippled soldiers and sailors adrift after the war ends, in a great public dollar campaign and tag day on Tuesday, Sept. 24. The officers and directors of the Chicago Hospital foundation are: President, Dr. C. N. Johnson; first vice president, Dr. Truman W. Brophy; second vice president, Mrs. Frank Sayre Cowgill; treasurer, Mrs. Archibald Freer; secretary, Miss Margaret M. Williamson.

Miss Agnes Nestor, Miss Mary Anderson, and Miss Mary Van Kleek, all of the Woman's Trade Union league, work in Washington and they are soon to be joined by Miss Melinda Scott of New York, who has been chosen as special representative of the United States employment service attached to the women's service in the administrative offices in Washington. Miss Scott is well known among Chicago workers.

The courses of instruction department of the woman's committee, State Council of Defense, will hold a meeting in the library at 120 West Adams street on Wednesday at 3:30 o'clock. Mrs. William S. Hefferan will preside.

Will all families who have entertained soldiers and sailors in their homes please send a card giving the number of men each month to Mrs. John C. Roth, chairman of the home hospitality committee of war camp community service, so that as a matter of civic pride a more complete record can be kept of how many fighting men are entertained in homes in Chicago? Boston's record for five months is 5,637 men. Chicago's estimate is 1,000 each Sunday.

The College club will open on Tuesday, when Red Cross work and other war aid activities will be resumed. There will be surgical dressing, sewing, and knitting for the Red Cross.

An appeal is made for more magazine covers suitable for decorating the utility bags manufactured at the Woman's committee workroom, 309 Venetian building. The workroom is maintained to give employment to women past 40.

A conservative estimate of the money collected last Monday for Belgian babies is $60,000. This triples the amount which has been collected in any other city.

Tickets for the four card parties to be given Sept. 10 at the South Shore Country club by the women of the Eighteenth exemption district are selling fast. The four parties will be given for the benefit of the men in the service from that district.

Would You Marry This Man?

He had struggled from earliest youth to keep his mother and himself in comfort. He had no time to acquire an education, but through inventions had accumulated a fortune. Then he met Kate Bates, who had run away from the farm to teach school. He courted her—she loved him. On Sunday he would ask her, but in the meantime he wrote a letter that showed clearly his lack of education.

What did Kate do? What would you have done?

Gene Stratton-Porter has never before woven so sweet a story of love, so intense a struggle against circumstances, so great and big a story of self-sacrifice. You must read "A Daughter of the Land"—the one big book of the season.

WHEAT!

This is the most favorable time to buy wheat land in the Northwest, and the Davidson District is the most favorable place. The high price for wheat, oats, and barley is having its effect on land values, and when we market our 1918 crop, which promises to be a bumper, land prices are going to jump.

Our proposition is ideal for actual settlers, but nonresidents can own a farm under our plan and we will look after your farming interests. People of moderate means can get a start toward independence. You know that the farmer is getting high prices for everything, and you can increase your income materially by farming yourself.

Don't kick about high prices for food. Get busy and produce some yourself. A card will bring, by mail, full information with a book of fine views of farming in Western Canada.

FOR SALE—THE INCOME OF $2,420 PER annum from a ten acre commercial Grape Fruit Grove at Lakeland, Florida, will enable yourself and family to spend your winters in Florida, amid its sunshine and flowers without drawing on your other sources of income.

FOR SALE—

LAND AGENTS, REAL ESTATE MEN, SPECULATORS AND INVESTORS.

WE own and control about 50,000 acres of Minnesota cutover lands, recently released by large lumber companies. Some of this is very choice farming land and balance is excellent for grazing purposes. Some of it is traversed by railroad and state auto road, and all within a few miles of railroad. Country just beginning to develop, farms and sheep ranches being improved. Land will increase rapidly in value.

Get men interested to form a syndicate and we will send a man to help you close. This land will sell after the war at double its cost today. Live men now ready to contract to retail this land at 50% above cost if we will sell them fifteen months' option, but circumstances compel us to sell now.

We have one tract of 10,400 acres fine farming land, close in, will divide this. There is a fortune in it. Have grazing tracts as follows: 5,480 acres, 8,500, 3,000, 1,600, and 1,400 acres. These are very cheap. Here is a chance of a lifetime. Send for booklet, prices, and terms, stating number of acres you can syndicate.

while you are now earning more money than you ever did before, for the time when you will earn less. The war has made high prices, with plenty of steady work to more than offset the increased cost of living, so that most men who are working are able to save for the days to come.

SO, those who are wise are looking ahead to the time when the war is over, munition plants shut down, and our vast armies come flocking home. Then there will be several men to each job instead of the present conditions of several jobs to each man.

ENGLAND foresees the "after the war" conditions and is buying up large estates to divide up for her soldiers to cultivate when they return, instead of letting them go to their home communities, where they could not find employment. England realizes that a great number of unemployed men means hard times for all and a panicky condition.

BUT, so long as there are people there will be a demand for farm products and no panic can bankrupt a piece of good farm land.

MR. DAY WORKER and farm renter, plant your dollars in hardwood land in Kalkaska or Antrim counties, Michigan. Raise clover, grain, alfalfa, stock, truck, fruit, as this district is adapted to all kinds of farming, being located in Michigan's Fruit Belt, and under the beneficial climatic influences of Lake Michigan.

GET 10, 20, 40, 60, 80 or more acres for $15 to $30 per acre on terms made to suit your earning capacity. No taxes to settlers for five years. Money loaned to make improvements. Farm advisers free. Insurance while you are paying for the land and other inducements, all told in our big free 60 page booklet, mailed on request.

WRITE for our SPECIAL excursion dates. Railway fare will be allowed on your purchase. Come and see what is being grown and what you can do to help feed the boys over there. Call at our offices any week day, Monday evening or Saturday afternoon.

Here's What to Do to Save Fuel When the Temperature Gets Low Enough for a Furnace Fire.

HOW fuel economy at home will warm a shivering boy in France is indicated in rules for handling hot air furnaces, steam and hot water plants, as well as kitchen ranges, which were given out yesterday by the fuel administration. The majority of living rooms are overheated, according to these rules, which are as follows:

"Keep the temperature of sitting rooms at 68 degrees or less.

"Rooms where you do not sit are more comfortable if much cooler, provided the air is kept a little moist.

"Get a good thermometer. Hang it inside, not outside.

"It is wasteful to allow the temperature to drop way down at night.

"Turn off heat in unused rooms whenever possible.

"Always keep two pans, or open top jars of fresh water on radiators or in front of registers to keep the air moist.

"Be sure there is a check draft damper in the stove pipe besides the turn damper.

"The turn damper should fit the smoke pipe loosely and should never be entirely closed.

"Make use of the damper in the coaling door only to let oxygen in to consume gases, if you are using soft coal.

"Just enough draft, and that from below, checking the draft by letting more air into the smoke pipe, is one of the best general rules.

"To make the fire burn more rapidly do not open the ashpit door, but only the damper in the door.

"All heat pipes in the cellar should be wrapped to prevent loss of heat.

"A short, quick stroke of the shaker handle will sift ashes through the grate.

"Clean ash pit daily.

"Avoid poking and slicing fire bed.

"Never shake a fire that is low until you have put on a little fresh coal and allowed it to ignite. A thin fire wastes coal.

"Storm windows and weather strips economize heat."

ROME DECORATES FORMER CLERK IN LOOP STORE

Some eighteen months ago Arthur Meyer was a clerk in the furniture department of Marshall Field retail. Today he is a hero, decorated by the Italian government.

ARTHUR MEYER

It was during Gen. Joffre's visit to Chicago. The French commander was the guest of Mrs. R. T. Crane. Mrs. Crane one day dropped into the furniture department at Field's. Becoming acquainted with the polite young salesman who waited on her, she discovered that the young man's heart was "over there."

"I have just fitted out four ambulances," said Mrs. Crane. "Would you like to drive one for me?"

"Would I?" said the young furniture salesman, "just give me a chance and see."

The result was young Meyer was driving an ambulance for the French some time before his country had taken up arms. When the United States came in Meyer joined the American expeditionary force. Wounded at Verdun, he spent seven weeks in a military hospital. This was followed by three months spent in an aviation assembly plant in Paris, after which he reënlisted, this time in the Italian ambulance corps.

After the battle of Piave Meyer was decorated by the Italian government for gallantry on the field. In a recent letter to his mother he gives a vivid description of that battle.

"Some hours later I walked over a portion of the fought-over wheat fields and vineyards, and from all appearances the battle must have been a real old fashioned one. The dead Austrians lay around by the hundreds in the ditches, behind trees and vines, in the stream, and, most pathetic of all, in little holes that they had hurriedly dug. Such sights I never hope to see again.

"The Italians were wildly enthusiastic to see us up so close, and the shoulder patting and cries of 'Bravo, Americano!' made me feel like a real hero."

Churches Seek Remedy for Bad Housing Conditions

The joint committee of the churches of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America is seeking a remedy for bad housing conditions as related to munition and other industrial centers, according to the Rev. Charles Stelzle, head of the department of labor in the council.

"An investigation has been carried on by a staff of workers to ascertain conditions and their remedy," the report says, "with the result that in the forty-one centers investigated by the war-time commission and in twenty-four ordance reservations brought to the attention of the commission by the chief of ordnance indicate that in twenty-six of these communities there were important housing problems.

"Overcrowding is appalling. Two rooms in one tenement in one of the communities investigated were occupied by fourteen beds and twenty-four men in day and night shifts.

"In Newark there is a steel mill employing 28,000 men, a munition plant with 10,000 men and 6,000 women employed. The population has increased 100,000 in a few months."

The joint committee of the churches on war production communities has as officers: John M. Glenn, chairman; W. T. Demarest, treasurer; and the following secretaries—the Rev. Worth M. Tippy, the Rev. Alfred W. Anthony, and the Rev. Howard R. Gold.
